Centennial Committee Makes Appeal For Cooperation In Launching Miniature Museum

The old stone powder house at Fort Edward, in Victoria Park, is going to be a miniature museum for the display of military and naval items which were in use during the early days of Charlottetown. Old weapons, uniforms, papers, books, maps, plans, diaries, badges, cannon balls and other things of similar interest are urgently needed.

The Centennial Committee is making an appeal to the citizens for the use of such items. This is an appeal that will cost nothing in dollars and cents, that is most important to the success of the museum and one that will give each person the opportunity of making a personal contribution to our centennial plans.

All items accepted will be displayed, giving credit to the donor or loaner. Loaned articles will be returned in the fall. Gift articles will be carefully stored for future display. Articles which cannot be used at Fort Edward may be displayed at the P.E.I. Historical Society Exhibit. Everything will be insured and both displays will be under the constant supervision of a qualified guide.

A trustee board has been established which will administer control of all loans and gifts to the museum. This board will consist of the following: His Worship, Mayor Stewart honorary chairman; F. A. S. Jones, committee chairman; Lt.-Col. F. J. Storey, Frank A. MacKenzie, R. Earl Taylor, A. Walthen Gaudet, secretary.

In urging public support of its efforts to establish the museum, the Centennial Committee expresses the hope that it will be the forerunner of greater things to come. All interested are requested to telephone the secretary at 9121 for any further information required.

Graduation Exercises At Vocational School

Forty four graduating certificates were presented yesterday afternoon to students of trade courses at the tenth annual closing of the Provincial Vocational School. Hon. Kier Clark, Minister of Education presided. His Honour, Lieutenant Governor Prowse presented the certificates and His Worship Mayor J. D. Stewart, made the awards.

Present for the occasion were Premier A. W. Matheson and Minister of Industry and Natural Resources, Hon. Eugene Cullen. The address to the graduates was given by Mr. Frank Curtis, past-president of the Maritime Board of Trade and a director of the Maritime Economic Council.

"There will be many things that will be expected of you" Mr. Curtis told the graduates," and I have no doubt that you will be expecting many things of your employers, as you should". In this relation between employee and employer, he suggested that they try to do a little more than what is expected of them and by so doing would make their climb up the ladder of success much easier.

"If you will try to anticipate what is to be done rather than wait to be told what to do, it will not be too long before your employer will put you in a special category marked," we must keep our eyes on this fellow, he's a real asset". If you are fortunate enough to figure out some method of doing something, of some way that will make it easier to get things done, — don't keep it to your self, tell your employer about it. A bright future awaits anyone who can come up with an idea that will be of benefit to the business in which he is engaged. A lot of people who were thought to be crazy, have come up with brilliant suggestions that have changed our way of living."

Mr. Curtis touched on the history of Vocational Schools, noting that mass training became necessary as the industrial scene became more complex. It was found, he said that although the apprenticeship was the more thorough, it was too slow for the very increasing pace of production.

"It is a most commendable thing that any community should see fit to have facilities for a Vocational school within its borders and the mere fact that the number of persons who have taken advantage of these opportunities is increasing all the time, is sufficient evidence of the wisdom of the method" said Mr. Curtis. He also noted with approval that the Provincial Government is planning the formation of a Labour Department.

PRINCIPAL'S REPORT

The Principal, Mr. Edward MacPhail, in his annual report said that there were 90 students enrolled during the year in the day trade courses 82% of whom were from the rural districts. Instruction was given in automotive mechanics, bricklaying, carpentry, drafting, electricity, home economics, plumbing, welding, continuing over a period of eight months. Including the night classes there was a grand total enrolment for the year of 585 students.

The night courses which were intended for those who wished to gain a knowledge of a trade and for those actually engaged in a particular trade. They began their training on a five day basis.

Night trade courses, which are primarily intended for those who wish to gain a knowledge of a trade, and for those actually engaged in a particular trade, were practically filled to capacity during the fall and winter months, on a five nights each week schedule. 409 students took advantage of these classes, 46% of whom were rural districts and 54% from urban areas. A course in Farm Mechanics was held from Feb. 14 till Mar. 26 with an attendance of sixteen students, all from rural districts.

HOME ECONOMICS

A total of 256 students were enenrolled in the various day and evening classes in the Department of Home Economics under the direction of Miss Anderson. The sewing and cooking classes were continued as usual and classes in knitting, crocheting, smocking and weaving were added, which proved very popular. This year, for the first time, seven Home Economic students attended the classes for the full school year and are on the graduating list. These girls received instruction in sewing and textiles, foods and cookery, nutrition, home nursing, handicraft, singing and family living.

Speaking directly to the students, Mr. MacPhail noted that the relationship between school and students throughout the year had been most pleasant. He told them to bear in mind that in addition to the application of their intellect and the skill of their hands they must be honest and fair with their employer, associates and the general public if they wished to succeed in their occupations.

To show the regard with which the Vocational School is held Mr. MacPhail concluded his report with the following quotation from a leading contracting firm in the province: "We recognize that the Vocational School is doing a grand job with the youth of our province and we have had the occasion to employ boys that have gone through your school. As perhaps you are aware, just recently we acquired the services of one of your boys and we find that he is working out for us very well."
