ALLOWANCES UP

The family allowance boost will provide an extra $1 a month—to $6 for children under age six and to $8 for those in the 10-to-12 group. Cost: $24,500,000 in the coming year and $42,000,000 in a full year.

The increase in old age pensions to $46 from $40 a month will cost an estimated $45,000,000 in 1957-58 and $60,000,000 later.

Increases in the sliding scales of payments to war pensioners and recipients of veterans' allowances would be $19,000,000 in the coming year and $25,000,000 afterwards.

The added payments for assistance to the needy between 65 and 69, blind and disabled—which are shared equally with the provinces —would be a maximum of $4,500,000 immediately and $8,000,000 later. The maximum increase in the federal share would be to $23 from $20 a month.

3,000,000 AFFECTED

The government said about 3,000,000 people — not counting the children eligible for family allowances—will be affected by the new payments.

On the income tax side, the major item — estimated to lower taxes $40,000,000 a year if substantially utilized by taxpayers—would allow a tax postponement of up to 10 per cent of income on all retirement savings plans, effective Jan. 1, 1957.

At present, the tax concession applies only to authorized employer - employee pensions schemes. The change will particularly help the self-employed.

A second relatively - major change in income tax will allow a flat $100 deduction against personal tax for medical costs, charitable gifts, and union and professional dues. The government said this might wipe about 150,000 low-wage earners off the tax rolls, besides simplifying tax returns. Deductions over $100 would have to be accompanied by vouchers.

SEEKS AUSSIE TRADE

This change was estimated to be worth about $9,000,000 this year and $38,000,000 a year later.

It beomces effective with returns for the 1957 taxation year.

Another change will allow taxpayers to claim a $400 deduction against taxable income for dependents earning up to $950. The earnings maximum now is $750.

Permissible deductions against taxable income — starting with 1956—will be extended to include full-time nursing home care for a taxpayer and his dependents and cost of full - time care for retarded children.

Among announcements in the budget—aside from changes directly affecting federal taxpayers —was the statement that all provinces except Ontario and Quebec have indicated they will continue to rent out their direct tax fields to the federal government in return for annual payments during the next five years.

Canada plans to seek new trade negotiations with Australia, Mr Harris also announced. And Canada might seek tariff changes on steel, rubber and other products at fall discussions among countries in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

MUST MAINTAIN GUARD

Dealing with tariffs, Mr. Harris also announced immediate tariff reductions on 15 imports ranging from musical instruments to railway freight cars.

The 53- year -old Mr. Harris, whose budget may be expected to provide a fair amount of ammunition for this summer's general election campaign, indicated in his budget speech that his abstinence from sweeping tax cuts is in line with a conservative fiscal policy to guard against inflation.

He said there are signs that inflationary pressures are abating but it would not be wise for the government to let down its guard.

"Too hasty action would imperil the success we have achieved so far," he said, "and an inflationary rise in prices could take away from our people far more in rising costs than they would benefit from even large reductions in tax rates."

The minister's prospective surplus of $152,000,000 would compare with one of $232,000,000 which the government earlier this week estimated it would have for the fiscal year that ends March 31.

A year ago, Mr. Harris forecast a surplus of $113,000,000 for the current year, but the swelling economy threw his figures off.

NO SPENDING DETAILS

His revenues and expenditures for the current year—both subject to final tally about mid-August when all accounts are in—are respectively $5,149,000,000 and $4,867,000,000.

The 1957-58 revenue figure is just $31,000,000 higher. The spending figure is up $231,000,000.

While no spending details were included in the budget figure, it is known that the coming year's outlawy will include $100,000,000 for the government's proposed Canada Council to develop Canadian culture.

Mr. Harris also advised Parliament he intends to use a device he employed in 1956-57 to drain off $100,000,000 from the prospective surplus.

While he is under no compulsion to do it, he proposes adding $50,000,000 apiece to the government's superannuation fund for civil servants to improve its actuarial status and to the reserve against losses on the cashing in of government assets.

Had he elected to hang on to these sums, the apparent surplus would have been $252,000,000.

With the forecast surplus, Mr. Harris said, Canada's net debt will have been brought down by this amount from the figure of $10,998,000,000 at the end of the present fiscal year.

Travel Spending By Visitors And Canadians Higher

OTTAWA (CP)—Travel expenditures by visitors to Canada and by Canadians in other countries, particularly the United States, rose to record peaks during 1956.

The bureau of statistics reported Thursday, however, that for the sixth successive year Canadians spent more in other countries than foreign travellers left in Canada.

Foreign visitors to Canada in 1956 spent an estimated $335,000,000, up 2.1 per cent from the previous high of $328,000,000 in 1955. At the same time Canadians spent $497,000,000 in other countries, an increase of 10.7 per cent over the previous record of $449,000,000 in 1955.

As a result Canada's travel account for 1956 showed a deficit of $162,000,000, a rise of 33 per cent over 1955's previous high of $121,000,000.

U.S. residents visiting Canada spent $308,000,000 in 1956, compared with the previous record of $303,000,000 in 1955. But Canadian travel expenditures in the U.S. rose to $391,000,000, from $363,000,000 the previous year.

RECORD DEFICIT

That caused a record deficit of $83,000,000, the fifth in a row. The 1955 deficit, also a record, was $60,000,000.

Visitors from other countries left $27,000,000 in Canada, against $25,000,000 a year earlier. Canadians travelling abroad, however, spent $106,000,000 up from $86,000,000 in 1955, resulting in a travel account deficit of $79,000,000, compared with $61,000,000 in 1955.

A record number of persons crossed the Canada-U.S. border in the year. Crossings totalled 54,743,200, an increase of three per cent over 1955.

The number of Canadians visiting other countries also rose to a new high. Re-entries by Canadians returning from the U.S. rose to 27,100,000 from 24,800,000, a gain of more than nine per cent. Canadians returning direct from visits to overseas countries rose 20 per cent.

Ireland's Division Tends To Become More An Economic One

By KEN METHERAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

BELFAST (CP)—In Republican Dublin a bus conductor hands a passenger a ticket, then politely accepts the fare.

Across the border in Northern Ireland, Belfast conductors carefully pocket the money first.

This difference in outlook reflects the real barrier to removal of the 200-mile border separating the 26 counties of the Irish Republic from the six countries of British-aligned Ulster.

Like the Belfast conductor who doesn't believe in taking payment for granted, Northern Irishmen are, above all, canny businessmen. The truth is that the Irish Republic has little to offer them in its continuing bid to end partition.

RICHER STATES

The six counties, with a population just over one third that of the Republic, are outpacing the South in both agricultural and industrial production. In 1955 exports from Northern Ireland totalled £267,475,000, more than double the Republic's £110,300,000 figure.

And the North, sheltering under the protective umbrella of Britain's comprehensive social services, offers unemployment, sickness and retirement benefits and family allowances that are far superior to those in force in the Republic.

It is for this reason more than any other that Northern Irishmen scoff at recent tentative suggestions for ending partition made by two prominent Irishmen—former Prime Minister John A. Costello and John Cardinal D'Alton, Roman Catholic primate of all Ireland.

SEPARATE HOUSES

Both suggested formation of a federal state with North and South retaining their separate legislatures.

But some powers, such as responsibility for foreign affairs, which the British Parliament now exercises over the six countries, would be transferred to a parliament for the whole of Ireland.

Cardinal Dalton suggested that if partition ended, Ireland should return to the Commonwealth on the same basis as India.

Viscount Brookeborough, outspoken prime minister of Northern Ireland, says: "It is our unshakable determination to live within the United Kingdom itself. Anything short of that would be unthinkable."

But the old religious differences between the Roman Catholic South and Protestant North are disappearing.

HATRED VANISHING

The mayor of Dublin, Robert Briscoe, is a Jew and in the recent election headed the poll for Dublin South West. Erskine Childers, a Protestant, is a leading candidate for a cabinet post in De Valera's new government. In the North, the government's senior legal adviser is a Roman Catholic and Ulster-appointed judges include two members of the same faith.

The old, deep-seated hatred of Britain is vanishing in the Republic. In Dublin homes and pubs one finds much sympathy for and understanding of the recent British intervention in Egypt. Irish newspapers give prominent play to activities of the Royal Family and Britain is a favorite destination for young men and women emigrating from Ireland.

Despite this mellowing of the old ideological feelings that brought about partition 35 years ago, the widening economic gulf between the two sections of the island makes a solution of the problem as remote as ever.

Dutch Ship With Immigrants Aboard Damaged In Collision

THE HAGUE (CP)—The hull of the Halifax - bound Dutch liner Waterman, carrying 812 passengers including Hungarian refugees, was ripped open Thursday in a collision with an Italian freighter 600 miles from Ireland.

No casualties were reported when the Waterman and the freighter Merit collided in dense fog. Both ships reported they were in no danger.

The Merit, 7,174 tons, resumed her voyage to Hamburg from Genoa after a radio message saying she was in no difficulty.

The Waterman carried 312 Hungarian refugees en route to Canada, 450 Dutch immigrants, 200 for Canada and 250 for the United States, and 50 other passengers.

She swung around at the collision scene and headed for Brest.

In Rotterdam, it was reported the Dutch emigrant vessel Zuiderkruis will sail today for Brest to pick up the passengers of the Waterman, which had been scheduled to reach Halifax March 20 and continue on to New York the following day.

Miss Nel Slis, an Associated Press correspondent who was aboard the Waterman, reported that passengers and crew marched to lifeboat stations in sounded.

NO PANIC

The lifeboats were loosened but not lowered.

There was no panic during the 45-minute stay at the lifeboat stations. Whe 54-year-old Captain J C. Flag calmly called of the alarm, routine meals, in four shifts, were resumed.

Loudspeakers told the passengers that the Waterman was returning to Europe. The immigrants, especially the Hungarians, appeared confused and disappointed.

The Zuiderkruis was expected to reach Brest Sunday. A third Dutch emigrant ship, the Grote Beer, meanwhile will be sent from New York to Rotterdam to take a group of immigrants, including 500 Hungarians from Salzburg, to Australia. The Zuiderkruis had been scheduled to make that trip.

CNR And TCA Each Has A Big Surplus For 1956 Operations

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's two big publicly-owned transportation systems—Canadian National Railways and Trans-Canada Air Lines —had hefty surpluses in 1956.

The CNR's of $26,076,000 was its largest in peacetime and second-highest in its 33-year existence. TCA's net of $1,556,000 was its sixth in a row.

Both companies cashed in on the gathering momentum of the Canadian economy with record volumes of traffic, though the rail system looked for a smaller surplus in 1957.

The 1956 reports of the two concerns, along with a sketch of the CNR's finances for 1957, were tabled in the Commons Wednesday.

While TCA made no forecast of 1957 financial operations, the CNR in the budget it must present to Parliament called for a surplus sharply reduced to $7,700,000 despite predicted record revenues of $800,000,000. Under the CNR's budget, expenses would be going up even faster than intake, partly due to rising labor costs.

PLAN IMPROVEMENTS

Apart from the CNR's operating budget, the company also told Parliament it expects to spend this year $268,700,000 on capital account for rolling stock and other improvements to the road.

For 1956, the CNR had a year exceeded in surplus only by the traffic-jammed wartime year of 1943, when the company came up with a surplus of over $35,000,000.

The 1956 surplus compared with one of $10,700,000 the year before and a deficit of $28,800,000 in 1954.

In 1956, the CNR had operating revenue of $774,800,000 and operating expenses of $703,000,000, both peaks.

TCA's gross for 1956 was $91,306,000, a leap of 18 per cent from $77,428,000 the year before. Expenses went up somewhat along the same scale.

Civilians Hold Varied Jobs In Defence Dept.

OTTAWA (CP) — Chimney sweeping is not a lost art, at least not in the defence department.

In fact, one of two civilian chimney sweeps employed by the department received a 54-per-cent increase in wages last fall—to $3,700 from $2,400 a year.

Navy chimneys are apparently dirtier than army chimneys, however. The sweep employed by the navy at Esquimalt, B.C., is down for $3,936 this year in the defence department appropriations submitted to Parliament.

The army sweep is employed by No. 6 Works Company at Halifax. The RCAF has none.

The navy's sweep, incidentally, doesn't clean out ships' funnels. He removes soot from the chimneys of shore buildings, just like the army sweep.

The navy has eliminated the job of "water boy"—he used to carry drinks to Esquimalt workmen far removed from a water fountain—but it has a "loftsman," three "holders on" and four "laggers."

A loftsman lays out full - size shipbuilding patterns on a floor in a loft, just like a dressmaker.

The "holder on" is the man who holds a backing tool against a rivet while the riveter uses a rivet gun from the other side of the steel plate. This job is also known as "backer up."

The "lagger" covers steam and refrigeration pipes with insulation.
