ADVERTISING RATES

For small advertisements which are ordered for only one or two weeks the charge is cents per inch for the first insertion, and 0 cents for each continuation. Rate cards are furnished on application at the office. Special contract prices at a reduced rate are quoted for advertisements four inches in size or larger, which are to run for three months or longer.

No special notices inserted unless paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line, and under no circumstances will such paid notices appear in the local column.

Special discounts made on all advertisements connected with Church Fairs, Bazaars, Picnics, etc. No notices will be inserted with the same unless the regular rate of 10 cents per line is paid.

That THE EXAMINER is considered by our Merchants and Manufacturers to be the leading newspaper in P. E. Island, and consequently the most valuable advertising medium through which to make their announcements public, is abundantly proved by the fact that in order to accommodate our advertisers we have been compelled to enlarge the paper to its present size.

THE DAILY EXAMINER is for sale by the following agents:—

STORMY DAY THOUGHTS.

The second day of the big storm. All outside work suspended, except caring for the stock. What are we farmers thinking about to-day? Are we thinking at all? If so, are we thinking about our business? If we are, these stormy days will be a help rather than a hindrance, to us. Are there not some problems that have suggested themselves to us during busy times, when we had not time to solve them, that might be solved now?

You remember that last year one of your neighbors had a much better yield of grain than you had. Why was this so? Was his land richer? You say not. Was it better cultivated? You answer, Why, then, the difference? Was it possible that he procured the best seed to be had? Yes, that's the secret. Do you know how he got this seed? Oh, yes, you say; he sent up to Ontario and got it from one of the best farmers. No, that's not just it—though he did import some good seed a few years ago. I will tell you how he got it. In the first of winter, when he had leisure, he and his boys went to the barn and overhauled a number of stooks of grain, and selected the largest and most perfect ears and threshed them out by themselves. In this way he got a pure seed, true to kind and the very best of its kind. Every stalk from this seed would have a chance to do well, as there would be no puny stalks the result of half developed seed. This is the way any of us can improve a variety of grain—by selection.

We cannot afford to sow poor seed and burden the land with sickly puny stalks that yield little grain of a poor quality. Every grain we sow should have a chance to give us a good increase. Thousands of dollars are lost to our farmers every year through neglect to sow good seed.

The difference between good seed and inferior is the difference between a good paying crop and a crop that is grown at a serious loss.

By carefully selecting the best developed heads for seed any cereal may be grown year after year without change of seed and not deteriorate but improve in quality.

Try this and prove it for yourself it will pay you every time.

What is true of grain is equally true of all other seeds. Professor William Saunders, Director of the Experimental Farms, stated in the hearing of the writer at a meeting of the Western Agricultural convention, that the reason our blue potatoes have been grown so long without deteriorating, was that we always selected our best and largest for seed. He said such a thing was unknown in Ontario as a variety of potatoes being grown for such a great number of years without running out,—and the reason was, they planted their culls.

Another problem that may have bothered you last season was, "Why did your neighbor receive so much larger returns per cow from the cheese factory than you did?" This is worth solving, if it should take some time, for it makes all the difference whether you are keeping milch cows for company or for profit.

Perhaps the solution might be something like this.

Your neighbor has been paying attention to the milking qualities of his cows, and by breeding and selecting has established a pretty good dairy herd. This he may have done with very little expense simply by selecting the heifer calves to raise from his best milkers and breeding to a sire of some good milking strain. You may have been going along in some haphazard way believing a calf was a calf anyhow. But now you find a cow is not half a cow at the cheese factory.

You are not going to get a good dairy herd unless you are working on some definite plan with that end in view.

But perhaps you had good cows but did not feed them right. If this was the case, you may as well understand at once that you cannot cheat the cow and get off with it as she will resent any mean niggardly treatment with regard to feed or care she receives. But mind you, she was always respond liberally to good feed and comfortable surroundings. Keep her comfortable and feed her well now, and she will more than pay you for it next summer Establishing a cheese factory in your locality will not make you rich unless you do the fair thing by the cow.

There is no royal road to success for the farmer. Eternal vigilance and the most careful attention to all the details of our business is the condition of success in agricultural pursuits to-day.

We must study to adapt our stock to the particular use we put them to, and if we are going to make a speciality of cheese-making we must have a cow specially adapted for it, or we will not be able to produce cheese cheaply enough to give us a fair profit.

Cheap production is the watchword of success in agriculture as well as in every other business. Profits depend more on the cost of production than on the amount of any product we may have to sell.

We cannot afford to keep such stock, or allow weeds and thistles to choke our grain or we will fail in the battle and be run over and crushed with the advancing wheels of progress and prosperity. But we must return to snow shovelling and leave writing till the next stormy day.

A tubular boiler 1800 years old has been discovered at Pompeii. It is made of sheet metal, probably copper, in the shape of a large amphora or two-handled jar, with a hollow space running half way up the centre of the jar. In this space was placed a cylindrical firebox resting on five firebars, which are tubes three-quarters of an inch in diameter, connecting with the water space. The fuel seems to have been charcoal.

EMILE ZOLA.

The Prince of Realistic Fiction.

Thus looks the master of realism. This is the man who has produced more work, excited more comment, probed more moral anatomies, than any living author. Needing a strengthening stimulant, Zola drinks "Vin Mariani," of which he says that "it is the elixir of life, combating human debility, and giving vigor, health and energy." This is high praise, but it is consonant with what has been said about this great tonic-stimulant, by all the celebrities of the day. "Vin Mariani" is the great nourisher. It strengthens the enfeebled constitution, makes the convalescent strong and well; is very palatable, never produces constipation, but rather aids digestion and assimilation. If you send your name to Lawrence A. Wilson & Co, Montreal, you will receive a little album of portraits of celebrated people, and you will thus learn something, not merely of the celebrated coca stimulant, but of the great people who drink it.

BRANDOLATRY AND LOVERS OF LABELS A THING OF THE PAST.

Judges, lawyers, bankers and merchants of Montreal have visited the Bordeaux Claret Company's cellars, and have pronounced their $3.00 and $4.00 wines, excellent and wonderful value. The cellars contain over twenty thousand dozens of Claret, Burgundy, Sauterne, Ports and Sherries all guaranteed pure and direct from the vineyards of France. Address for price list to the Bordeaux Claret Company, 36 Hospital Street, Montreal.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided for our breakfast and supper a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

THE AFFECTIONS OF ANIMALS.

Curious Attachments of a Foxhound to Cat, Pig and a Duck to a Rooster.

A farmer and naturalist of Gates, N. Y., Henry Carey Dinslow by name, writes about curious affections which he has observed among animals:

"My foxhound, an intelligent fellow, took a fancy to a small pig, and would spend hours in the barnyard cutting up antics to attract the attention of this pig. He was overjoyed when his portly friend would condescend to play at tag or pounce out in most fantastic manner from the darkness of its lair.

"Fowls often show a decided liking for whomever feeds and cares for them, but I well remember a pullet which was constantly at my heels as soon as I entered the poultry-house or yard—not for food, for there was generally some in the pans, but because of a fancy. I had never petted her, yet as soon as I came in sight she left the others and followed, all the time uttering a peculiar low, trilling sound only heard when hens are selecting a nest with the male bird of the flock, and as this flock contained forty or fifty of all ages and both sexes, this peculiarity was quite conspicuous. Did she imagine me an unusually large sort of Shanghai rooster? I did not consider her attentions complimentary.

"A duck raised with others on the place greatly admired a fine white leghorn rooster, and everywhere the rooster went the duck was sure to go. She bowed her head with the rapid quacking sound which is the duck's usual homage to the drake, very much to the chagrin of Chanticleer, who proudly disdained such companionship, and finally, by repeated pecks and sharp digs, convinced the duck, after several weeks of assiduous courting, that she must not aspire to a better male than the old drake with only one little curled feather in his tail and forget the beautiful plumes of the leghorn."

A French Mathematical Prodigy.

Young Vernier, the mathematical prodigy from the provinces, of whose success in obtaining admission to the higher normal school without undergoing an examination you were informed a few days ago, has arrived here, and is the object of much curiosity. This youth of eighteen has a great opinion of his genius, for, when complimented on his wonderful proficiency, he calmly remarked that mathematics were so badly taught in France that he had no trouble in convincing the real savants of the "insanity" of the prevailing methods. He says that during his stay at the Lyons Lycee his master treated him as a "visionary"; but, he adds generously, "I forgive the poor man." Vernier attracted notice by entering into correspondence with several mathematicians of note, who imagined that they were replying to an elderly savant like themselves, and were astounded when they ascertained that he was a schoolboy. The Minister of Public Instruction was informed of the existence of this "infant phenomenon," and promptly admitted him to the higher normal school on his own responsibility. Young Vernier does not intend to repose on his laurels. On the contrary, he is writing for the Academy of Science a work which will be ready by the summer, and which, as he confidently puts it, will bring about "a revolution like that accomplished by Laplace and Newton." He attributes every mathematical discovery to "intuition," of which he evidently believes that he has a considerable stock at his command. It remains to be seen whether young Vernier will succeed in carrying out his threat of demolishing the existing system, and it is quite possible that he overrates his powers. There is no doubt, however, that he possesses exceptional talents, and his career will be watched with interest.—Paris Correspondence London Telegraph.

The Irish Elk.

Perhaps nothing enables the layman to realize the existence of the great Atlantean continent so well as to be brought face to face with some of the remains of that great arena of man's past development. There were giants in those days, as Scripture tells us, and the mighty hunters had mighty game for their prey. The Irish Elk, which stands about fifteen feet high, is one of the best known of these monsters. Its remains are very common in the lake deposits of Ireland, which is the last surviving remnant of Atlantis. The Irish Elk is not a true elk, but intermediate between the fallow and the reindeer. The deer family, so far as discovered, do not extend beyond the Upper Miocene. However the submerged strata have not been investigated. The first warning to the doomed continent came in Eocene times and the final catastrophe in the Miocene period. Has anyone considered the possibility of the enormous antlers having been developed as weapons of defence against the attacks of the aerial monsters of early days?—Toronto Lamp.

To Prevent Cold Feet.

Do you have cold feet? If so, don't increase the thickness of your stockings, but the size of your shoes. The most important rule to follow to obtain warm feet is never to be tightly shod.

Boots or shoes that fit closely prevent the free circulation of the blood by pressure; but when, on the contrary, they do not embrace the foot too firmly, the space left between the shoe and the stocking has a good supply of warm air.

The second rule is never to sit in damp shoes. It is often supposed that unless shoes are positively wet it is unnecessary to change them while the feet are at rest. This is a great fallacy, for when the least dampness is present in the sole in its evaporation it absorbs the heat from the foot, and thus perspiration is dangerously checked. This can easily be proved by trying the experiment of neglecting the rule. The feet will be found cold and damp after a few minutes, although on taking off the shoe and examining it, it will appear to be quite dry.
