VICTORIA THE GOOD IN IRELAND

Beautiful Ceremonies at the Reception.

NEVER A REARTIER WELCOME.

The Queen "Pleased to be in Ireland Again."

The Queen was received by the lord lieutenant and the Duke of Connaught when she landed at Kingstown and also by the high sheriff and the lieutenant of the country of Dublin. The address from the corporation of Kingstown was presented, and the Royal procession in four landaus started for Dublin under escort of the King's Dragoon Guards. The roadway was lined with spectators for eight miles, and there was continuous cheering made with every evidence of sincerity and enthusiasm.

The first halt was on Upper Leeson Street, where a quaint and beautiful ceremony was conducted with a stage setting improvised by a scenic artist from the Gaiety theater. This was the opening of the gates of the Irish castle, which had been constructed on the roadway, with massive arches and picturesque turrets. This was a stately scene, rich in color and in reminiscences of old-time tradition. The lord mayor and aldermen were behind the gateway, standing on a crimson carpet and arrayed in scarlet robes trimmed with fur. The mace bearer was full in front with his mace, and the sword bearer was beside the lord mayor, with his ponderous blade in its jewelled scabbard, and with them were the lord mayor's footmen in blue velvet livery, with red trunks and white stockings. Farther back was a long scarlet line of Enniskilling Fusiliers with their band and at the street crossings above and below were guards and well-mounted lancers with their brilliant uniforms. Precedents from Cromwell's time were followed, and permission for the royal entry were passed and granted with stately grace. The pursuivant-of-arms, in crimson costume heavily emblazoned in gold demanded the opening of the gates in the Queen's name. The Ulster king-at-arms, in similar gorgeous array, assisted in those mock negotiations. The lord mayor assented with gracious courtesy, and the gates were opened by half a dozen fantastically dressed servitors who emerged from the recesses of the castle. The gates were again closed until the second trumpet call announced the coming of the Queen, when they were reopened while the multitude of spectators cheered wildly. This ceremony was followed by another equally in accord with traditions. The royal carriage drew up; the lord mayor, who presented the keys of Dublin and the sword of office, kneeling as he held the hilt towards the Queen and the point towards himself; the queen touched the keys and the sword in token that he was to retain possession of them, and listened to the address of welcome which was presented in a magnificent and most gracious reply, characteristic of the Queen's good sense and tact, and the lady mayoress, with charming grace, begged her majesty to accept a bouquet.

The following was Her Majesty's reply in full:—"I thank you heartily for the loyal welcome and good wishes which you have tendered me on behalf of your self and your fellow citizens on my arrival in the ancient capital of my Irish dominion. I came to this fair country to seek a change and rest and to revisit scenes which recall to my mind the warm welcome given to both myself and my beloved husband. I am deeply gratified that I have been able at this time to see again the motherland of those brave sons who have recently distinguished themselves in the defence of my crown and empire with cheerful valor as conspicuous now as ever in their glorious past. I pray that Almighty God may ever bless and direct you in the high functions which you exercise for the benefit of your fellow citizens."

The band played "God Save the Queen," and the spectators with one accord sang the anthem as the procession moved on with the royal standard fluttering above the castle gate between the two Irish flags. This was the only halt in the Queen's triumphal progress through the gaily decorated streets. It was a long circuit—through Fitzwilliam street (Continued on 8th Page.)

PERSONAL.

Dr. McLachlin, of St Peter's Bay, is in the city.

Mr. Frank Hertz came in from the east today.

Mr. A. Lord was a passenger to Picton by the Stanley to-day.

Mr. David Schurman was a passenger by this morning's train from the west.

Mr. A. Milne Fraser, of Halifax, is among the latest arrivals at the Hotel Davies.

Today, it is pleasing to hear, there is a decided improvement in the condition of Mrs. (Dr.) Shaw.

M. John A. Robertson, representing Caverhill & Learmont, Montreal, is a guest at the Hotel Davies.

Rev. W. H. Smith, of Summerside, was a passenger by the Stanley today on a visit to New Glasgow.

Rev. Charles McKay, who left Kensington a few days ago, was presented with an address and purse by his friends at that place.

Captain Malcolm Macdonald, of Georgetown, P. E. I., spent yesterday in Halifax. He left this morning for Sydney. — Halifax Herald.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Wyatt, of Summerside, are in the city. They came in to see Mr. Wyatt's sister (Mrs. R. E. Shaw) who is seriously ill.

The Dowager Countess of Aberdeen, widow of the Fifth Earl of Aberdeen, is dead. She was born in 1814 and was the daughter of George Baillie, of Jerviswood.

Mr. D. B. Macdonald, the well-known representative of J. C. Wilson & Co., Montreal, who has been west in the interests of his firm, returned to Charlottetown this morning.

Mr. Joseph McCarey, of the Post Office Department, returned from Halifax last evening. It is pleasing to hear that his father, who was seriously ill, is now considered out of danger.

Mr. Geo. R. McMahon, of Emerald, who was one of a committee of telegraphers who laid certain grievances before the I. C. R. authorities at Moncton, returned to Charlottetown last evening and went west this morning. The matter in dispute are to be submitted to arbitration.

The death of Mr. St. George Mivart brings to an abrupt close one of the liveliest religious controversies of this generation. The discussion on the question of the inspiration of the scriptures between Dr. Mivart and Cardinal Vaughan, archbishop of Westminster, has been animated, indeed, and has stirred the whole religious world from its beginning.

EMERSONIAN RECITAL.

The Emersonian recital, held in the Kindergarten Hall last evening was largely attended, and the audience listened with marked attention for nearly three hours to the interesting programme. Miss Macmillan and her pupils, Misses Flo, McKenzie, Josie Stentiford, Ruby Rattray, Eva Hyde, Edith Stewart and Bessie Burke, and Messrs. K. C. McPherson and J. J. McGowan, are to be congratulated, one and all, on the success which attended their efforts. The selections were well chosen, and brought out to the utmost the decided elocutionary powers of the readers. The ladies drama, a skit on the woman's rights movement, called "The Champion of her Sex," participated in by all of the young ladies, several of them, taking with ability the parts of two or three characters, was very amusing and showed plainly that woman's rightful kingdom is her home.

A number of musical selections—vocal solos by Miss Florrie Earle and Mr. F. J. Stanley, piano trio by the Misses Carroll and Kelly, orchestral selections and a violin solo by Professor Vinnicombe, added materially to the pleasure of the evening.

POLICE COURT—Two drunks—Joseph McLeod and Peter Krenan—figured before the Honor this morning. They were fined $2 or 10 days each.

Ensign Andrews, the Provincial G. B. M agent arrives this evening and conducts the meeting at the S. A. barracks tonight. On Monday evening the Ensign gives a Lantern service which is very highly spoken of.

For price, fit and finish our new clothing leads the profession. J. B. Macdonald & Co. d & w.
