MARGATE Pastoral Charge

ined $300 or six months in jail on the charge, arising out of the death of Dec. 22 of Marvin Fullerton. Stettler died from a brain hemorrhage the day after a scuffle outside a Stettler drug store. Justice Harold W. Riley of the Alberta Supreme Court said he felt "a wee bit sorry" for Robins since he did not appear to be the aggressor in the incident. However, the judge noted that the Criminal Code requires a jail term of some sort in a manslaughter conviction and he imposed the three-hour term.

3 Hours Given For Manslaughter

RED DEER (CP) — What could be one of the lightest manslaughter sentences ever handed down in Alberta—three hours in custody—was imposed Tuesday against an 18-year-old Stettler, Alta. youth.

Jack A. Robins also was fined $300 or six months in jail on the charge, arising out of the death of Dec. 22 of Marvin Fullerton. Stettler died from a brain hemorrhage the day after a scuffle outside a Stettler drug store. Justice Harold W. Riley of the Alberta Supreme Court said he felt "a wee bit sorry" for Robins since he did not appear to be the aggressor in the incident. However, the judge noted that the Criminal Code requires a jail term of some sort in a manslaughter conviction and he imposed the three-hour term.
