Appeals For Quilts For Manitoba

Mrs. Rhodes-Smith who is the Chairman of the Manitoba Red Cross Work Committee, as well as the Vice-Chairman of this National Red Cross Committee, has suggested that the Women's Work Committees across the country endeavour to put a bright new Quilt in every house in Manitoba where damage was done.

Prince Edward Island has always been famous for the attractive quilts made by its women-folk. During the war years more than 10,000 quilts made mostly by members of our Women's Institutes, were sent overseas through the Red Cross. The many letters of thanks received testified the appreciation of the recipients who stated they felt their morale lifted considerably by the thoughtfulness displayed by Canadian women in sending gifts of such beauty to them.

The appeal made by Mrs. Rhodes Smith of Manitoba is a challenge to our Prince Edward Island women to again act as morale-lifters—but this time to their fellow-Canadians who have suffered such losses as the result of the floods in Manitoba. It is hoped that this appeal for quilts for Manitoba will meet with a ready response from Prince Edward Islanders.

Red Cross In Winnipeg Lauded By U. S. Experts

The greatest emergency job any city has ever been faced with on the North American continent has been undertaken by the Canadian Red Cross in Winnipeg, states Colin Herrie, Director of Disaster Relief for the American Red Cross. Mr. Herrie came from Washington to act as observer of work and scope of the Red Cross Flood Relief for the American organization.

From the viewpoint of one who has been actively concerned with great disasters in the United States during the past 20 years, I cannot speak highly enough of the manner in which the local Red Cross organization has faced this enormous responsibility of organization and relief," he said. Major-General F. F. Worthington, Director of Civil Defence for Canada, has also been on the territory surveying and observing work in the disaster area. Before returning to Ottawa, he paid tribute to Red Cross for its handling of the job. "This has been a disaster of the first magnitude," he stated. "If the Red Cross did not exist, where would we be? It has filled the needs of housing, feeding, clothing and comfort. In any organization of civil defense in which I am concerned, the Red Cross will play an important part. No other relief group in the country can begin to fulfill the obligations to the community in the same way as this Society." To carry out the enormous responsibility placed on its shoulders in Manitoba, the Canadian Red Cross has thrown all its financial and organizing resources into its disaster work here, states Dr. W. Stuart Stanbury, National Commissioner, who has been directing the work. Assisting have been Red Cross Commissioners from Ontario and Saskatchewan, two national staff members and press liaison officers.

Good Attendance At Grandpa Jones Show At Forum

Two good sized crowds piled into the Charlottetown Forum on Saturday afternoon and Saturday night to listen to the old time music and cowboy singing of Grandpa Jones, Ramona, the champion lady hillbilly fiddler and the rest of the cast.

Singing such favorites as the widely known "Mountain Dew" song and playing numbers as the "Apple Blossom Special", the two hour show made a big hit with the audiences. With a cast of 16 members, the show kept the audience in a rollicking spirit throughout with their jokes and skits. One number on the program "I Don't Get Around Much Any More" cast a special reflection on Grandpa Jones himself. "Slim" proved to be a popular member of the cast with his series of songs. A six piece orchestra also provided more popular entertainment.

Woods Fire At Cross Roads

Fire in a small woods near Cross Roads about five miles East of Charlottetown on the Montague Highway was choked out yesterday afternoon by volunteer but inexperienced firemen from Cross Roads and surrounding districts shortly after the outbreak was discovered.

It is believed the fire was first noticed about 4:30 by Mrs. Clayton Cudmore of Cross Roads who was visiting her parents. The fire was visible from the Hillsboro Bridge and from Tea Hill with the result that motorists assisted in extinguishing the blaze. Although the fire was put out without difficulties, a watch guard was posted throughout the night for fear of a fresh outbreak. Smouldering sumps made the maintenance of a watch necessary. Cause of the outbreak could not definitely be ascertained but it was known that a fire had been burning in a nearby field on the previous day. COST OF WAR The total military cost of the Second World War was estimated by official sources in Washington, at $1,116,991,463,084 and property damage at $230,900,000.

OTTAWA, May 25—(CP)—An anti-submarine warfare exercise will be carried out off Halifax Tuesday by a combined attack force of Royal Canadian Navy ships and carrier-borne aircraft.

The Royal Navy submarine H. M. S. Astute will represent the enemy undersea force.

accompanied, although he has been associated with Mr. Arthur's headquarters since May, 1945, when he was attached to the intelligence section in Manila to help coordinate the pending Russian entry into the Pacific war.

The Russian notified American officials of his departure by unusual means before sailing. No explanation for the abrupt move was given.

Col. Sevastyan A. Polyshenko, an obscure officer, was left in charge of the active Soviet mission in Tokyo. Even with the departures, it still numbers more than 100 officials.

New Russian Moves?

Derevyanko is regarded by high American officials as a capable and likeable officer. Authoritative quarters say his background might make him a valuable adviser in Moscow for any increased drive in the Far East, a sphere in which the Kremlin regards MacArthur its most troublesome adversary.

On the other hand, Derevyanko has been the loser in a bitter and open conflict with MacArthur for control of Japan.

Derevyanko's latest counter-thrust was a charge, three weeks ago that American bases in Japan and Okinawa violated occupation policy. MacArthur dismissed this as "provocative impertinence."

This failure, authoritative informants say, might account for Derevyanko's hasty recall. But it would not explain the large number of officials accompanying him, unless they, as officers close to the general, are to share the blame.

form the frequent showers, many sought refuge in nearby doorways and bomb ruins as Stalinist oratory wrore on at the Lustgarten, but were herded back to their formations by East German police.

Recall's Hitler's Time multered non-Communist German watchers. Along a nervous East-West dividing line that threads past Brandenburger Gate and through Potsdamer Platz, East German police laid out fire hoses and faced an equally-alert West German police force.

Thirteen thousand West German police, equipped with stores of tear gas and water-spraying trucks, and backed by 8,000 riot-trained Allied troops, had taken extreme precautions in view of the threats of Free German Youth (F.D.J.) leaders months ago that they would "storm Berlin."

If the threats were serious the precautions bore fruit. About all that was proved today was that the West will not be moved out of Berlin by threats of a Communist push, and that the East is seeking to interest the marching youngsters in future careers as soldiers and already has laid the foundation for an automation state. Allied security headquarters reported that more than 30 of the East German police deserted and sought refuge in the West during the rally. The peaceful passing of the big Communist demonstration brought a "victory" claim from West Berlin's Mayor, Ernst Reuter. "Our peaceful determination, together with the support we received from the Allies, has resulted in a complete failure of Communist dreams to overrun Berlin," he said. The blue-shirted legions were called out by buglers at 4 a. m. and began assembling for their march at 7 a. m. in a light drizzle which turned into a driving rain as the parade began. The marching continued nearly eight hours—from 9:15 a. m. until 5 p. m. Crowds along the line of march were thin, and the cheering at most places was sparse. West Berliners were free to stroll into the east zone to watch, but most preferred to remain indoors, go to an American or British movie or attend the city's first post-war auto show.
