An Ode to Blaine.

O, Blaine of Maine
We hear your fog-horn voice again,
With patriotic fervor now you wish
To let your Maineiacs steal our fish.
But, Blaine of Maine;
Let us explain;
Your men may fish where'er they wish,
But not, in spite of all their boasts,
Upon Canadian coasts,
Nor must they look to us for bait.
From your own State
We take one stern condition—
Strict prohibition.
In days of old, we're told,
The men of Egypt, all grown bad and bold,
Holding the captive Jews within their toils,
Were plagued with blains and boils,
But Maine, O Blaine,
Worse than the Pharaonic train
Which truth and honesty and law defies,
Is plagued with Blaines and Fryes.
O, Blaine of Maine
Hear us again:
There is a mighty power,
Not the mere transient creature of the hour,
But one whose meteor flag floats to the breeze
In every clime and glorifies the seas.
Beneath that flag we sit, nor fear a bit
But fish where we wish.
In Britain's armor we must
Forever trust.
Her thunders never sleep,
But roll across the mighty pathless deep,
Forget not this, O demagogic Blaine—
Britannia rules the main.

After his christening last week, the five-day-old Alfonso XIII. indulged in a good colic, which ended with a rousing debauch on a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's soothing syrup. His Majesty's next spree will be vaccination.

A few days before William Ashworth, of Oregon, Me., died, he hid a quantity of gold coin. That was fifteen years ago, and though a careful search was made for the treasure, it could not be found. Last week Mrs. Ashworth emptied an old churn that had stood on a shelf in the smoke-house for years. The churn was full of beans, and in the bottom was a tin can, and in the can was an old woollen sock, and in the sock was the long searched for gold. It amounted to $712.
