A Domestic Sketch.

After having been married some weeks, it came into the head of a young husband, one Sunday when he had but little to occupy his mind, to suggest to his wife that they should plainly and honestly state the faults that each had discovered in the other, since they had been man and wife. After some hesitation the wife agreed to the proposition, but stipulated that the rehearsal should be made in all sincerity, and with an honest view to the bettering of each other, as otherwise it would be of no use to speak of the faults to which marriage had opened their eyes. The husband was of the mind, and his wife asked him to begin. He was somewhat reluctant, but his wife insisted that he was first to propose the matter, and as he was the head of the house it was his place to take the lead. Thus urged he began the recital.

He said—

"My dear, one of the first faults that I observed in you, after keeping house was, that you a good deal neglected the tinware. My mother always took great pride in her tinware and kept it as bright as a dollar."

"I am glad you have mentioned it dear," said the wife, blushing a little; "hereafter you shall see no spot on cup or pan. Pray proceed." "I have also observed," said the husband, "that you use dish-rags a long time without washing them and finally throw them away. Now, when at home, I remember that my mother always used to wash out her dish-rags when she was done using them, and then hung them up where they could dry, ready for the next time she would need them."

Blushing, as before, the young wife promised to amend this fault.

The husband continued with a most formidable list of similar faults, many more than we have space to enumerate, when he declared that he could think of nothing more worthy of mention.

"Now, my dear," said he, "you begin and tell me all the faults you have discovered in me since we have both been married."

The wife sat in silence. Her face flushed to the temples and a great lump came in her throat, which she seemed to be striving hard to swallow.

"Proceed my dear; tell me all the faults you have discovered in me; spare none."

Arising suddenly from her seat, the little wife burst into tears, and throwing both arms about her husband's neck, cried:—

"My dear husband, you have not a fault in the world. If you have one, my eyes have been so blunded by my love for you that so long as we have been married I have never once observed it. In my eyes you are perfect, and all that you do seems to be done in the best manner, and just what should be done."

"But, my dear," said the husband, his face reddening and his voice growing husky with emotion, "just think I have gone and found all manners of fault with you. Now, do tell me some of my faults; I know I have many—ten times as many as you ever had or will have. Let me hear them."

"Indeed, husband, it is as I tell you; you have not a single fault that I can see. Whatever you do seems right in my eyes, and now that I know what a good-for-nothing little wretch I am, I shall begin the work of reform, and try to make myself worthy of you."

"Nonsense, my dear, you know that sometimes I go away a leave you without any wood cut, I stay down town when I ought to be at home, I spend mony for drink and cigars, when I ought to bring it home to you; I"——

"No you don't," cried his wife; you do nothing of the kind. I like to see you enjoy yourself; I should be unhappy were you to do otherwise than just exactly as you do."

"God bless you, little wife," cried the now subjugated husband, "from this moment you have not a fault in the world. Indeed, you never had a fault; I was joking, don't remember a word I said!" and he kissed away the tears that still trembled in the little woman's eyes.

Never again did the husband scrutinize the tinware nor examine the dish-rag; never so much as mentioned one of the faults he had enumerated, but soon after the neighbor women were wont to say:—

"It is wonderful how neat Mrs.—— keeps everythiug about her house. Her tinware is as bright as a new dollar, and I do believe she not only washes but irons her dish-rags." And the neighbor men were heard to say:—"What a steady fellow—has got to be of late; he don't spend a dime where he used to spend dollars and can never be kept from home half an hour when he is not at work. He seems to worship that wife of his."

The Great French Remedy, Dr. LeDuc's Periodical Pills.

For the cure of Leucorrhœa or White's Excessive of ainful Menstruation, Green Sickness, Falling of the Womb, Catarrh of the Uterus or Vagnia, Hysteria, ain in the Back, or Piles, or for the puepose of inigorating and giving tone to the Generative Organs, two pills should be taken twice daily, or in very en, febled conditions, one pill three times a day. To effect cures in chronic cases it will be neecssary to continue the use of the remedy for some months. A reasonabie trial will create sufficient confidence in the remedy to insure its being taken until a permanent cure is ef fected.
