RIGHTED AT LAST

BY MARY CECIL HAY

Author of "The Arundel Motto," "Nora's Love Test," "Back to the Old Home," Etc.

"Stop nowhere on your way, Pierce, even for a minute."

"No, sir."
The fly drove on, and Royden turned away, with just one glance of coolest scorn, not unmixed with amusement, at the baffled little clerk. It was a look which recalled to Bickerton Slimp that (to him) unpleasant evening at the Myddelton Arms, when, after his severe castigation, he had been so coolly followed by the quizzical amusement of those long gray eyes.

"I haven't forgotten," muttered Bickerton, clenching his fists, as he mounted the office stairs again; "and this will make me doubly remember. I shall be more than even with him yet—more than even."

CHAPTER XIV.

"Honor Craven,—Come with me today to call upon a friend at a distance. Mrs. Disbrowe provokes me beyond endurance by being too ill to make herself useful in any way. I shall be at the station at one o'clock. Mind you are punctual; I hate unpunctuality, which is only another name for insult. Never mind about your best bonnet, but be sure you have on a clean collar."

EDNA PAYTE.

Honor, laughing a little over this letter, went to seek Miss Haughton and beg the holiday.

"If you like to lower yourself by being at the beck and call of every old woman in the village," remarked Jane, with a not very strict adherence to fact, "I have nothing to say against it. Please yourself."

"Thank you," said Honor, her very tone betraying how, for her, the chief and purest pleasure was won by pleasing others.

"Going with old Mrs. Payte!" exclaimed Phoebe, when she found her cousin dressed ready to start, and surreptitiously enjoying bread and butter beside the kitchen fire. "Well, I do wish you joy, Honor. And going without your luncheon, too!"

"Yes, and without the faintest idea of where I am going, or whom I am going to see," observed Honor, gravely discussing her mild repast.

"How lovely you look," blurted Phoebe, unable to restrain her admiration.

"Good-bye, little Frau."

Mrs. Payte was impatiently pacing the station platform when Honor arrived, and she turned sharply on the girl with a reprimand. But somehow the anger left her eyes when they rested on the beautiful face and figure.

"I don't know how it is," she mused, half closing her shrewd eyes; "Theodora Trent dresses more handsomely and expensively, and Phoebe Owen wore showily, yet they never look as Honor does; she is like an exquisite picture. 'Of course, you're late,' she remarked aloud. 'It's old-fashioned to be punctual. Well, never mind, next century it will be old-fashioned to be late. Now here's the train. Find me a corner seat with my back to the engine. What's the matter? asked the little old lady from her corner seat, as the train rolled on. 'Is my bonnet all on one side?'"

"No, indeed," said Honor, ashamed of being caught in her long gaze; "I was only thinking how very nice you look."

"Ah, I thought something surprised you," observed Mrs. Payte, with a complacent glance into the window beside her, as if it were a mirror. "You miss my brown hat. I left it at home for to-day. It's against my principles to wear a brown hat in Friesland. You know what happened to the traveller who did?"

"No," said Honor, smiling. "I don't, indeed."

"Well, then, you ought to know it."

Trouble in The Stomach

Which Doctors Failed to Remove, Cured by Less Than Two Boxes of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

The experience of Mr. Blackwell is similar to that of many sufferers with chronic indigestion. Stomach medicines will seldom really cure indigestion. The kidneys and liver must be set right, and the bowels made regular and active.

Mr. Joseph Blackwell, Holmesville, Ont., says:—"I derived more benefit from the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills than from any other medicine I ever took, and can highly recommend them for stomach troubles. I was in a terrible state and could hardly work at my trade. I tried most every kind of medicine and doctors, until I was tired doctoring, and before I used one box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I could see that they were helping me, and after taking a box and a half, found that I was cured."

Nearly every family on the continent has used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills or heard of the remarkable cures they have effected. One pill a dose, 25c a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Toronto.

"I am so glad to see you," he said, with quiet heartiness.

"How d'ye do? You seem to have a house full of visitors," observed Mrs. Payte, in a breath, as she glanced toward the windows.

"Only old friends—whom you have met before."

"Oh."
This news seemed to mollify the old lady considerably, and she walked placidly into the midst of these "old friends," more than one of whom had spared, and a feeling deeper and more dangerous than curiosity, to see her driving up in such style, and bringing Honor with her. Theodora Trent turned from the window, with her teeth tight upon her under lip.

"For her to come!" she thought. "How meanly it has been arranged!"

"Theo, my dear," whispered her mother, startled, "that horrible little woman's sharp eyes are upon you, and I believe she would tell anything to either Mr. Keith or Hervey. Don't let her have cause to say you are jealous, my dear. Show your superiority over Honor. She will hardly know how to conduct herself in such a place as this, while you will show yourself quite at home."

(To be continued.)

With Years WISDOM.

The answer to that old query, "What's in a name?" was not hard to define in the case of one justly celebrated Family Remedy that had its origin away down in Maine, which proves that with age comes wisdom about

JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT

An old lady called at a store and asked for a bottle of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment; the clerk said "they were out, but could supply her with another just as good." The engaging smile that accompanied this information was frozen stiff when she replied: "Young Man, there is only one Liniment, and that is Johnson's."

Originated in 1810 by an old Family Physician. There is not a remedy in use which has the confidence of the public to a greater extent. Could a remedy have existed for nearly a century, except that it possess extraordinary merit?
