

Back Literature.

A little nonsense now and then, is relished by the wisest men.
A writer says that "Napoleon lost Waterloo because he was sleepy." We always thought that it was Wellington who took a "little nap" about that time.

"Tell me," said one French child to another, "which would you rather lose, your father or your mother?" "I don't know." "I do. I would rather lose mamma, because it's papa who makes all the money."

"I say, Mister, I don't suppose you don't know of nobody who don't want to hire nobody to do nothin', don't you?" The answer was, "Yes, I don't."

Too True.—The man who is awfully urbane to his wife before strangers, is generally "her base" behind their backs.

Man may be a worm; but a glance at the dandies proves that he is not the worm that never dyes.

Bacheloric exclamation—"a lass! Maidenly exclamation—"ah men!"

On a certain occasion an officer of the royal army was introduced to a party of ladies having the rather singular name of Captain Silk; whereupon one of them saucily remarked, "You have a queer name for a soldier, sir." "The very best in the world," he replied, "for silk can never be worsted."

"How well he plays for one so young," said Mrs. Partington, as the organ boy performed with a monkey near the door; and how much his little brother looks like him, to be sure."

"Have you ever broken a horse?" inquired a horse-jockey. "No, not exactly, but I have broken two or three wagons," replied Simon.

A German wrote an obituary on the death of his wife, of which the following is a copy:—"If mine wife had lived until next Friday she would have been dead slush two weeks. Nothing is possible with the Almighty. As the tree falls so must it stand."

What's the difference between a woman hawking around embryo salmon, and a Charlotetown news boy? One is trying to sell her salmon Eggs, and the other to sell Eggsaminer.

Miscellaneous.

SHE NEVER LEAVES HIM.—Look at the career of a man as he passes through the world; at man visited by misfortune! How often is he left by his fellow-men to sink under the weight of his afflictions, unheeded and alone! One friend of his own sex forgets him, another abandons him, a third, perhaps, betrays him; but woman, faithful woman, follows him in his afflictions with unshaken affection; braves the changes of feeling, of his temper, embittered by the disappointments of the world, with the highest of all virtue; in resigned patience ministers to his wants, even when her own are hard and pressing; she weeps with him, tear for tear, in his distresses, and is the first to catch and reflect a ray of joy, should but one light up his countenance in the midst of his sufferings; and she never leaves him in his misery while there remains one act of love, duty or compassion to be performed. And at last, when life and sorrow come to an end, she follows him to the tomb with an ardor of affection which death itself cannot destroy.

THE ORDER OF THE GARTER.—Queen Victoria, with her own hands, lately hung the ribbons of the garter on the neck of the Sultan.—There can be but twenty-five Knights companions, though there may be "Extra Knights," like his Majesty the Sultan, and among other famous personages, like Henri Quatre, Christian the Fourth of Denmark, and Gustavus Adolphus. Sometimes the garter is made resplendent with jewels. That worn by Charles the First on the scaffold contained four hundred and twelve diamonds, and was bought by Ireton for $10,250; but the normal type of the decoration is a strip of dark blue velvet, edged with gold, and having also a gold pendant and buckle.

PARENTAL INFLUENCE.—Parents should always be aware that their conduct before a child in word or deed, forms a part of its education. They create the moral atmosphere for good or evil their little ones must breathe. It is common to find the public and private life of public men very different. The explanation is that a man's public life is what his public education has made it, and his private life has been formed by the influences and associations that have clustered around him in the home of his childhood. Example is the best of all teachers, or the worst, as the home may be the best, or worst, of all schools. When they are the former, keep your children at home; when they are the latter, reform them, or pack your boys and girls off to boarding schools.

WAR WITH ENGLAND.—WHAT IT MEANS.—The New York Commercial Advertiser enquires—"Do any of those writers, who talk so easily about war with England, know what it means? If they do, they must be aware that any loose talk of this kind is injurious, and even wicked. If they do not, and yet wish for their own purposes to foment a needless war with that country, we will tell them what it does mean. It means a struggle which England must regard as one for life or death, and in which it will be prodigal of life and treasure, both to be expended with more determination than it showed in the long war with the first Napoleon. It means a war in which our strength would be fully taxed, and from which, with the sea for our battle-field, we should emerge with untold debt, no matter what the result of the conflict. And it means an absolute severance of the two great nations that speak the language and use the institutions that are destined to govern the world, and we trust, for the world's benefit. If this is necessary, we will do our part in it like men with a clear knowledge of consequences; but, if it is not necessary, we will refuse to be hounded on it, even if the voice be that of a charmer."

Agriculture.

SEASONABLE.—The following extract of a letter from a friend, contains a suggestion or two that may be beneficial to some of our readers:—

"The Winter though rather long, has been very favorable for farmers generally, sufficient snow to make good sleighing for visiting one's friends, and good sledding for getting out fire wood, saw-logs to the mills, and poles for fencing; all of which, every prudent farmer has of course attended to. It will soon be time to look after fences, repair and fix up where necessary, and get them all in order before the Spring work commences; to have good fences should be the aim and pride of every farmer, it enables him to feel pretty certain that he can keep his cattle in his own pastures; and his neighbours' cattle from running over his pasture and fields, thereby saving much valuable time, and often angry words and ill feeling, which between neighbors, ought always to be avoided."

Old currant bushes are among the most unpromising things with which man has to deal; their tangled and misshapen stalks present a puzzle to the novice. Whatever is done should be undertaken during the first mild spell, as the currant pushes very early. The bush will probably have numerous shoots starting from below ground, or near the surface; cut out all but four or six of these, according to the size of the plant, leaving only the most healthy looking ones, and taking care to have these as equally distant as possible. The fruit is borne on wood two or more years old. One-year-old wood is distinguished by its different color and small buds. Cut out all weak shoots of this kind, and shorten the stronger ones two-thirds or one-half. Manure around the bushes, and when dry weather approaches, mulch. Make the old bushes do their best, and start a new plantation which will come into bearing in two years.

THE MANAGEMENT OF HOT-BEDS.—The making of a hot-bed is a very easy matter; when it is done, it has to be cared for, and here is where many fail. The plants in the bed, naturally tender from the manner in which they have been raised, are in a confined space, with a heating medium below them which gives the air in which they are enclosed as high a temperature as they can well endure. If now this already heated space be made still hotter by the direct rays of the sun, the tender and succulent plants at once perish. As soon as the plants are up, the bed must have not only daily attention, but at least twice daily—morning and afternoon. In the morning, about nine o'clock, the upper edge of the sash must be raised by means of a wedge-shaped block, the opening being more or less, according to the interior temperature and the heat of the sun. This operation is termed "airing" and by proper attention to it, injury from overheating may be avoided. In guarding against danger from heat, that from the opposite extreme should not be incurred. The sashes are to be closed in the afternoon when the force of the sun has abated, and on cold days opened very slightly, or not at all. Watering, when required, is to be done from a watering-pot with a very fine rose, so as to compact the earth as little as possible. Weeds are sometimes troublesome in hot-beds, and they should never be allowed to get a start.—American Agriculturist.

SOWING CLOVER SEED.—Test the seed, unless it is known to be good. To do this, take a saucer half full of sand, pat it level, sprinkle on a known number of seeds, lay a piece of muslin over them, and put a light layer of sand upon it; keep all moist, and after a few days, see how many seeds germinate. Before sowing clover, practice taking a pinch for a cast between the thumb and two fingers, doing it many times, until the same quantity is taken each time. The chief advantage of sowing upon a light fall of snow is, that the evenness and regularity of the casts may be seen. To sow well requires practice. The field should be paced, the amount of seed estimated, then measured out, and divided, for a beginner, into as many equal parcels as he will need to test the accuracy of his sowing. It is best for a very raw hand to sow half the entire lot of seed, making it cover the whole field, and then, going at right angles, to sow the other half. A good way is, to wait until the seed starts and shows spots which have too little and then scatter on some additional seed, so as to remedy the defect.

Wise SAYINGS.—We have gathered a few sayings from excellent authority. They are worth reading, remembering and preserving.
Buy a farm wagon before a fine carriage.
Don't become security for him who waits for the sheriff.
Don't buy a piano for your daughters while your sons need a plow.
Don't leave to memory what should be written; it makes law-suits.
Don't let your horses be seen standing much at the beer saloon; it don't look right.
Don't give the merchant a chance to dun you. Prompt payment makes independent men.
Keep good fences, especially line; they promote good feelings between neighbors.
If you have a yoke of oxen, don't be ashamed of them and give your note for a span of horses.
A decent, substantial clothing for your children, makes them think better of themselves, and keeps the doctors away.
When the labors of the day are past, let good books and newspapers invite the youngsters to the sitting room.

The Spring work has now fairly commenced. Several Farmers are ploughing already. We will endeavor to devote a column of our paper to Agricultural items each. We would invite our farmers and farmer's sons to send us an article on this important subject occasionally. It will do them and us good.
