Foreign Service Expansion Outlined By Under-Sect'y

By MARIAN BRUCE
Guardian-Patriot Staff Writer

Norman Robertson, under-secretary of state for external affairs, outlined the development of the Canadian foreign service last night at Prince of Wales College.

Mr. Robertson's address was the 14th lecture in the Samuel N. Robertson Memorial Lecture series, held annually at the college in honor of a former principal.

Mr. Robertson described the growth of the foreign service from its beginning in 1927 to the present time, and stated that in the past 30 years, there has been a huge expansion of Canadian representation around the world. He said the civil service had become "a real instrument for national unity."

The subject matter of the lecture was appropriate for such an occasion, Mr. Robertson said, in view of the fact that one of the pioneers in the development of the foreign service was Sir Joseph Pope, an Islander, and graduate of Prince of Wales College.

Canada had only three foreign legations, and experienced no great expansion, during the 1930s he said, but the war forced two great changes on the Canadian government, he said.

MAIN LINK

London had previously been the main connecting link of Commonwealth countries, who, during the war, embarked on a program of diplomatic cross-representation. The second change came through the awareness of the diplomatic and political importance of countries in Latin-America.

The war-time foreign service, he said, was built around the core of a previously established professional career service.

The years up to the present time have seen an expansion of the Canadian foreign service, with persons from every Canadian province participating in Canadian representation throughout the world.

Mr. Robertson was introduced by Dr. Frank MacKinnon, principal of Prince of Wales College, who said Mr. Robertson had a wide experience in the civil service. His duties in the external affairs department included serving as high commissioner to Great Britain and as Canadian ambassador to the United States.

A native of British Columbia, Mr. Robertson also has ties with this province. His parents were Islanders, and his father, Dr. Lemuel Robertson, was a graduate of Prince of Wales College.

Mr. Robertson was thanked at the close of his address by Premier Walter R. Shaw, who welcomed him as "a distinguished Canadian of distinguished parentage."

UNVEILS PLAQUE

Following the lecture, Mr. Robertson unveiled a plaque to the memory of two former Islanders who became eminent in the field of education: Dr. Lemuel Robertson, his father, and Dr. George Robinson. Both men were pioneers in the establishment of the University of British Columbia.

Dr. MacKinnon read letters of greetings from the president of UBC, and from Dr. Norman MacKenzie, retired president.

QCHS Home & School Ass'n Has Debate Led By Students

Debating has been revived at Queen Charlotte High School. This week, through the efforts of the Home and School Association, students, parents and teachers vied for verbal honors as they debated the resolution, "That the average home of today is fulfilling its highest obligation to the child."

Both teams were captained by grade 10 students, with the affirmative side of the argument being upheld by Marilyn Norris, assisted by Elmer Power, Birchwood teacher and Brig. W. W. Reid representing the parents. Michael Finley, also of grade 10, led his negative team to an unanimous victory. His colleagues for the negative approach to the topic, included Gordon Bennett, registrar at Prince of Wales College and Mrs. Gordon MacDonald, defending the cause of parents in the debate.

Arguments were clearly and skillfully stated and the decision in favor of the negative team was reached by a panel of judges, headed by Mrs. Evelyn Cudmore, Arthur Laws and Thomas Lothian. Members of the grade 10 student body were also in attendance.

During the evening, Reginald MacNutt made a presentation to J.A.S. Williams, former principal of the school, who has always been active in the work of Home and School and was once the president of the Queen Charlotte association.

A brief business session was held following the debate, when the acting principal, Wendell Horton, welcomed a new member of the teaching staff, Miss Nancy Gillis, a graduate of St. Dunstan's who took her teacher training at Toronto University and is now teaching history, algebra and arithmetic in grade 10.

RINK IN USE

A large sheet of outdoor ice is now in constant use at the school and the appreciation of the association was expressed to Jack Ready of the physical education department for his untiring efforts in making this rink a reality. Plans have been made to hold a moonlight skate on Feb. 13, and the general public, old and young alike, is invited to don the blades and enjoy the outdoor skate.

Coffee and dougnuts will be served to those desiring a 'warm up' through the evening and all proceeds will be used to purchase much needed equipment for the gymnasium.

The meeting closed on a cultural note, with Mrs. Thomas Lothian, librarian, opening an interesting book case, filled with top quality paper-back books. These books are on sale to both pupils and teachers at the school and all profits from such sales is a special project of the student council.

The next meeting of the Queen Charlotte association will be March 7, and since this date coincides with Education Week, it is hoped to have a special evening devoted to possible careers for students.
