THE DAILY EXAMINER.

JULY 31, 1889.

Notes and Comments.

We trust that a notable example will be made of the best-man, Landrigan, now happily, under arrest, i. e. if after trial, he stands convicted. The offence is rare in this Province, and it is pleasing to note that the offender is not an Islander.

Dr. Dewart of Toronto, in concluding his annual address as president of the Canadian Press Association, said:

In my opinion, it is the duty of those who speak to the people through the press to give a loyal support to every measure which tends to bind our people of every race, creed and party into one strong, united, British Canadian Commonwealth.

This is an opinion which those of our politicians and press men who take delight in crying down their country and promoting discord, should take to heart.

An automatic brake for heavy wagons, the invention of Mr. J. B. Crosby, of Bonshaw, is the latest thing out. It bids fair to be of great practical utility. It consists in part of an iron rod running along the wagon tongue, between the double-tree and neck-yoke, and operates in such a manner that when the carriage is on the down grade, the brakes are applied automatically, and removed in the same manner.

The Rev. Fred. E. J. Lloyd's plea for the horse is forcible and convincing. It should, in our opinion, result in the abolition of the check rein. The only excuse we have ever heard urged on behalf of this atrocious contrivance is that it keeps the horse's head in a position in which he can breathe most easily. This excuse is not tenable in view of the opinions of the best veterinary surgeons that it has a decidedly bad effect upon the horse's respiratory organs.

Our Phosphate Industry.

(The Dominion Illustrated.)

The appointment of a Minister of Agriculture in England may tend indirectly to promote our phosphate industry. As we have already pointed out, Canadian phosphate of lime has of late been attaining a high rank in England. Formerly, it appears, it fell somewhat into disrepute through lack of care in preparing it for shipment. The usage now is to free the mineral from adhering substances, such as gneiss, pyroxenic rock, iron, etc., and this treatment has been found so advantageous that it well repays the additional trouble.

Personal.

Rev. Father Biggs, of Halifax, is very ill from the effects of a cancer in the eye.

Hon. John Costigan, Minister of Inland Revenue, Ottawa, arrived here Monday evening. He left again this morning.

Mr. G. S. Moore, accountant of the Bank of Nova Scotia, Anherat, has, with his family, been spending his holidays with his friends in Charlottetown. They returned this morning.

The Wesleyan Theological Society, of Ottawa, have appointed Wm. Ayers, B. A., of P. E. Island, as their missionary to Japan. Mr. Ayers leaves for Yokohama shortly. The society defrays all expenses.

The Rev. W. W. Brewer, who has been unable to enter upon his ministerial duties in connection with the Second Methodist Church owing to severe illness, is very much improved in health, and will arrive here from St. John to-morrow evening.

Capt. Walter Rowe, of this city—son of Mr. J. T. Rowe—is now master of the trim little brigantine Topaz, sailing out of Halifax. His last voyage—the first in which Captain Rowe had full charge—was to Colon, in Central America, which port she made in the unusually short space of twenty days. We trust that the good fortune which has hitherto attended upon the efforts of the young captain will continue with him through life.

Attempted Outrage.

A HARD BATTLE FOR VIRTUE—VICTORY OF THE WEAKER VESSEL—ARREST OF THE STRONGER.

Shortly after noon yesterday a girl about twenty years of age, niece of Mr. William Quinn, Dock Road, Little Mimmigash, for whom she was housekeeper, while on her way home from Bloomfield Station, where she arrived by the express from Bradalbane, was waylaid and knocked down on the Trainor Road by a scoundrel named William Landrigan, of Newfoundland, who attempted to criminally assault her. The girl resisted with all her might, and screamed for help. Landrigan told her that if she did not keep quiet he would shoot her, as he had a revolver. She did not desist, however, even in the face of this threat, and told him he might shoot if he liked. All this time Landrigan was trying with all his strength to accomplish his ends, and the poor girl was keeping him at bay to the best of her ability. Failing in his purpose, he at last gave up the struggle, and left his victim in an exhausted condition.

After Landrigan's departure, the poor girl, more dead than alive, made her way to the nearest house, about three-quarters of a mile from where the assault took place, and fell fainting at the gate. A man named Dalton found her lying at the gate, and assisted her into the house, where, after being restored to consciousness, she told her story. Dalton at once started for Bloomfield Station in pursuit of the scoundrel. At the station he made the discovery that a man answering the description given of the girl's assailant had passed down the railway track towards Mill River a short time previously. Dalton did not go any further than the station.

About twenty-five minutes past two, Mr. Henry Hughes, of this city, returning from Little Mimmigash to Bloomfield, met Dalton at John Pratt's shop door. Dalton told him the story of the assault, and Mr. Hughes remembered that on driving out with Mr. Pratt to Little Mimmigash they passed the girl on the Trainor Road, and that some distance further on the same road, they met Landrigan, who carried a small bundle suspended across his shoulders by means of a small white woollen comforter. Mr. Hughes at once went to the station, and at his request the agent there telegraphed O'Leary Station enquiring if a man answering the description of Landrigan had arrived there. The answer was to the effect that he had not. Then Mr. Hughes requested the agent at O'Leary to forward information of the assault to Robert Ellis, J. P. of that place. This was done.

At ten minutes after three the agent at O'Leary telegraphed Bloomfield that a man answering the description given of Landrigan, and carrying a bundle on his back, had arrived there. Mr. Hughes telegraphed Mr. Ellis to hold Landrigan for identification by him, as he was coming along on the train, suggesting also that Landrigan be brought back to Bloomfield on the evening train for identification by the girl. When the express from the west arrived at O'Leary, both man and bundle were closely scrutinized by Mr. Hughes. He identified both, and told Mr. Ellis to arrest him, as he was the man. The prisoner was very much surprised at being arrested; and demanded to know why he was arrested when those arresting him did not even know his name. When told that he was arrested for criminal assault he said nothing, but asked for his bundle as he was being taken away from the station by Mr. Ellis.

In the train for the west that evening Mr. Ellis and his prisoner were passengers to Bloomfield. On the way up the latter told some of the train hands that he would possibly get seven or eight years imprisonment. This morning Landrigan was arraigned before Messrs. Ellis and Gorman, J. P.'s. The girl identified him as the man who assaulted her. Landrigan, however, pleaded not guilty to the charge. He was remanded for trial in the Supreme Court.

The section of the Trainor Road, where the assault took place, has not been open very long, and there are woods on both sides. There are no buildings on that portion of it. It was about midway in this wood, as it may properly be called, that Landrigan and his victim met. He accosted her, and asked if that was the right road to Mimmigash. She said yes, and passed on. After she had gone a short distance she looked around and saw that the man had turned back and was coming after her. She became alarmed and started to run. He ran after her and soon overtook her. His next move was to catch hold of her and knock her down on the road, as above stated.
