Labor's Nuclear Fight May Affect The West

By KEN METHERAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer
Britain's Labor party is involved in a struggle that may have far-reaching effects on the West's ability to maintain the nuclear deterrent.

Five months after the party's annual conference reluctantly supported retention of the hydrogen bomb, the executive and leaders of the powerful Trades Union Congress are meeting to draft a new H-bomb policy. It is expected to call on Britain to give a moral lead to the world by stopping nuclear tests.

The Daily Herald, semi-official spokesman for the party, says it is "now practically settled" that the declaration will also urge that United States bombers based in Britain be prevented from carrying nuclear bombs during training flights and that British bases for the American Thor intermediate-range ballistic missile be delayed at least until after a summit meeting with Russia.

mounting uneasiness among the rank-and-file over the nuclear armament race. It is also interpreted as a victory for Frank Cousins, general secretary of the TUC, over both right-wing elements of the Labor party and Labor's "shadow" foreign minister, Aneurin Bevan.

At the annual conference in Brighton last October, Cousins made a passionate plea against the H-bomb. But Bevan, once an outspoken critic of Britain's drive to develop her own nuclear weapons, successfully urged its retention in order that any future Labor foreign minister "will not be sent naked into the council chambers of the world."

Cousins bowed to the Bevan line at Brighton rather than risk a party split, but he has made no secret of his personal belief that the H-bomb is unable to clothe Britain in the garments of either safety or prestige. And he is understood to be one of the leaders of the current move for action against the bomb. Uneasiness over the H-bomb is by no means confined to the Labor party. Despite a general apathy in Britain toward public meetings, H-bomb protest rallies are drawing record crowds and the heavy anti-government vote at the recent Rochdale byelection is believed to have been partly due to uneasiness over this question. In a recent television interview, Prime Minister Macmillan was asked if he was concerned that at Rochdale 80 per cent of the electors voted for the Labor and Liberal candidates, both of whom campaigned against H-bomb manufacture. Replied Macmillan: "I am concerned about it. It is very important."

Outline When Vice-President Would Take Over In U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House Monday announced an agreement under which Vice-President Richard Nixon would become acting president if President Eisenhower should become unable to serve.

Press Secretary James C. Hagerty described it as more or less the copy of an understanding Eisenhower and Nixon have had. Eisenhower mentioned an understanding at his press conference last Wednesday but refused then to say exactly what was in it. Monday, Hagerty issued the following statement:

"The president and the vice-president have agreed that the following procedures are in accord with the purposes and provisions of article two, section one, of the constitution, dealing with presidential inability.

"1. In the event of inability the president would—if possible—so inform the vice-president, and the vice-president would serve as acting president, exercising the powers and duties of the office until the inability had ended.

"2. In the event of an inability which would prevent the president from so communicating with the vice-president, the vice-president, after such consultation as seems to him appropriate under the circumstances, would decide upon the devolution of the powers and duties of the office and would serve as acting president until the inability had ended. "3. The president, in either event, would determine when the inability had ended and at that time would resume the full exercise of the powers and duties of the office."

Begin Survey Of River Ice

OTTAWA (CP) — Air observation of St. Lawrence River ice movement has been inaugurated to assess the possibility of carrying on regular shipping during winter in the lower part of the river, the transport department said Monday. Transport department observers have begun making weekly flights between Montreal and the Gulf of St. Lawrence to prepare maps showing location of ice and to help forecast its movement. One privately-owned ship now makes regular winter runs on the river from Quebec City. Each week to interested parties information gathered will decide whether ice conditions keep the river open for navigation year-around.
