What England Does for Egypt.

An important and interesting White Book has just been issued containing the German foreign office correspondence respecting the affairs of Egypt for the year 1886 up to June last. The information is valuable, especially now, when people are beginning to be anxious to know a little about what has been going on in Egypt for the past six months. By far the most vital point to be considered is what good the natives of Egypt have derived and do derive from British occupation. The answer is given by a memorandum of conversations with two native gentlemen, one a Moslem of good standing, whose opinions are much respected by those who know him; the other a country squire, who owns an estate not far from Cairo. The evidence of these persons comes to this: Since the days of the Caliph Omar, Egypt has never seen such security as that enjoyed by the masses. They are no longer exposed to arbitrary taxation, molested and intimidated by those in authority. A peasant does not now live in constant dread of arrest and exile simply because he is well-to-do and has exceeded the envy or cupidity of some official or court favorite. Personal security for the ordinary Egyptian is now at least an historical fact, and not a matter of opinion. The people hardly believe their senses in this respect, and only fear that the present state of affairs is too good to last. There is less robbery and brigandage now than there was twelve years ago. A eadl or native judge is quoted as giving an opinion that Egyptian peasants nowadays suffer less ill treatment and enjoy more freedom and security of person than has ever before been known. The more intelligent of the population have begun to appreciate those advantages, and the expression of their opinions at the present moment may no doubt be attributed to a dread of an eventual relapse into the old system of administration.

The Irish Problem.

Mr. Stead, editor of the Pall Mall Gazette, has been in Ireland the past few weeks investigating chiefly the question of agricultural depression, and the general issues between landlords and tenants. He has been in all parts of the country, and has seen landlords, tenants, national leaguers, and Government officials alike, having been provided with a letter of introduction to the branches of the National League, and a recommendation from the home Secretary and Sir Michael Hicks-Beach. His first special commissioner's report covered seven columns of the Pall Mall Gazette. It begins by saying: "The problem in Ireland is not Home Rule, but rent. There is no abatement in the popular demand for the former, but it is the latter which occupies public attention. Home Rule can wait till next year; rent must be procured this month. The references to Ireland as a nation may serve as garnishing for the speeches of agrarian agitators, but the one practical question is how much of the rent which falls due in November, will be paid this month and next. Mr. Stead replies with great detail of statistics, and reaches the result that, eliminating the items of hay and potatoes, the losses of the farmers in the two years, 1885 and 1886, estimated upon the average returns of 1881 and 1882, amount roughly to thirteen and a half million pounds sterling. This, he says, does not pretend to be more than a rough calculation which assuredly does not err on the side of exaggeration; but it enables us to form some idea of the justice of the farmer's demands for an abatement of rent. In other words, if the Irish tenants were to pay one year's rent for the last two years the fall in prices would wipe out the other year's rent and leave him status quo.

Ready for War.

The present strength of Germany's standing army is 430,000 men, rank and file; that of France is about 650,000. By the law of general service Germany trains and retires about 150,000 men a year, and France about 110,000. Of cavalry Germany has 93 regiments, numbering about 67,000 men, and France 70 regiments, with a total of 63,000 men. Germany's whole active army, including the reserve, would foot up to 975,000, which the Landwehr and one-year volunteers would increase to 1,000,000. Another million could be got from the Landwehr and veteran volunteers, and her total possible strength, were a war declared to-day, would be 3,350,000. The French claim to have 2,000,000 men already trained and available for service, and 2,000,000 more liable by law. France's artillery is said to be in much better shape than Germany's, both as to the number and condition of her guns.

Free Trade.

The reduction of internal revenue and the taking off of revenue stamps from Proprietary Medicines, no doubt has largely benefitted the consumers, as well as relieving the burden of home manufacturers. Especially is this the case with Green's August Flower and Bosch's German Syrup, as the reduction of thirty-six cents per dozen has been added to increase the size of the bottles containing these remedies, thereby giving one-fifth more medicine in the 75 cent size.

The August Flower for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and the German Syrup for Cough and Lung troubles, have perhaps the largest sale of any medicines in the world. The advantage of increased size of the bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted, in every town and village in civilized countries. Sample bottles for 10 cents remain the same size.

MORE ELECTRICITY IN CHARLOTTETOWN.—W. Brown has purchased a Dynamo-Electric Machine, one of the latest improved New York style. This machine is capable of depositing two lbs. of silver per day. Mr. Brown is now prepared to do Gold and Silver Plating second to none in the world, such as knives, forks, spoons, tea sets, watches, jewelry of all kinds; also carriage work, machinery, dashers, etc., at the Athenaeum, 60, 61 & 62 Princes and Charlotte Streets.

Canada the Best of All.

Rev. H. G. Parker, professor of elocution at Queen's University, Kingston, now on a trip around the world, writes from Sydney, Australia:—"Since I bid you adieu I have touched at many a port and greeted many a one whose language was not the same as mine, nor face of the Saxon type. I have tested the hospitality of a Mexican senator, eaten bear with the miners of the Sierra Nevada, dined on stewed dog and live shrimps, and poi with the good-natured King of the Kanakas. I have traded hats with a missionary in the Samoan Islands, escaped a great eruption of the volcano in New Zealand, been chased by the black men of North Australia, and broke bread with the Governor of New South Wales, Lord Carrington, at a kangaroo hunt in the green tree plain. I have worn the stolen garb of the Japanese, bought bric-a-brac of the insinuating Mongolian, and preached to 200 nameri on board of a man-of-war in the Pacific ocean, and here I am at Sydney ready to start out again as soon as I can to visit the mystic shrines of India and perhaps kneel on Mount Olivet and look upon the folded eyes of the Sphinx. But seeing much of little, I do not know of a better place to live in than Canada."

Why He Didn't Kill Him.

A Boston dale was making an evening call upon a Deacon-st young lady last week, and among the many subjects which came up for intelligent discussion was the "chrysanthemum exhibition." "Have you visited the chrysanthemum exhibition yet?" asked the young lady. "Oh, dear, no," he said; "I find such things very trying," he knew; I am not what you call a literary man at all, and such performances are a dead weight upon my mind." "It doesn't require a very pronounced literary taste to appreciate a chrysanthemum show," said the young woman, with a tired glance at the clock. "No! Well, perhaps not so much a literary taste, y' know, as a fondness for—for—the antique—the ancient—the classical, y' know," replied the slim, trying to hide his face. "I do not see that the 'antique,' the 'ancient' or the 'classical,' as you call it, pleased to call it, has any particular connection with such a display." "Well, possibly not very much y' know," he asserted, knocking a piece of bric-a-brac off the table; "it all depends on how one looks at those things, y' know. By the way," he continued, "who is it that plays the part of Chrysanthemum?" "You seem to be laboring under some mistake," replied the young lady politely. "It is not a play, simply an exhibition of flowers bearing that name." "Bah! Jove," said the slim, "I had obtained the idea that it was something of the nature of a Greek tragedy, y' know." "A little later he bade her good evening, and while on his way home a gust of wind blew him against a lamp-post and killed him.—Philadelphia Call.

Self-Possession.

There is a vain self-confidence which rushes unsharpened into every scene, and feels equal to undertake whatever is presented. This, however, is very different from self-possession which comes from a trifling estimate of our powers. He who possesses himself in this latter sense will be as careful to abstain from what he is unable to perform as to execute what he rightly falls to his lot. He will be modest and unassuming as he is energetic and unflinching, for he will know his limitations as well as he does his powers. The best practical way of securing this self-possession, where we feel its lack, is in continual practice. There are certain things which every one should be prepared to do, certain scenes that every person should be prepared to enter, certain crisis that every one should be prepared to meet. These come of us must shrink from when they come, but do our best every time resolutely calling to aid all the reason and good sense that we can command. Each time we force ourselves to this course, the task grows easier, and at length we arrive at that condition of calm assurance with regard to our performance of them which alone gives self-possession.

A Sensational Affair.

The sixth instalment in as many weeks was reported last week from a village few miles from Warwick, England. A lady about 30 years of age, very wealthy, and who is connected by birth with a noble family, has for some time been the ruling spirit of the Baptist Sunday school. A few days ago she left her home for an inland watering place, and was joined upon her arrival by a ploughboy of the same village, about 18 years of age, and anything but intelligent and prepossessing. Thursday a letter was received from the ploughboy, in which he stated that his bride had given him £1,000 ($5,000), and that they were about to cross the water to America on a wedding trip. The lady's family are terribly broken up over the marriage, and the eloquent will furnish talk enough to last the village gossip for a year to come.
