MARY HAWORTH

Teeners Often Pressured Into Relaxing Principles

Dear Mary Haworth: I am a girl 14, with a very serious problem which I cannot discuss with my parents. If they knew about it, they would forbid me the only company of the only friends I have.

You see, I am very tall: five feet, eleven inches. I tower over guys my age, which is quite embarrassing. Also I unfortunately look about 19 years old, which makes me alien to guys 15 and 16.

I feel ungainly and huge around girls my age, who are so much smaller. I have a good figure but can't wear two-piece bathing suits like my contemporaries, because they look indecent on me and I get off-color remarks from boys and a feeling of being weird.

When I finally started feeling included, it was with a boy 17. Soon I knew all his friends. Not only were the girls amisible but lots of the boys were over six feet tall. When I started bringing them home, my folks always liked them but told me they were too old for me.

I'll never forget the first party of theirs I went to. There was drinking and petting and the room was thick with smoke. I tried to gracefully decline the cigarettes and beer but they got disgusted with me. A 20-year-old college junior tried to kiss me, though he had known me less than an hour!

When would I do: shut myself off completely? Or continue to go with this older crowd? Should I start drinking and smoking? Am I being prudish and old-fashioned? Please help me.

T.Y.

Dear T.Y.: Take it easy. Don't lose your footing or your head while making new friends in the older age, tall boy bracket.

Don't let yourself be foolishly overawed or unduly impressed, like a simpleton, by their drinking, smoking and petting performance.

Should they treat you condescendingly for your supposed lack of sophistication, in bypassing beer and cigarettes, just keep in mind (under your hat) that they don't know very much either. What they are doing, in the smoke filled room, is trying to prove they are out from under their parents' thumb.

In dealing with them, your best bet is to act as if you don't have to prove anything. About anything.

Act as if you have a mind of your own, clearly defined. Put this message across in a soft-spoken, non-belligerent, non-defensive way. Act as if you're not a child to be led by the nose. Make your point in a gentle relaxed spirit, but adamant if put to the test.

Don't make a fuss about not drinking or smoking. Just don't do it.

For example, if someone is loudly insistent upon your having a drink, you may accept the filled glass, to the extent of taking it in hand, holding it a while, then putting it aside untouched, or pouring it down the drain unobstrusively. (Just don't drink it).

This casual side stepping of pressure is real sophistication. It is being mature, in the real meaning of the word, by acting from the center of your own philosophy, instead of being pushed around by another's motives, whatever they are.

If someone insists that you must learn to smoke, that your lily-pure behavior is just too babyish for your size and the company you keep, your mature-type reaction should be: "But I don't want to smoke. So I'm not going to smoke. So let's leave it at that, shall we?"

As for kissing, petting and the like, don't kid yourself that others can involve you in these activities without your consent. So if you find yourself being kissed, etc., impertinently, by impromptu admirers at parties, I would suggest that there is something in your manner (not you age), that invites presumption.

Possibly it is your air of uncertainty, stemming from a deep down feeling of being a little girl lost in an alien woods — a kind of Red Riding Hood who is a fair game or passing wolves.

If such is the nub of your present problem, the cause of your dire anxiety, here is my Rx for peace of mind: Recognize the fact that you are physically older than the 14-15 year-olds, and emotionally younger than the 18-20 year-olds in your personality make-up at present. And then just continue growing at your own personal pace.

Above all, don't let the 18-20 year-olds stampede you into playing their games their way. You aren't ready for that kind of risk; and furthermore; they aren't fit teachers. They are now passing through the late adolescent phase of general perplexity, before they hatch out into men and women.

MR. AND MRS. RONALD N. BOCH

Wed At First Baptist Church Couple Now Reside In Alta.

At the First Baptist Church, Charlottetown, Doris Eileen only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred MacRae, Wheatley River became the bride of Dr. Ronald Norris Boch, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Boch, Jr. Eastend, Saskatchewan. Rev. T.W. Howard performed the wedding ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, looked lovely in a full-length white brocaded satin gown, with sweetheart neckline, fitted bodice, long pointed sleeves and bell shaped skirt. Her white tulle elbow-length veil was scalloped and decorated with tiny pearls. Her only jewellery was a strand of pearls and tiny pearl earrings, gift of the groom She carried a cascade of yellow roses.

The bride's attendants, Miss Edna MacMillan, friend of the bride, and Misses George Ann Sheila Carruthers, cousins of the bride, wore street-length gowns similarly styled to that of the bride, in shades of pale bamboo, sea green, and lilac. They carried crescent shaped bouquets of mums, white with centers to match their gowns.

The bride's mother chose an aqua linen sheath with lace top and white accessories; her corsage was of yellow and white carnations.

Dr. Philip Murl, Central Butte, Saskatchewan, friend of the groom, acted as best man. Bloyce MacRae, brother of the bride, and Dr. Ken Aylard, Sydney, British Columbia were ushers.

A reception for 70 guests was held at the Queen Hotel, Charlotttown. The bride's table was centered with a three tier wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom. Rev. Howard proposed the toast to the bride to which the groom responded. A toast to the brides-maids was offered by the groom and responded to by the best man.

Telegrams from the groom's parents, other relatives and friends were read by the best-man. Miss Murlel MacNeill was in charge of the guest book.

For travelling the bride chose a pale blue wool suit with white accessories and a corsage was of pink and white carnations.

Out of province guests were Dr. and Mrs. Philip Murl, Central Butte, Saskatchewan; Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth Aylard, Sydney, British Columbia; Dr. Danny Butler, Guelph, Ontario; Miss Beth Sickle, Hamilton, Ontario; Dr. Emerson MacRae, Oromocto, New Brunswick.

Prior to her marriage the bride was given showers at her home and at the home of Miss Edna MacMillan. The bride and groom were also honoured at a reception at the groom's home.

Dr. and Mrs. Boch now reside in Vegreville, Alberta where the groom is practicing veterinary medicine.

Wed At U.C., Southhampton Couple Will Reside In Truro

The United Church, Southampton, Nova Scotia was the setting for a colorful wedding in July when Joan Beatrice, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Carter was united in marriage to Cecil Vere White, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Freeman O. White, of Murray Harbour, Prince Edward Island.

The church was decorated with baskets of summer flowers and fern; white satin bows with long streamers marked the guest pews.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Harold W. Higgins, pastor of the Church, assisted by Llc. Allan Griffin, B.A. Wolfville.

Mrs. Wm. J. Brown, church organist played the wedding music, and accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Lorne J. Smith, who sang "The Lord's Prayer" while the bride and groom knelt at the altar, and "The Wedding Prayer" during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiantly lovely in a floor length gown of airy organza, featuring a princess line bodice, with sabrina neckline, a bouffant back, long sleeves with lily point styling; the front panel of the gown from neckline to hem was embroidered with sequins and pearls. The chapel length veil of net was held in place by a petit crown of imported lace inserts encrusted with delicate pearls. She wore a pearl and rhinestone neck-lace with matching ear-rings, gift of the groom and carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and white 'mums.

Mrs. Winston Gallagher, Elmsdale, only sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and wore a street length frock of yellow organza over taffeta, with mitts and picture hat to match and carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses and shasta daisies.

The maid-of-honor, Miss Marilyn Manzer, Southampton, wore a street-length frock of orchid organza over taffeta, with mitts and picture hat to match and carried a cascade bouquet of white shasta daisies.

The bridesmaids, Misses Carolee Harrison, Montreal, cousin of the bride, and "Barb" Burgess, Truro, wore matching mint green dresses, styled to match the other attendants', with accessories to correspond and each carried bouquets of shasta daisies.

The flower girl, Cindy Carter, Regina, niece of the bride, was winsome in her frock of pink nylon, white flower bandeau with matching accessories, and carried a bouquet of daisies. The ring-bearer was Brian Gallagher, Elmsdale, nephew of the bride.

Elmer White, Murray Harbour, brother of the groom, was the best man; the ushers were Stuart Beck, Halifax, cousin of the groom; Arthur Carter, Truro, and Sherman Carter, Regina, brothers of the bride.

Receiving with the bridal party were the parents of the bride and groom and the maternal grandmother of the bride, Mrs. L.M. Peck of Elmsdale, an honored guest.

Mrs. Carter, mother of the bride, wore a blue dress of Capri silk, with a draped bodice, white hat and accessories, and wore a corsage of red and white roses.

Mrs. White, mother of the groom, chose a two piece dress of blue printed organza, wearing with it a white hat and accessories and a corsage of red and white roses.

Mrs. Peck, grand-mother of the bride, wore a gown of dusty-rose lace with matching jacket, white hat and accessories and a corsage of pink and white roses.

The reception for 130 guests was held in the church hall, when the catering and serving was done by members of the United Church Women of the Southampton charge.

The bride's table was laid with a white linen cloth, centered with a three tier wedding cake, adorned with a miniature bride and groom; silver candelabra with lighted tapers were placed at each end of the table, while rose bowls completed the decoration on this table as well as on the tables for the guests. An arrangement of white wedding bells and pink and white streamers were used over the bride's table.

The wedding cake was cut in the traditional manner by the bride and groom.

The toast to the bride was proposed by Llc. Allan Griffin, and ably responded to by the groom.

Miss Myrna Lockart, Truro, had charge of the guest book.

For travelling, the bride wore a sheath styled dress of beige lace over satin with a picture hat of beige straw and matching accessories and a corsage of bronze roses. The happy couple left amid showers of confetti on a motor trip to Niagara Falls, travelling via the U.S.A. and returning by the Canadian route.

Mr. and Mrs. White will reside at Hampstead Court, Truro, where the groom is a traveller

ELLEN'S DIARY

Morning Brings Promise Of Simmering Afternoon

"I wish with all my heart the haying was over" a farmwife remarked the other day.

"And why?" we were curious.

"Oh for no reason that I can actually place" she replied. "It's just that I don't like it. And I'm always relieved when it's done."

Personally, we much enjoy it. Always have, even when we share of its work was much more toilsome than it now is. Loved its days: the sweet breath and promise of its mornings, the simmering afternoons, and the dusks that after sunset dropped slowly. We do own to some regret when we hear the first mowing, because that marks the despoilment in part of summer's rich glory. But accepting this, we all in all, enjoy the rest. Enjoy it. But withal confess we have our moments in the heat of its obligations, when the tempo is accelerated, and the workers are harassed because of this or that delay while sun and wind are furnishing ideal weather for them to get on with it, when those lovelies of lines written by the poet Yeats come to mind. Remember them?

"I will arise and go now, and go to Innisfree,
And a small cabin built there, of clay and wattles made,
Nine bean rows will I have there, a hive for a honey bee,
And live alone in the bee-cloud glade.

And I shall have some peace there, for peace comes dropping slow,
Dropping from the veils of morning to where the cricket sings;
There midnight's all a-glimmer, and noon a purple glow
And evening full of linnets' wings.

I will arise and go now, for always, night and day
I hear lake water-tapping with the low sounds by the shore;
While I stand on the roadway, or on the pavements gray,
I hear it in the heart's deep core."

So we too find our moments, in the busy-ness of the haying; to think with some longing of a small lone cabin, "and nine bean rows." And then the day gives us its healing touch, its Balm in Gilead: some small loveliness: a word, a look, a chuckle, a favorite flower, a fleecy cloud on quiet sail above a green-clad hill. And mind and soul are refreshed. It is summer, we recall then, a season of innumerable charms.

"I would think June is the best bridal month or else September" we over-heard a pair of misses discuss this fetching topic recently, on seeing the announcement of a wedding of a pair they knew, arranged to take place this month.

"I agree" the other said. "But" she said dreamily "think too how charming with the wealth of flowers there would be, an August wedding could be! And besides" she added," I have a feeling a bride could be sure of the sunshine and that would be a nice omen for her."

"Do you believe in signs and omens in regard to a wedding day?" the other queried."

That's a matter for some research, isn't it?" she chuckled.

What a pretty night this is! A bewitching thing, all moonmist of silver.

Until tomorrow - - - Diary—
Good - night . . . . .

Use Colorful Curtains To Brighten Your Rooms

By ELEANOR ROSS

WANT a good do-it-yourself idea for curtains, one that requires a minimum amount of "do" with a maximum quick-change result?

Well, you can make pretty instant" curtains with the aid of printed, striped or solid-color pillow cases and small-size cafe curtain rings.

Yes, without even looking at your sewing box, you can have curtains on your windows in a matter of minutes.

Color-Key Rooms

One very effective way of using this idea is to color-key your whole bedroom around a family of colors.

For instance, if you have beautiful pale yellow sheets on the bed, then choose yellow floral-patterned pillow cases for the "curtains".

Attach the cafe curtain rings to the seamed end of the pillow case, slip them on the curtain rod and your room will be bright with both color and flowers and your window will be well-dressed.

Use The Small Size

Again we emphasize: use only small - size cafe curtain rings for a firm grip on your new curtains.

In case you've been guilty of being a "color coward"—something that is a crime in this era of lavish color—here are some facts you should know.

For one thing, today's colored sheets and pillow cases are all vat-dyed. This is important, for it means that the color won't fade, whether it be a pastel or deep tone.

Easy Washing

Obviously, this means laundry simplification — it is no longer necessary to separate the colored pieces from the white linens. Vat-dyed colored sheets can go through the family wash complete with bleach, if necessary. And they will come out just as colorful as when they went in. They can also be done by a commercial laundry without damage to color.

It is a nice idea to choose different colored linens for each bedroom.

One trick with colored linens is particularly geared for summer. Try a "mint color" bedspread. This is simply a pastel green sheet used as a topper on your bed.

Cheap And Easy

Easier to wash and care for than bedspreads, it is also lighter for summer and an inexpensive way for a seasonal color change.

Green is just a suggestion— it could be cool blue, yellow or one of the gay pastel prints.

All of this makes for the growing popularity of fine vat-dyed colored linens and offers a fine idea for wedding shower ideas and for gifts for the veteran homemaker, too.
