DEAR MRS. ROSS.—Having tested your "MAGIC HEALER," I wish to express my gratitude to you by this testimonial, which you can use, if you think it will assist you in selling it. ## Golden Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. John McKenzie celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding day on the 10th inst. at their residence, North Rustico. The evening was very fine, and the whole household looked bright and gay in anticipation of a good time. Between the hours of four and five o'clock the guests began to arrive, and by six o'clock the house was pretty well filled with people who by their appearance intended to enjoy themselves.

At six o'clock we were called to tea, and judging from the appearance of the table, our hostess spared no pains in making everything pleasing to the eye and inviting to the appetite. After satisfying the inner man with the good things, we retired to the parlor, where the evening was spent singing, speaking and playing, in which the old folks joined as well as the young. This was kept up till about twelve o'clock, when supper was announced, when each gentleman took his partner and escorted her to the dining room, where the table was spread with a fine sample of the feathered family, such as turkey, goose, duck and fowl. One thing I noticed during the evening was that all the ladies had their escort to the table except four young ladies who were waiting on the table. These young ladies had no escort, over which they grieved a little for fear of being put down as "old maids." The display of presents was handsome and costly, and well suited for those receiving them.

Mr. and Mrs. McKenzie are to be congratulated on their long married life, and we hope and trust that they may be spared many years yet to live together on the earth, and when they are called to part here below may it only be to meet again in Heaven, to dwell together in that happy land where there will be no parting nor sorrow.—COM.

Princess Louise

DISCOVERS A SCULPTOR DEAD IN HIS STUDIO.

Joseph Edgar Boehm, the sculptor, died suddenly in his London studio on the 12th inst. The artist was engaged on a bust of Princess Louise, and the latter called at the studio in relation to the work.

Upon entering the place she found the dead body of the artist reclining in a chair. Shocked at the sight, the Princess fled and gave the alarm.

Mr. Boehm was born in Vienna in 1834. He had resided in England since 1862, and was elected an associate of the Royal Academy of London in 1878. He executed a colossal statue in marble of the Queen for Windsor Castle in 1869, bronze statues of the Prince of Wales and all the royal family, and a colossal statue at Bedford of John Bunyan in 1872. He also executed a colossal equestrian statue of the Prince of Wales for Bombay in 1877, a statue of Thomas Carlyle, and a marble statue of King Leopold of Belgium for St. George's chapel at Windsor. The government gave him the order to execute the statue of Lord Beaconsfield for Westminster Abbey. It is believed that Mr. Boehm's death was caused by heart disease.

Cinnamon and Typhoid Fever.

"L'Universel Illustré," of Paris, November 29th, has the following: "The discovery has just been announced that cinnamon kills the microbe of typhoid fever." M. Chamberland, (a co-worker with M. Pasteur) and M. M. Cadeac and Meunier, at their laboratory Rue Dugot, have obtained proof of the virtue of this new medium. It is needless to enter here into a detail of all their experiments, suffice it to say that the essence of cinnamon is found to destroy the bacillus of typhoid fever in twelve hours. In other words, it acts with an energy nearly equalling that of corrosive sublimate, which in ten hours destroys all microbes. This discovery is invested with unusual importance from the fact that the odor of this essence, that is to say the perfumed atmosphere of our apartments wherein it is set free, has a tendency to attack other noxious germs. Cinnamon is possessed of a most agreeable odor. In the sixteenth century it was the bequest of the aristocracy; and it bids fair to become again fashionable. It will be sprinkled upon our linen, our handkerchiefs, and find its way once more into our toilet-flasks. On the occasion of epidemics we should not hesitate to use it freely in our boudoirs and our sleeping rooms as an antiseptic. Here, at last, is a corrective with a tolerable flavor, one at which none will need to make a wry face.

News Notes.

Montana cattle are crossing the boundary into Canada and stealing their living. The Mounted Police are doing their best to drive off the bovine marauders.

The Newcastle (England) Journal says: "Canada is certainly not a very happy illustration of a country tending, as the result of past experience, to fiscal action on free trade principles. Its first great stride was made by literally shutting out an innumerable of manufactured goods from the United States, and its chief anxiety now is not for the commercial union with its big neighbor, but for adding to its export trade to other countries by some special arrangements of a reciprocal kind. How can it be said, therefore, that Canada has chiefly 'become one of the greatest and most prosperous countries in the world by maintaining her political independence,' when that political independence has been built up by a minister carrying out protectionist principles and a policy the chief aim of which has been to render it the rival and competitor of the United States for the trade of the east and the west? There is a period in the making of any great nation when the principle of adjusting its tariff solely for revenue purposes seems impracticable to an extent that can hardly be recognized by its inhabitants when the same country has attained to vigorous development as a manufacturing and maritime power, such as this country is at the present time. This point never receives the attention it demands from those who quarrel with other countries for not following in fiscal matters our example.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

An Explanation Given.

SIR,—Your correspondent "Justice," in last evening's issue, does me a decided injustice. He says: "In supporting a vote of thanks to the lecturer, Mr. Silas Hodgson, of the P. E. I. Railway, stated that were it not for the Province of Quebec the Dominion of Canada would before this have a prohibitory law." I made no such statement. In reply to an opponent of the Scott Act, who advocated the abolition of that Act in order that we might obtain prohibition, I claimed that as we represent but a very small portion of this Dominion—prohibition being a question for the Federal Government to decide upon—we are powerless to obtain it, as the people of Quebec and the other provinces are evidently not prepared for it. I had previously referred to the backward state of the temperance cause in Toronto, Hamilton, etc. In speaking of Quebec, I had direct reference to Montreal, its chief city. What I saw and learned there very forcibly impressed me with the fact that so far as the people of that city were concerned they had not accomplished much in temperance reform—that they were far behind Charlottetown in both temperance sentiment and practice. Major Bond's telegram published in THE EXAMINER of the 15th inst., stating that "there are 1,100 licensed and 1,200 unlicensed grog shops" in that city supple an additional and most convincing proof of the accuracy of my statement. No doubt temperance sentiment is growing daily in both Ontario and Quebec, but it is far behind that of this province. If such statements, made at a quiet gathering in my own church, are a "studied insult" to the people referred to by your correspondent—well, they must remain "insulted," and your bumptious church reporter can proceed in bringing me to judgment as soon as he wishes. There is one thing for which I am truly thankful, and that is he will not be my judge.

This church censorship is a new idea in our day. As we have heard from several lately through your columns, Mr. Editor, I congratulate you upon your enterprise.

In Darkest Montreal.

HUNDREDS OF UNLICENSED GROG HOUSES—
DENS OF INFAMY IN ABUNDANCE—
A SPOTTER AT WORK.

Two months ago the Citizens' League employed a New York detective named Beers, and, although the fact was ignored by the people at large, the officer in question has for the past eight weeks been making himself acquainted with darkest Montreal. Yesterday Mr. Beers called the members of the Citizens' League together and detailed his wonderful experience in the commercial metropolis.

So astonishing were the facts that it was decided to exclude the press, but the Empire got there all the same, as the following details will plainly show: In the first place Beers has discovered between 700 and 800 unlicensed grogeries from Maison-neuve to St. Henri, and to the number must be added 1,040 licensed saloons doing a thriving business in the same area of territory. Mr. Mercier's provincial police appears to have been a farce from beginning to end, and its leading official is known to be president of a fish and game club—not the swell affair at Lachine—and among its members were 40 or 50 saloon keepers, who comprise some of the most notorious violators of the license law in the city. To make matters worse, the meetings of the club had been held in the government officers' apartments, St. James street, and it was also discovered that because a certain saloon keeper, who did not belong to the club, had opened his place of business on Sunday to sell a few cigars he was pounced upon by the law officers and fined, while club members were allowed to sell with impunity on the Lord's Day. The beau houses, which have become so popular during the last year or two, are reported, with few exceptions, to be so many brothels frequented by low characters, and where youths of the city pass their nights, gamble, drink, and, what is worse than all, contract diseases of an incurable nature. At one of these places visited by the detective the latter related that two girls, completely nude, came out on a stage and danced around for the edification of a score or more of men who were in the room. The houses of ill-fame were taken in en route, and Mr. Beers reports that on a well-known street of half a mile in length only one respectable house is to be found. Billiard rooms were thronged Sunday after Sunday by young men and boys, who for the most part spent their week's wages in these resorts. The officer reported that as far as he could see Col. Hughes, our Chief of Police, was disposed to carry out the law, but that this efficient officer was hampered so much by aldermanic pressure that his efforts were in vain. When detective Beers had become thoroughly acquainted with the leading law-breakers and was ready to report, he sat down and wrote the former that he was in the employ of the Citizens' League, and for them to govern themselves accordingly. This appeared to have a good effect, as Beers noticed that very few places were open last Sunday. The whole matter being laid before the members of the League, the latter said to the philanthropists present: "You now see the state of the city. If you want to better it you must provide us with the necessary funds to carry on the good work." Consequently, quite a large sum was subscribed. The next question that arose was as to the extent of publicity, and John R. Dougall suggested that the secretary prepare a report for the local papers, which will appear no doubt in due time with most of the facts suppressed.

The Ties.

There are marriage ties, and friendly ties,
And the ties which business makes;
There are solemn ties, and merry ties,
And the ties in betting stakes;
There are builders' ties, and railroad ties,
Which an actor can recall,
But the HOLIDAY Ties, which we advertise,
Are the prettiest ties of all.
