SUPREME COURT—PRINCE COUNTY.

The October term of the Supreme Court of Judicature, was held at St. Eleanor's on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week, Mr. Justice Peters presiding. The criminal calendar was light. There were but three cases tried, one for larceny, Pacifique Bernard, (dumb), one for obtaining goods under false pretences, J. Dickie, and one for an assault on a constable. The offenders were sentenced respectively to two, one, and eight months imprisonment. There were but few civil cases, and none of any importance. The following is a list of the Grand Jurors:—

Allan Fraser, Lot 16, Foreman; Hugh Ramsay, Port Hill. Francis McNutt, Darnley. Benjamin Rogers, Cascumpec. Albert L. Anderson, St. Eleanor's. John Clay, Bedeque. Amos McWilliams, Lot 7. George Stanlake, Lot 17. James Hall, Lot 19. John Ramsay, Lot 11. James Forsyth, Alberton. Hugh Ramsay, sen., Beech Point. John Tanton, St. Eleanor's. Walter Hogg, Lot 19. William Calbek, Tryon. William Bowness, Town Road. Benj. Schurman, Summerside. Joseph Balony Perry, Miscouche. Archibald McIntosh, Lot 13. Major Wright, Bedeque. Malcolm McFarlane, Bedeque. William Jamieson, New Annan. William T. Hunt, St. Eleanor's. Alexander Laird, Bedeque House.

THE FUTURE OF FRANCE.

The health of the Emperor is still a subject of comment in Europe. In view of his death, the Paris correspondent of the Boston Advertiser thus alludes to the future of France:—

A visit to France since my last letter, and an intercourse with some of its distinctive men, have thrown uppermost in my mind the subject of the government of that country. Never in modern history was there a nation to which the future appeared more uncertain. Most of the people live side in the present they will not think of, much less discuss, what will occur when the Emperor dies. Occasionally we hear he is seriously ill, and then every large city is a prey to harassing fears or to exciting hopes, but the Moniteur contradicts the report, avows that His Majesty is in unexceptionable health, and peace is restored. Could the Emperor feign death, and a mock burial take place, he would know what his life signifies; but as it is, he and every one else is ignorant about it. I have acquaintances in Paris amongst both the moderate republican writers and the Orleanists, and I find each section perfectly satisfied that the Empire would not survive the Emperor. We sketch in the dark when we attempt to anticipate; but what would occur were the Emperor to be removed at a juncture like the present, is passing something in this wise: The Empress would enter upon the duties of regent, and the young prince would be prominently brought to the notice of the people. Senators and generals would swear eternal fealty. Prince Napoleon would begin to scheme for a more democratic government, and would go to the very limits of revolts in his plans. The Orleanist and republican party would perhaps coalesce and all eyes be turned to the army. It is on the cards that a skilful address from the Count de Paris, promising full constitutional liberties, a free press, and a free parliament, with the restoration of universal suffrage and the gift of all the powers of parliamentary government, would unite the shades of the opposition, and lead to popular demonstrations before which the army, as they have done previously, would give way. Nobody can tell. All we know is, that the present leaders of the democratic opposition would not consent without a struggle to the continuance of the Imperial system. Moreover, it is one of the curses of governing by repression, that the thoughts and the aspirations of the multitude are concealed. We see no sign of the red republicanism and socialism which made so stubborn a fight in the terrible days of June, 1848; but many think it exists and would burst out again at Louis Napoleon's death. I have put to several Frenchmen the question—"What do you think will happen at the Emperor's decease?" and none of them were able to do more than utter a hope. That the Empress and the child could go on peaceably in the Emperor's steps no one professes to believe. None of the supporters of the present regime, save a dozen personal friends or relatives, have any loyalty to the dynasty. The Emperor has a strong hand, the mind of design and the will to execute, and they range themselves on his side; but they would have no fear of his wife or his boy, and would simply wait to see who showed the most activity and determination.

The New York Times quotes the following from the National Intelligencer:—

"Judge Underwood and the Chief Justice have come to the conclusion that because of the legislation of the last Congress the adjourned Court cannot be held next month, consequently the case of Mr. Davis, with all others, must be postponed to a future day."

And appends the annexed remarks:—

"The manner in which this case of Davis is treated by high officials is becoming a scandal to the nation. It seems to be a mere foot-ball, to be kicked about between the President, Congress and Chief Justice Chase, each making it in turn the ground of some new reproach against the others."

Late Montreal papers contain an advertisement from Mr. C. J. Brydges, announcing that the weekly line of steamers from Portland to Halifax, in connexion with the Grand Trunk Railway, as announced in June last, will commence running this week, and will be kept on the line during the winter months.

A CHILD BURNT ALIVE.—Mrs. Kate Williams, a widow lady, and her child, seven years old, were awakened at Gill's Hotel, in Chicago, early on Tuesday morning, by the roaring and hissing of the flames that were consuming the building. Seizing the child, Mrs. Williams attempted to gain the window with it through the dense smoke. Just as she reached it, her strength being nearly exhausted, she dropped her child. At the same moment the crowd in the street shouted to her to jump, and, terrified, she sprang from the window. A ladder was procured with the intention of rescuing the child, but it was deemed unsafe to attempt it. The child appeared at the window, and its frantic cries were heard by those below. The mother's heart-rending accents urged those around her to save her boy, but it was too late—he perished in the flames.

DROWNED.—On the 20th of August last, a young man named Lewis A. McDonald, whilst in the act of dipping a bucket of water, was taken overboard, and, sad to say, was drowned, notwithstanding the efforts of the crew to save him. Some threw ropes, tubs, etc., overboard; others launched the boat. He belonged to the East Point, and went to the United States last Spring, and came into the Bay in the Schooner "E. R. Nickerson." He was drowned near the Magdalen Islands. He was the third son of Mr. Angus McDonald of East Point. He was a young man of irreproachable character, modest and unassuming, loved and respected by all who knew him. In the morning of life, in the dawn of manhood, he was called to meet a just and merciful God. The crew spoke of him in terms of the highest praise. His age was 21 years. This sad and melancholy accident should be a warning to the young men of East Point who go to sea, although it has not been the first accident that has befallen many of the young men of East Point. Many families round the North and South sides of East Point now mourn for their once promising sons, who lie in the dark recesses of the deep blue sea.—Com

A BOLD THIEF.—A daring attempt at highway robbery was made yesterday morning in Wall Street, the victim being a well-known broker and banker, who was brutally assaulted at the door of his office, by a ruffian whose purpose was to seize a cash box containing a large amount of money, which the broker had just obtained from the bank. Fortunately he was unsuccessful. The facts in this case, as furnished to our reporter, are substantially as follows:—About ten o'clock yesterday morning, Mr. J. Craven, the senior partner of the firm of Craven & Co., brokers and bankers, at No. 74, Wall Street, proceeded to the bank of North America, and drew from the vaults of that institution a tin cash-box, as is customary with him each morning in the week. This box contained United States Treasury notes, National Bank bills, checks, certificates and gold coin, to the amount of nearly $14,000, and was the property of the firm. Besides the patent lock upon the cash-box it was still further secured by a stout leather strap, which also served as an aid in transporting it to and from the bank. As Mr. Craven descended the bank steps he noticed a tall, powerfully-built and "loafish looking" man loitering near by, though he paid no attention to the circumstance, and only had it recalled to memory by subsequent events. Proceeding towards his office at a rapid pace, Mr. Craven descended the three or four steps leading into it, and was about entering, when he was accosted by the suspicious-looking person alluded to. The stranger handed the broker a letter addressed to himself, which Mr Craven took as he unlocked the door and entered the office. The supposed messenger followed, but finding that Mr. Craven still retained possession of the strong box, and evinced no disposition to set it upon the counter, the fellow struck the broker a violent and ringing blow on the left side of the face, evidently with the intention of knocking him down. The blow, though well aimed, and made still more telling by the thief's hand being well armed with brass "knucklets," did not result as the bold operator anticipated, for Mr. Craven was only staggered, and had sufficient presence of mind to hold fast to the box, which he by that time understood to be the object of the stranger's visit. In a second of time the broker, though considerably "abroad" from the effects of the blow he had received, wheeled round and grappled with his assailant, still retaining possession of the box. The thief made two or three desperate attempts to seize the coveted treasure, at the same time striking out wildly but powerfully, with his armed fists. Mr. Craven, however, resolved to make a determined resistance, and finally succeeded in beating off his ferocious opponent. Fearing the arrival of assistance and his probable arrest, the desperate but thwarted thief turned away, and after stumbling up the steps made good his escape, Mr. Craven being too much fatigued and confused to follow quick enough to insure his arrest.

The gentlemen who thus successfully resisted the onslaught of so determined a thief is naturally proud at the result, in spite of the fact that his head is considerably bruised, although he is quite able to perform his usual business. No arrest has as yet been made, owing to the fact that Mr Craven can give no definite description of the thief.—New York Times, 18th.

THE CIRCASSIAN SLAVE TRADE.—A Frightful Massacre.—Letters from the Circassian coast report popular outbreaks against the Russian authorities. It would seem that four slave merchants arrived a short time since in Abasia from Trebizond, and shortly after their arrival serious complaints were made to the Russian authorities of the abduction of a number of young girls, some of them christians. The Russians, to their credit be it said, have organized a regular Police system for the prevention of this infamous traffic, and measures were immediately taken to arrest the four yessirdjis and liberate the girls whom they had entrapped.

To prevent this a plot was set on foot to surprise and massacre the garrison and the Christian population of Soukoum-kale, to plunder the place, and then embark with a few slave girls in coasting vessels for Turkey, where the whole band would present themselves in the guise of ordinary emigrants, and subsequently dispose of their human freight at the best available profit.

This atrocious plot was, it appears, to some extent—and, unfortunately to a fatal extent—carried out. Under the cover of night a party of armed Abasians, repaired to the country house of the military commander, and murdered that officer and all his family, massacreing even the little children. Almost simultaneously a regular rising was made throughout Soukoum-kale and its vicinity; the houses of the Russian officers of all ranks and of private individuals also were attacked with torch and poignard; the Abasians carried devastation in every direction, sparing neither women nor children, until the garrison of the fort came to the rescue, and, after an obstinate struggle, got the better of the assassins, and saved the town from further pillage. Between two hundred and three hundred Abasians are said to have been killed, and about one hundred Russians, including women and children, most of the latter having been massacred before the soldiers could save them. The result of this deplorable affair is that martial law has been proclaimed throughout Abasia; and several detachments of Russian troops have been despatched as fast as steam can carry them to Soukoum-kale by way of Poti.

The Sisterhood of St. Mary, the Virgin, is the name of a new religious order recently founded in New York. It is to the Episcopal Church what the Sisters of Charity is to the Catholic Church.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Hereditary Debility—Taints of the constitution allowed to pass unheeded and unpurified often develop themselves in the offspring, and cause many refractory maladies. The preventive of such sad consequences exists in those thoroughly cleansing Pills, which may be taken with safety and efficiency from the advent of the first symptom to the departure of the last trace of deranged health. The printed instructions wrapped around every box are the best and simplest guides for all sufferers in search of a remedy for recent chronic ailments, and this medicine is admirably adapted by improving the digestion and aiding assimilation for renovating the health of the naturally delicate, and for restoring the strength of the prematurely decrepid.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES. From the Medical Director of the General Hospital, Benton Barracks, near St. Louis, March 8, 1862. Messrs John I. Brown & Son, Boston, Mass. "Use of your far-famed and most serviceable 'Troches' is being made in the hospital of which I have charge, and with very beneficial and decided results in allaying bronchial irritation and morbid sensitiveness of the mucous membrane of glottis and parts adjacent.

A BRIEF DIALOGUE BETWEEN COMMON SENSE AND A DYSPEPTIC.

COMMON SENSE. Is it possible for any human being to enjoy life while suffering from indigestion?

DYSPEPTIC. No more than it is possible to be happy on the rack. I speak from experience.

COMMON SENSE. Suppose, then, that a remedy for this terrible complaint is offered, under the guarantee of hundreds of individuals of high social standing, who have tested the effect of the article in their own cases, is it not unwise in any one afflicted with the disease to neglect giving it a trial?

DYSPEPTIC. Unquestionably. I admit the premises. What is the deduction?

COMMON SENSE. Give heed. HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS is such a remedy. The evidence of its efficacy as a cure for dyspeptics is positive, complete, undenied, and undeniable. Have you ever ascertained by experiment whether it is or is not the infallible cure that it is claimed to be?

DYSPEPTIC. I confess that I have not.

COMMON SENSE. Then you stand convicted of folly by your own showing. If the same strong proofs that have been advanced in favor of this great tonic had been submitted to you with regard to any business speculation, you would have gone into it at once. Is HEALTH of less importance than the dollars and cents which no man can enjoy without it?

DYSPEPTIC. No, no, no—thousand times no Common Sense, you are right. I will give the Bitters a trial.

COMMON SENSE. Do so, and I shall never more have reason to address you as a dyspeptic.

BRITISH PERIODICALS.

VIZ:

The London Quarterly Review (Conservative.)

The Edinburgh Review (Whig).

The Westminster Review (Radical).

The North British Review (Free Church),

AND

Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine. (Tory.)

THE foreign PERIODICALS above enumerated are regularly published by us in the same style and with the same promptness as heretofore. Those who know them and who have long subscribed to them, need no reminder from us; those whom the civil war of the last few years has deprived of their once welcome supply of the best periodical Literature, will be glad to have our publications again brought within their reach; and those who, residing far inland, remote from the centres of commerce and literature, may never yet have met with them, will assuredly be well pleased to have the means pointed out of bringing accredited reports of the progress of European science and literature to their homesteads in the Western prairies of the Southern plantations.

Blackwood's Magazine also continues to run its race ably. Equalling the more sedate quarterlies in its literary and scientific departments, its pages are enlivened with well told narratives and clever sketchy papers, which, by their occasional republication in book form, have been stamped as far superior to ordinary magazine literature. Bulwer and Lever and Mrs. Oliphant have written much of late in its pages. At present the Chronicles of Carlingford by Mrs. O., the O'Dowd Papers by Lever, and the Memoirs of the Confederate War for independence, by Von Bork, of J. E. B. Stuart's Staff, are favorite serials running on from number to number.

We again request the reader to run his eye over the partial list of subjects given above, and observe how varied are the contents of these periodicals, and how well they are adapted to keeping their readers informed of the progress of the various branches of knowledge in which the mind of man puts forth its powers. Their pages teem with the records of research, invention and discovery; and the copious list of Contemporary Literature in the Westminster, gives a long catalogue of works recently published at home and abroad, which every reader will find a great advantage in having at hand.

To prevent misunderstanding, it may be as well to observe that we have annexed the terms "Conservative," "Whig," "Free-Church," and "Tory," to the proper names of the respective periodicals, with no intention to initiate a political classification of customers and subscribers; but simply to intimate that when social and political subjects are taken hold of, they will be discussed on the principles of that political party of which the Review is the acknowledged organ. The great majority, however, of all the articles in all these Reviews are addressed to the world in general, and not to party. The Tory reads the Edinburgh review for its literature and science, omitting or not its political portions according to the humor of the moment; and is not regarded as any the less a Tory because he takes a Whig periodical. And so with the others. Even the reader of the Westminster would not consider that he forfeited his fame as an advocate of free-thought by subscribing to the more orthodox North British. The daily or weekly paper which is brought to our doors, is, like the flag which we raise aloft and march under, the index of our political opinions; but the Quarterly Review or monthly magazine is like the friend of years, with whom, though of different politics, we may associate freely without the slightest danger of compromising ourselves.

We therefore present our publications freely to men of all parties, as a common literary ground on which they may mingle with cheerful thoughts, and friendly feelings, and expanding minds; and though we cannot aver that the theologian, the lawyer, the physician, or any learned or scientific man, will have all his wants satisfied in his particular department, yet he will undoubtedly pick up many suggestions by which he may profit, and he will certainly acquire a very correct idea of what is going on in all those branches of human knowledge unconnected with his own province, which he has not time to study in detail, but of which it is very important for every man of education to possess some general ideas.

The Four Reviews and Blackwood, comprising the series above described, are republished at the following rates, viz.:

For any one of the Reviews	$4 00 per annum.
For any two of the Reviews	7 00 "
For any three of the Reviews	10 00 "
For all four of the Reviews	12 00 "
For Blackwood's Magazine	4 00 "
For Blackwood and one Review	7 00 "
For Blackwood and any two of the Reviews	10 00 "
For Blackwood and three of the Reviews	13 00 "
For Blackwood and the four Reviews	15 00 "

Considering that the cost of printing has more than doubled since 1861, these prices are extremely low. The original English Editions would cost, in U. S. Currency, more than treble these rates at the present time.
