THE DAILY EXAMINER.

MAY 21, 1883.

Mr. Davies and the Fishery Award.

"But we are told in Thursday's Examiner that "Mr. Davies has now sat three months in the House of Commons" without ever asking for our share of the Fishery Award!! Is it possible that this Tory organ, knowing that Mr. Davies would be opposed by Hackett and Brecken, is depending upon a member of the Opposition to move in this matter? One would suppose our contemporary would appeal to some member of the "great Liberal-Conservative party," now in power about five years, to urge a claim which he considers a just and equitable one."

THE above extract from the Patriot of Saturday, shows to what straits the editor is reduced in attempting to defend Mr. Davies' promise-breaking in relation to the Fishery Award. The object is to make it appear that Mr. Davies stands in the same position on that question, as Messrs. Brecken, Hackett and A. C. McDonald. The truth is, that in the late House of Commons Mr. Ritchie of Halifax, acting on behalf of the majority of the Maritime Province members, submitted our claims to the Award to the House. Mr. Ritchie's resolution was warmly supported by Messrs. Brecken, Hackett and A. C. McDonald, but was voted down by a large majority, including Mr. McKenzie and other Grit leaders. Mr. Davies in the Press and on the platform impeached the conduct of our late representatives, including Mr. Yeo. He declared that the claim of Prince Edward Island should have been urged separate from that of the other Maritime Provinces; that if it were so submitted it was highly probable that Messrs. McKenzie, Blake, and other Grit Leaders would support it, and he broadly promised that he would, if elected, do what our representatives in the late House lacked the courage and ability to effect, viz., to test the House on the separate claim of Prince Edward Island!! Has he made the slightest attempt to fulfil his promise. The Patriot regrets that business pressure has prevented Mr. Davies from attending to this matter!! Of course, in the magnitude of the questions engaing the great man's attention, it would scarcely be expected that he could find time to move a resolution on a question that only involved a paltry million and a quarter of dollars for Prince Edward Island!!

The assertion of the Patriot that Mr. Davies would be opposed on this question by Messrs. Hackett and Brecken, is what might be expected from the author of the telegram sent from the Patriot office to Tignish on the day of the late election for that District.

"A False Prophet."

PREVIOUS to the last general election for the Dominion House of Commons, it will be remembered that Mr. L. H. Davies raised a great hue and cry because the Government had completed a contract with a company for the construction of the great Canada Pacific Railway. It will also be remembered that this gentleman called together a mass indignation meeting in the Market Hall, for the purpose of entering a formal protest against such an iniquitous bargain. In order to assure the better comprehension of his remarks by his indignant hearers, with the assistanceof one of our local artists, Mr. Davies had painted a large map of what purported to be the route over which the Railway was to pass. It was generally known, also, that Mr. Davies had a speech prepared for the occasion which would probably be instrumental in breaking up the Tory Administration, and of placing himself, and his intimate friend, Mr. Blake, at the head of Dominion affairs. When the proper moment arrived, the local grit leader, amid the vociferous cheering of his ever enthusiastic Grit followers, rose to deliver his impeachment of Conservative rule. With tears in his eyes, he described the terrible shipwreck that was going to be made of Canada, the ruin and destitution that was soon to overtake it the financial bankruptcy into which it was to be plunged, and the complete obliteration from the face of the globe of our insignificant little P. E. Island. Many of our readers will still remember the funeral oration he delivered on that occasion. Many will remember the bitter language he indulged in towards Sir John and his confreres; how that they were false to their country; how that they were corrupt; and with what antipathy they especially regarded P. E. Island. Yet, notwithstanding this terrible philippic of Mr. Davies' the Island is still prosperous, the credit of Canada was never so good in foreign countries, the trade of Canada has never been excelled. Every day reports come to us of the thousands of immigrants landing on our shores, who are settling down in the great Northwest with the prospect of becoming a prosperous and happy people. And all this is the result of what? The Canadian Pacific Railway policy of the Conservatives, and the great National Policy they inaugurated.

A characteristic story is told of Her Royal Highness the Princess Louise, showing her unassuming disposition and readiness to adapt herself to any circumstances. Chancing to drive out unattended one afternoon recently in a pony chaise, Her Royal Highness called at Major General Luard's residence, and driving into the yard pulled up and alighted: finding the hostler absent the Princess unhitched her pony, and leading him out of the shafts, carefully placed him in the stall and attended the animal in a manner such as to excite the admiration of a groom.

Rev. Mr. Currie.

The Rev. D. D. Currie preached in the Prince Street Methodist Church, on Sunday evening, after an absence of seven years. His subject was "Wisdom." The line of thought was guided somewhat by Proverbs, 18th chapter, 1st verse:—"Through desire, a man having separated himself seeketh and intermeddleth with all wisdom." What is this "all wisdom?" Wisdom itself is an intelligent, loving application of knowledge to the purposes of life. The wisdom referred to, therefore, includes a knowledge of the physical frame. How many have gone through a course of mental training, only to find themselves broken down in body at the very moment when their knowledge was becoming available! It was, therefore, wise that we should know ourselves, that is, possess a fair working acquaintance with the principle of physical culture, and have a sound mind in a sound body. Wisdom includes, secondly, a knowledge of our own avocation in life. Men were not meant to be bunglers in any department, and it is wise to know in every trade, however humble, how best and most easily to do what needs to be done. In every occupation thorough knowledge is required, and no other attainments can atone for failure in this.

Then, too, it is wise to have a general knowledge of the arts and sciences. One must know his own work particularly, but not exclusively. We are the better of some acquaintance with each other's special lines.

Then there was the wisdom which is from above, the knowledge of Christ, who is the true Wisdom. Other knowledge was indispensable—that of one's trade for example; but here was a knowledge within the reach of all, for the attainment of which we have our Sundays and religious privileges. All other knowledge fails if it comes short of this. The learned Paul looked at what the schools had taught him as nothing in comparison with that deeper knowledge which Christ had revealed.

How is this "all wisdom" secured? It was secured by "desire." A man's tastes get a bent in a certain direction, and then the taste or aptitude impels one in pursuit of practical knowledge. Hence the great value of awakening the proper tastes. So much of a man's future career depends on the influence brought to bear on him in forming his tastes in youth. Again, it is secured by "intermeddling." That is, investigation, reasoning, thought. Labor is the price of it. It is secured, too, by "separating one's self." One needs to get away from the busy crowd, and there commune in silence with truth. This Moses spent years in the desert, pondering on laws for his people. Of course he might be told that the Mosaic Laws were God-inspired. That was true. But it is also true that only to him that hath shall be given. When a man uses to the best of his ability what talents he has, then are conferred higher gifts; but these are not given to the drone. So Paul retired to Arabia and returned ready and burning to meet and confute all opposition to the cause of his Master. So John the Baptist had his training in the desert. And so Christ himself, for thirty long years, toiled not at his bench alone, but at preparing himself for that religious work of which he was to be leader. We must not forget that he was man, or lose the lesson of his youth, thus spent in study, and in quiet.

And it is a foolish notion to suppose that the years of training which are asked of the Churches' Ministers, are years of waste. The foundation laid in quiet stands one in good stead amid the press of living. One more than makes up for the apparent loss of time by the increased efficiency of his after-service. Men need to separate themselves to thought and study, for truth is many-sided, and nearly all the wrangling that prevails comes from narrow, one-sided views of truth.

In conclusion, the great aim of life, the great value of this "intermeddling with all wisdom," was to attain to perfect manhood. Not right living in its private sense, but manhood; so that a man, fortified by sure knowledge, may stand up independently and be able to lead his fellows.

The preacher then referred to the many changes that had taken place since the tie was broken that had bound them as pastor and people, and quoted the Apostle's assurance that "all things work together for good to them that love God."

The Lawn Tennis Match.

As we announced in our issue of Friday last this match duly came off on Saturday afternoon. Fortunately for the large number of spectators who witnessed the contest, the weather proved delightful. The Club costumes shewed to great advantage. The drawing resulted as follows:—

FITZROYS.		MICMACS.
Mr. R. F. Quirk	vs.	Mr. A B Warburton,
Mrs. R. F. Quirk,		Miss May DesBrisay,
Mr Leith Brecken,		Dr. Warburton,
Miss Kate Hensley,		Miss Maggie Hobkirk,
Mr. Arnaud,		Mr. Goalen,
Mrs. Arnaud,		Miss Maud DesBrisay.

Some of the setts were very closely contested, and resulted as follows: The first, third, fourth and sixth setts were won by the Fitzroy's, and the second and fifth by the Micmac's, leaving the Fitzroy's the winners of the match by four setts to two. We hope this is a precursor of many more trials of strength between these Clubs, for it was quite evident that the spectators entered keenly into the spirit of the sport, and thoroughly enjoyed themselves.
