

Strange But True
By F. H. MacArthur

It is a polite Japanese custom in rural centers to stow away in their capacious sleeves food that remains uneaten on their plates. Did you know the original inhabitants of Japan were called Ainu. Today only a few thousand of these hairy, primitive people remain in Japan. They were short, well-proportioned, with intelligent features, and black coarse hair.

Scientists are always coming up with something new in the agricultural field as well as in other fields. In 1940 a new tomato was introduced to the housewives of America. Today it can be purchased half way round the world. It is the Pan American, a hardy, well resistant tomato that has caught the public fancy.

Today our men of science are working on a new variety of tomato plants which will be able to resist more than one disease. Touched by a strange new growth, they will produce huge fruits, some with no seeds.

And sprays containing a new chemical will hold ripened apples in the trees until they are ready for picking. This should prove a great blessing to apple growers in this province and in our sister province of Nova Scotia.

Then, too, we have those so-called "plant hormones". You could hold enough on the point of a jack knife to feed quite an army of plants. Some growth regulators cause fruit to ripen early. Other sprays reverse the process, thinning blossoms in orchards to prevent trees from developing more fruit than can be nourished to good quality and size.

Plant-growth scientists also experiment with the so-called wonder drugs of modern medicine, the antibiotics and the results they are achieving are amazing to say the least.

New antibiotics have been discovered in many plants such as the sweet cucumber, cabbage and others.

From time immemorial a chemical made from tomato leaves and roots, medical researchers have produced sex hormones and testosterone. Even the complex hormone drug cortisone may someday be made.

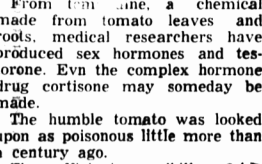

The humble tomato was looked upon as poisonous little more than a century ago.

The efficient weedkiller 2,4-D was first discovered as a growth regulator.

When the scientists first discovered 2,4-D's weed destroying powers, they tested it on a golf course. The 364 question could it be used against animals.

Later a cow was fed grain containing the weed killer powder. Blood samples were taken and showed 2,4-D but the animal was unharmed and the chemical spray could be used safely. So it was released to the public. Today 30,000,000 pounds a year are used.
