How Never To Be Tired

Contrary to what most people believe, there's no such thing as chronic fatigue due to overwork. There's energy enough in the weakest of us to keep us going at top speed for a lifetime—if we learn to set it free.

In July Reader's Digest, Marie Beynon Ray tells the secret of busy, successful people who never seem to get tired. Read this helpful condensation from her popular book.

Learn how things you don't do can actually make you tired. Find out how getting relaxation—instead of rest—can help you feel better, get more done.

Get your July Reader's Digest today: 40 articles of lasting interest, condensed from leading magazines, current books.

On Wednesday morning, May 6th, a regrettable accident occurred on the O'Leary road in Knutsford, when the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Johnson was accidentally killed by a car driven by Mr. W. E. Brooks of Summerside. Mr. and Mrs. Brooks had left Summerside and were driving to Springfield West, when the boy ran in front of the car.

things he did. I'd warned him. I couldn't see Kay hurt any more."

Johnny said, "But Nancy's always thought she did it?"

"I think so," Irene said quietly.

"She fainted, that night. Later, I told her to get Martin out of there... to make it appear like an accident. She had come there with the gun. She intended to kill Martin. She was frantic afterwards and utterly helpless."

"What did you do?"

"I told her to go back to the house through the woods path. Putting Martin in the car... I don't know how I did it... I drove down to 25-A. I left him there in the field alongside the road. When I got back in the car I felt faint. I didn't know what I was doing. I remembered driving off the road. There was a crash. I think my head struck the steering wheel—"

"It did," explained Johnny.

"She made a gesture with her hands. After that..."

He nodded. "You didn't remember a thing. Yet, Nancy's never been sure. She had planned to kill him. There were clues that would point to her. Yet if you never regained your memory, she was comparatively safe."

Irene Smith sat down. She looked tired. Yet a great burden seemed to have been lifted from her, and she was calm and relaxed.

She told Johnny, "The whole story of my life with Martin—all except the very ending—is written down in my manuscript. Perhaps a jury would believe it. Maybe they wouldn't. Whatever you want to tell them—"

"There's no need for that," Johnny said.

Irene looked at him quickly.

"They would free you, anyway. Knowing what he had done to you... what both Martin and Nancy had done to your life... they'd never find you guilty. You've got a new life ahead of you now. You've got Kay, too. No one knows anything, except you and me. Why not leave it that way, and start anew?"

"And the manuscript?" asked Irene.

"Has been destroyed," Johnny lied. "I'm the only one who ever read it. So forget about that, too. She stood up again. She shook his hand. "I've never met anyone quite like you," she said warmly.

Johnny felt ill at ease. "I... think I'll see Kay for a few moments. The kid's all confused. I'll talk to her."

"Please do, Johnny Saxon."

He went downstairs.

In the library, Johnny smiled as he found Kay. She was waiting for him. Her unusual green eyes were troubled.

"Hey!" he said brightly. "None of that." He flung open one of the terrace doors. He heard rain pattering on the tiles outside. The wind had almost died.

ASTHMA

"Night after night I have sat up in a chair fighting and gasping for breath, choking, wheezing, and coughing all night long. Thanks to Templeton's RAZ-MAH I feel like a new man. Able to lie down, breathe easily, relieved of gasping, choking, wheezing," reports Richard H. Peters, 27 Ashmoor Ave., Sarnia, Ontario.

Templeton's RAZ-MAH is praised by thousands of asthma and bronchitis sufferers. One 65c box will convince you.

He took her by the arm and they swung down along the driveway. The rain pelted their faces and ran down their cheeks. It was cool and refreshing.

"No kidding," Johnny said seriously, "do you really think I still look young?"
