

Cooperation Key To Success In Games Organization

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

VANCOUVER (CP)—Two years ago Stan Smith, an affable Vancouver trust company executive, went to Helsinki to study the problems of organizing Olympic games, the world's biggest sports spectacle. His object was to apply the lessons learned to the 1954 British Empire Games in this city.

Smith, general chairman of the Vancouver organizing committee of the B. E. Games, received a fancy brush-off. Some Canadian Olympic committee officials on the spot strained to say hello to him. He paid to see the various events, just as hundreds of thousands of others did.

The Canadian committee, hobnobbing with the world's leaders in Olympic and B. E. Games matters, didn't give him a badge. There were conferences attended by men who could give Smith valuable hints, but the invitations went through the Canadian committee and Smith's name wasn't on the list of those who would attend.

ONLY SKETCHY OUTLINE

He was on his own. He returned to Vancouver with only a sketchy outline of the problems and protocol necessary to stage a nine-day nine-day program that would bring nearly 800 athletes from 24 commonwealth countries to compete in the July 30-Aug. 7 games.

The Helsinki trip cost the Vancouver committee nearly $3,000 for a jaunt that appeared at the time to be a joy ride for Smith.

Today, with the Games less than three weeks away, Smith can justifiably point with pride to the greatest co-operative movement in the history of Canadian sport—a movement that embraces hundreds of persons, from Prime Minister St. Laurent to the pretty $50-a-week typist at the Games headquarters in downtown Vancouver

CITIZENS HELP

Public-spirited citizens, from local laundries to the Dominion, provincial and civic governments, have combined to make the games possibly the best-organized since their inception at Hamilton 24 years ago.

Citizens have banded together to donate thousands of working hours and dollars to the games organization. The armed services have donated the services of six bands, precision squads and accommodation for some athletes. Business firms and private individuals have been organized into more than 70 committees to handle among other things, transportation, food, housing, communications, entertainment, equipment and medical services for athletes and officials.

"There will be kinks. We'll have our embarrassing moments when we find that we've overlooked this and that, but the organization of these games is a tribute to the men and women who have pitched in to help us," Smith said in an interview.

ASSIST FROM PREMIER

Mr. St. Laurent received an assist this spring when he answered a Vancouver-to-Ottawa telephone call and gave his immediate okay to stage a special racetrack day here with proceeds going to the Games fund. The provincial government also gave the go-ahead. Both governments waived taxes, and $50,000 was put into the Games kitty.

Smith decided the city should be dolled up for the Games, but his budget didn't allow for such luxuries. He organized a committee and within a few days 10-12 miles of city streets will be alive with more than 5,000 flags, propped up on lamp-posts—and the whole thing won't cost the organizing committee a nickel.

Flags have been received from Commonwealth countries, Canadian business firms and railways and the city has paid $15,000 for brackets to hold the flags. Each flag has been stamped with a laundry mark to show its origin and after the games each will be laundered and shipped to its originating point.

These are just two of innumerable examples pointing up the amazing organization of a committee that had to start from scratch and that refused to believe anything was impossible.

Toronto Youth Wins U. S. Jr. Chess Title

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)—Ross Siemms, 19, of Toronto, Canadian junior chess champion in 1953, Friday won the United States junior chess championship tournament.

He defeated defending champion Saul Yarmack, 20, of Passaic, N.J., United States Air Force private. Yarmack placed third. Larry Remlinger, 12, Long Beach, was second.

Forty-four young chess players competed in the 10-day journey.

Dr. Bannister Now

LONDON (AP)—Roger Bannister, the world's first four-minute miler, now is Dr. Bannister.

The man who set a world mark of 3:59.4—only to have John Landy of Australia do 3:58 a month later—was notified Friday he had qualified as a medical doctor at St. Mary's hospital.

Sees Canadians Respectable But Rather Dull

CHAUTAQUA, N.Y. (CP)—Because of an inherent cautiousness, Canadians are "respectable but inclined to be dull," George V. Ferguson, editor of the Montreal Star, said Monday.

Opening a week-long seminar on Canada at the annual Chautauqua Institute conference, Mr. Ferguson said that because of a tendency for disputes on national issues to spread into a conflict between French and English-speaking Canadians, a level-headed approach was used in national problems.

"We lack vividness and color and violent emotion. Even though we know more or less where we are going we trudge toward our destination. We do not skip and run."

"It is, in fact, this peculiar national stolidity that makes us uninteresting to our neighbors. We seldom surprise ourselves and it is therefore hardly to be expected that we will surprise outsiders."

Mr. Ferguson urged continued fellowship between Canada and the United States because the stakes involved are so great that neither of us can afford to lose.

British Runner Smashes Three-Quarter Mile Mark

By MILTON MARMOR

LONDON (AP)—An unheralded British distance runner, 28-year-old wartime paratrooper, Freddie Green, smashed the world three-quarter mile record Saturday and with his startling 13:32.2 clocking erased the last of the Gunder Haegg world marks.

When 1954 began, four of the Swedish wonder runner's marks established in the war years were on the books. Three others—two miles, 2,000 and 3,000 meters—had been erased in recent years.

Since May, Roger Bannister of Britain and John Landy of Australia have bettered his mile mark with their four-minute epics. Landy of Australia also broke the 1,500 meter record of the great Swede, Emil Zatopek of Czechoslovakia a month ago ended his reign over the 5,000 meters.

Strangely, the man who broke the three-mile mark had no apparent confidence he would even win the race—let alone go on to a world record.

He had never run anything even close to what he showed Saturday on a muggy afternoon with hardly a breeze filling the stadium.

Bannister retained his national mile mark with a relatively slow 4:07.6 time despite a sensational last quarter.

Bannister, first man to run the mile in less than four minutes, did the final lap in 53.3 seconds, believed to be the fastest quarter ever blocked in a serious one-mile race.

Bannister grabbed the lead 300 yards from the finish after the field had dawdled through the first three-quarters in 3:13.8. He won by 25 yards.

Pro Golfers Elect Officers

EDMONTON (CP)—Bill Kerr, pro at Montreal's Beaconfield club, Friday was elected president of the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association after serving five years as the organization's captain.

Kerr succeeds Ken Murray of Montreal, president for the last five years.

CPGA captain is Dick Borthwick of Hamilton, Ont., Ancaster club.

Other officers: Vice-presidents, Dave Patton, Montebello, Que., Gordon Brydson, Toronto, Stan Leonard, Vancouver, and Par Fletcher, Regina; vice-captains, Pat Fletcher, Saskatoon and Don Sinclair, East Riverside, N. B.

RECORDS FADE

In their day the Haegg world marks were acclaimed as the peak of athletic endeavor. Now they are gone in the path of sports' inexorable drive to faster and faster efforts.
