TAKING MEDICINE.

Acids, as a rule, should be given between meals. Acids given before meals check the excessive secretion of the acids of the gastric juice.

Iodine or the Iodides should be given on an empty stomach. If given during digestion, the acids and starch alter and weaken their action.

Irritating and poisonous drugs, such as salts of arsenic, copper, zinc and iron, should be given directly after meals.

Oxide and nitrate of silver should be given after the process of digestion is ended. If given during or close after meals, the chemicals destroy or impair their action. Potassium permanganate also should not be given until the process of digestion is ended, as organic matter decomposes it and renders it inert.

The active principle of the gastric juice is impaired and rendered inert by tannin and pure alcohol; hence they should never be given until after the close of digestion.

Malt extracts, cod liver oil, the phosphates, etc., should be given with or directly after food.

A recent writer gives these hints on medicine taking. Of course no drug should be taken without advice of a physician, but when a special tonic has been prescribed these rules are useful as to the best time for administering it.

PEN, CHISEL AND BRUSH.

Miss Braddon is 60 and Mrs. Oliphant 68, but they carry a pair of lovers through a long novel with as much skill as ever.

When Whistler was told by a flattering friend that there were only two portrait painters, himself and Velasquez, he wearily observed, "Why drag in Velasquez?"

Mrs. Flora Steel is coming to be regarded as a rival of Rudyard Kipling in the field of Anglo-Indian fiction. Mrs. Steel is now 60 years of age, and from the time of her marriage at 20 until eight years ago she lived in India.

Frith, the painter of the "Derby Day," wrote in his autobiography, "It was just a toss up whether I became an artist or an auctioneer." Whistler's comment on the passage was, "He must have tossed up!"

Harpignies, the landscape painter; Mathurin Moreau, the sculptor, and Strony, the lithographer, were the recipients of the medals of honor for the 1897 salon. No medal of honor for architecture was awarded.

Mr. Frederick Villiers, the war correspondent, is said to be the quickest sketcher in the world. He is master of the art of actually taking pencil notes in the midst of battle, and, what is really more trying, on the battlefield amid the dead and dying when all is over.
