Henry George on the Land Nation-alization Question.

Henry George on the Land Nation-
alization Question.
Henry George, at a largely attended meeting of churchmen in London, on the 20th, explained his views on the land nationalization question. He declared that as a matter of abstract justice, no compensation should be awarded present land owners. If the State made land common property, by taking the whole rental value in taxation for public purposes, very little hardship could be done. If those urging nationalization declared this to be their intention, as soon as they obtained power, the value of land would decline. Practically the whole process amounted to carrying the principle of free trade to its logical conclusion. He believed that on this basis the free trade battle in America could be fought and won.

The Highland Brigade.

I.
Of legions of valor let Frenchmen still boast,
Of victories, conquests they've won and they've lost,
Of guardsmen, invincible, till "mort St.
Jean,"
And bold cuirassiers, cased in steel, burnished sheen;
A legion of bravery, I hold in my view, No sham-fighters, sporting at fancy review,
But valor's true graduates, bravery's pride,
That band, need I mention, the Highland Brigade.

II.
Oh! whence came those valorous heroes of earth?
What far country owns them, what land gave them birth?
For their bonnets are plumed with wild birds o'er the sea, And the garb of old Gaul dangles proud o'er their knee;
They came from the North, near the rise of the sun, Where the Forth and the Tay, and the bright rivers run, Where the hills are empurpled with red heather spread,
Oh!—that's the bright home of the Highland Brigade.

III.
Those heroes of valor were born to be free,
Their foe must surrender, be vanquished or flee;
The smoke of the battle on them lightly tells,
As the blue curling mist of their own native hills;
We've heard of the phalanx of old Macedon,
And brave Roman cohorts, the old world that won,
But grant me the Gael, with the sweep of his blade,
And I'd walk thro' their ranks with the Highland Brigade.

IV.
Who landed with Wolfe, on Canadian soil?
And left us a charter, free land to the Pole?
Who landed in Egypt, with Abercrombie, And sent home Napoleon adrift on the sea?
Atar in the East, neath the morning stars ray, Afar in the West, in the sunset day, Where Britain owns empire, or foe to upbraid,
Her sinew of war is the Highland Brigade.

V.
Let India's revolters attest to their fame,
And Lucknow and Cawnpore their process proclaim;
Let famed Balaklava, with "thin searlet lone," Confront Cuirassiers and repulse in quick time;
Such valor has history failed to record, Since Greece met her foes, with the splendid exhibition of valour and intrepidity.
There was no flinching anywhere along the line. The Irish Regiments shared with the Highland Brigade and the English Guards the honours of the engagement. It is an achievement of which the nation has reason to be proud.

VI.
Now Egypt revolted, has drifted to war, And Britain concentrates her troops from afar,
To tame the wild Arab, with cannon and shell,
They trace the hot sand Alexander trod well;
At famed Tel-el-Kebir he builds his stronghold,
And marches his forces the foe to en-fold;
His walls and entrenchments, with cannon arrayed, Were won, and the brunt, by the Highland Brigade.

The most beautiful woman in the world, "or champion beauty," has just been found at Pesh, thanks to the municipality, which, instead of concerning itself with corporation dinners, main drains and lighting, has instituted an international beauty tournament. Out of 150 candidates —the number must surely be a telegraphic mistake—only ten obtained prizes, and the first prize, a diamond bracelet, was taken by Cornelia Szekey, aged 20. The danc-ette is a brunette, brilliant eyes, whose figure, supple as a twining creeper, recalls the type of the ancient Greek statues. Her photograph will not be ready for some days, owing to a little accident which happens even to English ladies, her dress not having come home from the milliner, but it will be soon sent to every illustrated paper in the world, and we shall have an opportunity of judging. Meanwhile, before it arrives, no doubt numerous challenges will be hurled to Cornelia from Europe, Asia, Africa and America, and the railway companies to Pesh may be expected to declare vast dividends, reaped from the transit of wagon-loads of discontented beauties arriving from all parts of the world.

Current Notes.

Trouble has broken out between the English and French speaking population of Quebec over the appointment of a civic official.

The English officers of highest rank wounded at the battle of Tel-el-Kebir was General Willis. His wound is not considered dangerous.

One Julius Zenitzky met a singular death on Saturday in Chicago. He went into an ice house at Brand's Brewery and was found an hour afterwards unconscious and nearly frozen. He died soon after from the effect of the chill.

A Connecticut correspondent of the Farmer of that State, says he has "Bessa-ria corn" sixteen feet high and still growing. The leaves are six to eight inches broad, and the topmost ear thirteen feet from the ground.

Advises from Shanghai state that upon inquiry of the British troops now stationed at Hong Kong as to their willingness, if called upon, to proceed to active service in Egypt, Major-General Sargeant found them all eager and enthusiastic on the subject.

General de Tengeroff informed a correspondent of the London Times that if England and Russia should mutually arrange their interests in Central Asia, they would have "no need to quarrel. If ever their should be serious trouble, it would not be the fault of Russia.

Mr. John L. Bashford, M.A., of Trinity College, Cambridge, has been appointed Lecturer on the English language in the University of Paris. His predecessor, Dr.
A. S. Napier, an Englishman also, has been appointed to a Professorship at Göttingen—a rare if not unique distinction for an Englishman in modern times.

The steamship disaster on Lake Huron, appears to have been the result of gross recklessness, and it is stated that legal proceedings will be instituted by the Department of Marine at once against the Great North-Western Transit Company for violation of their charter. The boat was only licensed to ply on Georgian Bay, and only permitted to carry forty passengers. She set the law at defiance by attempting to reach French River, and it is certain that she had at least one hundred passengers on board at the time of the disaster.

The Duke of Bedford, the Right Hon.
W. H. Smith, and other gentlemen of wealth and influence in England, are promoting a scheme of emigration from Ireland, in which they expect to be assisted by the English Government. They are anxious, however, that provision should be made in Canada for looking after immigrants on their arrival, and providing them with suitable employment. It is suggested that a society should be formed by prominent Canadian-Irishmen to perform this duty.
As they would probably not be required to contribute any monetary assistance, there should be no difficulty in organizing a scheme by which the strangers would be efficiently looked after.

Commenting on the battle of Tel-el-Kebir, the New York Tribune pays the following tribute to Great Britain's soldiers:—"The battle of Tel-el-Kebir seems to have been well planned and most gallantly fought.
The entrenchments were carried at the point of the bayonet, the troops reserving their fire until they were close at hand and then charging with a precipitate rush, which proved irresistible. It was quick work and thorough. The reputation of the British soldier stands higher to-day for this splendid exhibition of valour and intrepidity.
There was no flinching anywhere along the
Highland Brigade and the English Guards
the honours of the engagement. It is an
achievement of which the nation has
reason to be proud.

Louis, the handsome but eccentric young King of Bavaria, cannot, as is well known, endure to attend a play or opera unless he alone constitutes the entire audience. A short time ago he was indulging this strange taste at the Court Theatre, Munich, when he fell asleep in the midst of the play.
Here was a dilemma. The play could not go on with the audience asleep; and nobody dared rouse him; nor dared the actors for a moment leave their places, for fear of his displeasure, should he chance to awaken suddenly. One impatient actress threw a chair across the stage with a crash, and an actor repeated several lines of his part in stentorian tones; but still the King slept on. Thus everything was at a standstill for several hours, until, next morning, the King awoke, and the weary actors finished the play just in time for breakfast.
