A NUMBER of fishing boat operators come up to the announcer's boat to get their flags prior to the start of the "green race", for older boats and those not entered in the technical classes. The scene was repeated many times during the afternoon as the North Rustico village and school sponsored its annual regatta. About 50 boats of all types comprising five or six classes were entered in the competition. Seven races were held with the most exciting probably being the green race, which ended with a small four-cylinder engined craft nosing out a six-cylinder engined boat to win the event.

Jets Shade Angels 20-18

Canadian Tire Jets rocked the Guardian Angels last night by exploding for nine big runs in the last inning to turn what looked like certain defeat into a spine-tingling 20-18 Commercial Softball League victory.

The Angels pounded Jet pitcher Myron Weeks hard in the early innings but the big righthander held on and managed to keep the Guardian team at bay during the crucial last few innings.

Bernard MacKinnon went all the way for the losers but was wild, walking nine batters. His team played loose ball behind him and committed seven errors.

The fateful seventh and last inning started with the Angels holding a commanding 18-11 edge. They went down without a hit in their half on the inning and then the Canadian Tire batters went to work.

A single by Ernie Sellick sandwiched between two walks and a force play brought in one run. Fitzpatrick then reached first on an error and Maynard Roy hit a booming home run to clear the bases. Another error and a triple by Layton Stone tied the game. After Keen flied out, Hector MacDougall hit a tremendous home run to deep center to nail the game away.

Senior Citizens' Homes Plan Are Outlined At Kensington

KENSINGTON — A survey to determine the need for senior citizens homes in the Kensington area will be conducted, it was decided at a meeting, called by the Board of Trade at which approval was given to the provincial government's program to establish such homes.

The government's plans for the program were outlined and it was explained what had been done in other provinces. Hon. Henry Wedge, minister of welfare and labor, addressed the meeting.

The plan has been divided into four sections which include:

1. To establish self-contained housekeeping units for couples and blood relatives. Each unit will have a refrigerator, electric stove. Each group of four units will have a utility room with washer and dryer. There will be central heating. Each unit will have a living room, bedroom, kitchen, bath and closets. These will be established in various parts of the province with the first to be built in Souris and Tignish where both municipalities have offered to donate land and have made other concessions. The units will be rented at cost.

2. To establish hostels for domiciliary care of the aged. These will likely be one in Kings, one in Queens and two in Prince.

persons needing a minimum of

3. Nursing homes for aged nursing care. These will be erected where needed.

New Beach Park Set For West Pt.

An acquisition has been made by the provincial government of approximately 100 acres of beach property at West Point, which will become the largest park in Prince County to date and will be the first strictly beach type of park that the province has been prepared to develop, it was learned yesterday.

The land has been purchased from William Dyment and is what has been known locally as the West Point Beach. Development is expected to begin before the summer is out.

Purchased at a price of approximately $2,000, a good part of its cost will be provided for from the Robert Cotton Trust Fund, left to the province a year ago for the development of parks, scholarships for vocational students and support of the Harris Memorial Art Gallery.

The park will have as one unique feature one of the few stands of cedar in the province. It is believed the park may be called "Cedar Dunes Park," because of the cedar and the sand dunes.

Wendell Profitt, director of parks has been assigned to have a survey of the property made and to lay out the first steps of the project. The park will be a combined bathing beach, picnic area and camping and trailer area. Construction will take place as well as an effort to create some road side spots for tenting and trailers.

This will be the first time the province has been represented in a national and international competition of this nature. The team, nattily attired in Prince Edward Island tartan outfits, was in Charlottetown yesterday making final preparations for the trip to Montreal.

The Canoe Cove first aid enthusiasts are making the trip at their own expense, outside of a few donations from some first aid committees towards travelling expenses.

Parade, Speeches Mark Mt. Carmel Anniversary

SUMMERSIDE BUREAU OF THE GUARDIAN

Representing 150 years of Island history, the Mont Carmel parish church yesterday was the scene of an afternoon anniversary program highlighted by a mile-long parade.

The present church, built in 1896, has in its construction almost half a million bricks and it is interesting to note that the bricks were all manufactured by the men of the parish of the time. John McLure was contractor for the job and it was he who taught the men the art of brickliaying.

Stone used for the base of the church was hauled over the ice from Summerside, where it had been sent from New Brunswick.

The parish, composed of the three school districts of Mont Carmel, Cape Egmont and St. Raphael, has a population of 700 in 115 families, and has had the distinction of having eight of its sons enter the priesthood, while 33 sisters have taken holy orders in various congregations.

FLOATS FEATURED

The parade with floats constructed by the residents of the parish featured the various phases of transportation from the horse and buggy days right up to the automobile. Riders on horseback were first of the components of the parade, followed by various carts and carriages depicting the mode of transportation of the time.

Soon cars entered the procession as history began to progress. A 1928 model car was first, followed by some models in the '30's'. The automobile section of the parade was complete with models representing every year from 1943 to 1962.

Also included were several floats depicting clubs and organizations of the residents of the area. Among them were a women's institute float, one by the Acadian Fisheries Union an industrial float and several others.

Platform speakers at the official opening ceremonies conducted by Ulrich Poirier, master of ceremonies, were Most Rev. Malcolm A. MacEachern, bishop of Charlottetown; Rev. John Buote, parish priest; Urban LeBlanc, representing the Mont Carmel Credit Union which observed its 25th anniversary yesterday; Hon. Henry W. Wedge, minister of welfare and labor; Henry Blanchard, Charlottetown historian whose paper is excerpts from his Island account of the Acadians; Msgr. Nazaire Poirier, and Euclid Daigle, Moncton, N.B., representing L'Assomption Society.

MUSEUM MOOTED

Each speaker briefly gave a word of welcome and lauded the Mont Carmel residents for their works and achievements.

Mr. Wedge stated that in the near future, a museum may be started for exhibits of Acadian history. "It will be of great interest to the public, and an excellent way to preserve our Island history," he said.

An interesting section of yesterday's program was a display of old Acadian tools and instruments. Included in the array was a set of wooden shoes to cover a horse's hooves, so mud would not stick to them, or to prevent sinking in deep snow, yokes for cattle and people, a hand reaper, an old wooden plow an apple peeler, a hand made set of balances and a three-ply-rope making machine were included in the list, indicating the facilities of the Acadian settlers.
