That Dynamite Sensation.

HOW AN ANTI-SCOTT ACT OPERATOR WAS TRAPPED.

On the arrival of the Grand Trunk train from Petrolia, at Sarnia, Ont., on the evening of the 24th, an arrest took place which created a sensation in the town. In Sarnia on the 9th of June last, an attempt was made to blow up the residence of Mr. J. G. McCrae, and to burn down that of Mr. Thomas Houston, both of whom have been conspicuous workers in the temperance cause, and energetic supporters of the Scott Act. Dynamite and nitro-glycerine was supposed to have been used. Mr. McCrae's family had a narrow escape. Up to the night of the arrest it was supposed by the people of Sarnia that the perpetrators of this dastardly act would never be found out, it being generally understood that the Attorney-General had given up the case; but it was not so. The matter was placed in the hands of Government Detective Rogers for investigation, and the latter immediately set to work, and after looking into the surroundings, decided upon what course he should pursue. He sent a clever assistant to work in with the suspected parties, but, after spending three weeks in the neighborhood, he discovered that his identity had become known. Detective Rogers thereupon withdrew him, and immediately sent another competent assistant to take his place. After spending forty days in company with the suspected parties this assistant received a pointer that led to the arrest. It appears that one Charles A. Hand, who runs a hotel in Sarnia, known as the Rossin House, told Detective Rogers the particulars of the explosion, giving the names of the parties directly implicated, including himself. He told who had been employed to fire the fuse, and that the dynamite used was got in Detroit. The assistant became quite friendly with Hand, being a boarder at his hotel. During the time which Detective Rogers spent in Sarnia he was in constant communication with his assistant, which was never suspected. This assistant, who sailed under the name of Billy Armstrong, was arrested for disobeying a summons to give evidence in a Scott Act case and fined $50. This, however, was simply to deceive the people with whom he was working. A few days ago Inspector Palmer summoned several hotel-keepers in town for selling liquor contrary to the Canada Temperance Act. One of the parties summoned was Hand. Hand immediately decided to give the Scott Act Inspector a taste of dynamite, and offered Rogers' assistant $25 to fire the cartridge, at the same time stating that he had dynamite cartridges at Petrolia, together with detonators, all of which were ready for use. The assistant allowed Hand to pursue his course, and on the 24th accompanied him to Petrolia by the noon train for the purpose of getting the cartridges. Rogers saw his assistant and Hand leave. The arrangement was that they should return the same night. Rogers got the assistance of the local police and waited at the station for the train, which arrived about two hours late. As it steamed into the station Hand stepped to the platform carrying under his arm a cigar box wrapped in a newspaper. Rogers immediately accosted him and told him he was wanted. Hand then made a pass to get rid of the cigar box, but Rogers grabbed it and the prisoner immediately weakened; the assistant was also arrested, but this was only for the purpose of keeping up the deception which had been carried on for the past two months. Both were immediately driven to the gaol and searched. The cigar box contained two half-pound dynamite cartridges and a piece of fuse. While going from the station to the gaol Hand admitted to the detective that he was in Sarnia on the night of the explosion, but refused to say anything more, saying that he was "too fly." Both Hand and Detective Rogers' assistant, who was arrested with him, were locked in a cell together. It seems to have been Hand's intention to blow up Inspector Palmer's residence. During the progress of the work of the detectives, Inspector Palmer, Mr. McCrae, the County Crown Attorney, Mr. Julius Bucke, and another, were the only parties who knew what was going on. Mr. Palmer, however, was somewhat uneasy lest there should be a slip which would result in his being blown up with dynamite, but Hand had not a chance to carry out the terrible scheme with which he is credited. The Scott Act supporters are delighted at the result of the clever work of Detective Rogers and his assistant, and the Government is receiving great praise for its action in the matter.

Consumption Can be Cured.

Not by any secret remedy, but by proper healthful exercise, and the judicious use of Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites, containing the healing and strength-giving virtues of these two valuable specifics in their fullest form. Prescribed universally by physicians. Take no other.

A Missouri cow has died from chewing tobacco. A cow is bigger than a man, but can't stand as much cud.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain; and the little shrub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind.

"What is love?" asked a lady contributor. It is that for which scores of young men have been kicked over the threshold of the front door, and through the garden gate.

Mr. Matthew Arnold on Free Schools.

The privileges of popular education have been so long enjoyed in this country as a part of our system of government that they are accepted with as little thought as the air we breathe. It is difficult to understand that in England the free public school, as we have it here, not only does not exist, but its establishment is advocated by only a few, and then with extreme timidity. Under the last Tory administration Mr. Matthew Arnold was designated to make a study of the free school systems of the Continent. He devoted four months to investigation, and now, the Government in the meantime having twice changed hands, his report is printed. The countries which have a free school system are Germany, Switzerland and France. In the first-named, although the law prescribes free education, it is only in Berlin and a few other favored districts that the authorities can afford to comply with the law. Mr. Arnold, found the Minister of Education warmly in favor of making the schools free in practice as they are in theory, and Bismarck is of the same way of thinking, affirming that "Free schooling is a particularly safe and useful form of public aid to the working classes."

Mr. Arnold finds that the free schools in Switzerland resemble those of the United States in this particular that, instead of being established by a political or governing class for the benefit of the lower classes, they are established by the community for its own benefit. A rich man at Zurich, the largest employer of labor in Switzerland, sends his own children, girls and boys, without hesitation, to the public school; and this equality of conditions generally prevails. Education is free and compulsory, and rests for support on municipal taxation. In France, when Mr. Arnold asked what motive prompted the establishment of the great gratuitous system of public education, he was told "The democratic idea," by which was meant the desirability of abolishing all distinction between the child who could afford to pay fees for his schooling and the child who could not. But the un-denominational, anti-clerical idea is equally operative. Mr. Arnold bears testimony to the excellence of the training schools, especially those at Anteuil and Fontenay, and instances with particular praise the master of the latter, the lessons of pedagogy in whose hands "became a treatment really moral and religious, and yet neither Catholic nor Protestant." In general, Mr. Arnold found the moral and civic instruction which is now substituted throughout the French schools for direct religious instruction of little or no value.

In Paris, the municipality not only provides free schools, but free books, free materials, and in some cases, free dinners. In connection with all the infants' schools and primary schools, there is established a system of penny dinners, and it is a rule that to all children really poor the dinners shall be given free. Mr. Arnold says that he saw no groups of children who could be called dirty and neglected, the arrangement made for cheap or free dinners enabling the parents to send their children decently dressed. The Pall Mall Gazette suggests that the spectacle of the municipality of Paris spending its money on dinners and books for poor children is, perhaps, more human and even more religious than that of the Corporation of London presenting gold caskets to Princes or guzzling away a fortune in public banquets.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

ONE OF THE BEST TONICS.

Dr. A. Atkinson, Prof. Materia Medica and Dermatology, in College of Surgeons and Physicians, Baltimore, Md., says: "It makes a pleasant drink, and is one of our best tonics in the shape of phosphates in soluble form."

"Canada, as a home for Anglo-Indians," the title of a letter in the Times of India, is an indication of how widespread has become the interest in our Northwest, for it is the Northwest that our outsiders now generally mean when they speak of the Dominion as a field of enterprise. The writer, Mr. W. Walton, an old East Indian, has established his sons as farmers at Maringhurst, in the Pembina valley, and the picture he draws of what athletic young men, willing to do whatever comes to their hand in the way of hard work, may achieve in the Northwest, is calculated to impress upon the more or less wealthy class, who have difficulty in finding good openings for their sons, the many advantages afforded in the newer regions of Canada.

The Turkish soldier marches to meet the foe with the same nonchalance as he smokes his pipe. He is taught from his birth that the moment of his death is fixed, and that a whole charge of artillery aimed at his heart would miss him, if destiny had decreed his time not come. He is taught also that he will go straightway to Paradise the moment of his death. With both these ideas he is so fully impressed that no danger moves him, and he lies on his death-bed as calmly as on a bed for sleep.

Despise not the day of small things. Little things may help a man to rise—a bent pin in an easy chair for instance. Dr. Fergus's Pleasant Purgative Pellets are small things, pleasant to take, and they cure sick headaches, relieve torpid livers and do wonders. Being purely vegetable they cannot harm any one.
