works in my place of employment, and every night after work she meets her sister's husband and they go out. Although I've told the girl's people about this, they won't believe me. How can people be so blind?
ANSWER: Since the girl is only a fellow worker of yours, I think you are rather overstepping bounds in setting yourself up as her keeper. Your own suspicions are only suspicions, and it is definitely up to the girl's sister, and her parents, to safeguard her morals; there's nothing you can do about it.
