Federal Gov't Offers N.S. Full Support On Springhill

HALIFAX (CP) - The federal government has assured the Nova Scotia government of "full support" in any effort to aid the people of Springhill.
Premier Stanfield said Revenue Minister Nowlan gave this assurance to the province at a cabinet meeting here Thursday.
Later in Springhill Mr. Nowlan said he did not know yet what this assistance would be.
The cabinet also named a committee to study the economic future of the stricken town and recommend what can be done to save its economy.
Committee members are Mines Minister Mansson and Labor Minister Pyke, a resident of the town.
Mr. Stanfield said the committee was given these jobs:
1. To maintain contact with the company regarding the future of the shattered No. 2 colliery or any other employment the coal company might be able to provide.
2. To determine through the government's industrial department and Industrial Estates Limited, a crown company building factory properties, whether any new industries could be attracted to Springhill.
3. To make recommendations to the government for action on the economic problems of the town.
The premier said the federal government will be asked to name representatives to work with the provincial cabinet committee.

Rescued Miner Would Like To Become Chicken Farmer

TORONTO (CP) - Levi Milley, 47, one of 12 men who survived six days underground in a shattered coal mine at Springhill, N.S., wants a full-time job on a chicken farm.
In a dispatch from Springhill, Bruce West of the Toronto Globe and Mail quotes Milley, father of a teen-age daughter, as saying: "Chicken raising has sort of become my hobby, but now I think I'll take it up for a living. They aren't going to get me down any coal mine any more."
Milley was interviewed in hospital after his rescue from the Cumberland No. 2 colliery.
"So we found this little bottle in the lunch kit of one of our dead mates and we decided that this bottle, filled about three-quarters full, would be the ration for all of us every six hours. . . no man took more than his share."
Milley said he thought about his flock of 50 chickens on occasion during his underground ordeal.
"I got to thinking a couple of times down there that somebody else would be getting the use of those big, fat chickens. They're all big fellows, some of them six or seven pounds."
USED PILL BOTTLE
Milley produced a small pill bottle.
"That little bottle did an awful lot to save our lives. A few days after the bump, the 12 of us were down to about two cups of water . . ."
"If you're a newspaper fellow, you just put in your story that Levi Milley, former coal miner of Springhill, a chicken-raiser on the side, is looking for a full-time job on a chicken farm some place," Milley said.

Three Americans Awarded Medical Research Prizes

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) - Three American genetic experts Thursday were awarded the 1958 Nobel Prize for medicine for research which may unlock the secret of life.
Prof. Joshua Lederberg, 33-year-old biologist at the University of Wisconsin, was given half the $42,000 prize.
The other half was split jointly between Prof. George Wells Beadle, 55-year-old biologist at the California Institute of Technology, and biochemist Edward L. Tatum, 49, a professor of New York's Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research.
The work of all three prizewinners concerns the basis of heredity - the manner in which characteristics of various types are transmitted from generation to generation.
Cancer research is expected to be strongly influenced by their discoveries.
Beadle and Tatum won their half of the prize for their discovery that genes act by regulating definite chemical events.
Lederberg showed that bits of genetic material can, if introduced into the body of bacteria, be accepted by the bacteria and combined with its own which then become differently constituted.
This process demonstrated the possibility of changing an organism's genetic material by introducing new genes.
It created the possibility of "manipulation" of the substance of heredity and makes possible studies into the functions of organisms under normal and pathological conditions.
Experiments carried out by Beadle and Tatum radically changed thinking on genetic and hereditary research.

Mrs. C. Duffy Named Pres. Of H.S. Ass'n.

The treasurers report showed a small amount of money on hand.
It was decided to hold the meeting on the first Wednesday of each month. Following some discussion regarding school liability it was decided to hold a card party to help defray costs of the undertaking.
The program committee presented a number of questions for discussion. The meeting divided into four groups for discussion periods.
