IT ISN'T EASY

There's no use fooling about this job. It offers fine opportunities for rapid advancement and a satisfying and successful career, but they have to be earned. They won't come automatically.

They are opportunities that can be realized only if you are young, enthusiastic, keenly interested in sports and have a definite aptitude for writing about them.

It will be a waste of time to inquire about this job unless you are confident you have what it takes to begin as a junior sports reporter and mature quickly into a sports editor and columnist — unless you have a positive flair for this sort of work, plus a minimum of Grade X standings.

But if you feel sure enough to seek the kind of career that can be achieved through this job, arrange an interview by telephoning Wallace Ward, managing editor, Guardian-Evening Patriot, Phone 4-8506.
