TELEGRAPHIC NEWS.

SPECIAL DESPATCHES TO THE EXAMINER. Gladstone and the Pope.

LONDON, Jan. 2. Gladstone's telegram, disclaiming the accuracy of the translation of his letter, suggesting the position of the Pope made the subject of international arbitration, led to a correspondence on the subject, which will appear in the Tablet to-morrow. Cox, editor of the Tablet, says the letter from Gladstone clearly refers to the present position of the Pope, and he places side by side Gladstone's letters in Italian and the translation in English, proving the accuracy of the translation which Gladstone declared untrustworthy. Gladstone's words in writing to the Marquis de Riso are as follows: "I consider the question of the Pope's position of such importance as to merit the intervention of international arbitration. I boast I was the promoter of international arbitration in connection with the Alabama question. By such methods it would be possible to unlock the difficulty relating to the Vatican."

The Pall Mall Gazette upholds the accuracy of the translation and asks Gladstone to explain what he means if he does not mean international arbitration in the Pope's position. NEW YORK, Jan. 2. G. W. Smalley telegraphs from London to the Tribune as follows: "The alarm of Gladstone's friends on account of the letter proposing arbitration between the Pope and Italy has taken shape in the suggestion that the letter may not be genuine. One of them hints to-day that, though the text may be different from that which the Tablet assumed, some denial or explanation from Gladstone himself has been anxiously awaited. Meantime the most devoted among his English organs have avoided comment and still refrain from publishing the letter. There have been very strong expressions from various quarters against the policy of interference from outside with the relations between the Pope and Italy. Even if Gladstone should contemplate nothing more than agitation against Italian law with reference to the priests, that, too, would be deemed an indiscretion of a grave character."

A Great Strike.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2. The Daily News says: "Whether the country will experience the greatest railroad strike in the history of modern industries, between labor and capital, will depend upon the meeting at the general offices of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad to-morrow morning. Chairman Cavenor, of the Grievance Committee of nine, this morning gave the first hint of the consequences of a failure of the Burlington officials to accept the proposition of the Brotherhood. "We have consulted the best legal authority," said Cavenor, "and know just what we can do. If the Burlington road does not agree to our reasonable proposition, the Brotherhood will at once commence a struggle, and it will never surrender. The country far and wide will hear from us. It will be as radical a move as was ever made by a labor organization." It is understood the counsel employed by the Brotherhood is Robt. G. Ingersoll.

National Liberal Club.

LONDON, Jan. 2. The National Liberal Club meeting to-night elected 215 town members and 114 country members. Six hundred and seventy-five members resigned from the club. At a meeting to-night several liberal speakers warned the Gladstonians while the club became really a liberal organization, instead of being associated with the name of a single leader, its influence would be lost. The Gladstonians say that notwithstanding the large number of secessions from the club the new subscriptions amount to 12,500 pounds.
