THREATS AGAINST MRS. A. J. SMALL

TORONTO, June 7.—Alleged to have tried to extort $15,000 from Mrs. Ambrose J. Small under threat of exposing her to the police as a person intimately concerned with the disappearance of her husband more than two years ago.

Dainton, the police say, sent a letter to Mrs. Small last Friday and warned her refusal to place money demanded in a certain place would lead to her being exposed. Mrs. Small carried the letter to detective headquarters.

This is the fourth blackmailing letter Mrs. Small has received in the last week or two.

See How You Can Get It at JENKINS & SON

Today and tomorrow. See for yourself how we handle your Cured Meats in a Sanitary way on a Dayton Meat Slicer.

Your meat is not handled five or six times. As the Meat is cut it drops on Sanitary Paper.

Removing the Meat with the paper gives you a better chance of wrapping it up without handling it.

The Demonstrator of the Machine will gladly explain to you, at your request, the Sanitary ways about the Machine. This demonstration is for the public's interests alone.

On ordering Cured Ham or Bacon, you may order in slices, according to the number of guests or persons in your house.

Try a pound sliced on Number Five size. This gives the Bacon a better taste. Less rime on the Bacon.

You may secure the Bacon from 1/4th of an inch to 1/2 an inch in thirty-two different cuts.

Customers learn readily to order by numbers, enabling you to give a direct service to the daintiest tables.

Ham cut for picnic parties and just the thing for a hurry up supper.

The Wall Flower GROWING LOVE Chapter 62

It was not yet 11, and Pan had found that Gloria would be home. But she was, she had found that her strength was not yet equal to a great strain, so she had danced a little while and then slipped off home alone.

"Hello—well, glad you're home and being sensible, how do you feel?" George asked. "Excellent," Gloria's voice came over the telephone.

"Then come around and collect your child. What? No, The Child. She became alarmed because I had no dinner and came over here to bring me some, the reward for her kindness will probably be that she will scandalize my hall porter down stairs. Come around and get her."

"Pan laughed again at this method of talk. She was used to being discussed in the third person when she was present in the room.

And presently Gloria arrived, still in her yellow velvet dance frock, a little hollow checked and pallid, so her great black eyes stood out with uncanny prominence. Tired as she was, however, she took in this new situation with a flash of amusement—George at ease in the big chair, the bandaged ankle resting on two cushions on a stool; on another stool, Pan in her demure little house dress, watching George with softly smiling eyes.

"Oh, I've come to save Mrs. Grundy's face, Gloria said airily, perching for an instant on the arm of a big chair. "The world in general—meaning the hall porter and the elevator boy, servants are always our moral censors—doesn't know you came to bring hot soup to an invalid."

"Was it wrong to come?" Pan asked. "No, it was sweet and charming of you."

But Gloria's eyes were looking at George with great amusement. And George was looking cross. So Pan was puzzled. She could not always make out her friend. Gloria saw all of a subject and a lot more. She was like a chess player who sees not only the next move, but probably three or four moves beyond that.

Why should she sit smiling with mocking amusement at George? And why should George resent her merriment? "Sit down, since you're here," George began. "Oh, thank you sir!" Gloria interrupted with a comic attempt at humble gratitude and slipped into the chair.

George paid no attention. "I'll tell you now what I didn't say over the phone," he went on. "I saw Frank yesterday. I think he's sailing—back again."

Gloria lost her ambleness at once. "What did he look like?" she asked. "The devil," George replied, "I pretended he'd been sea sick—"

FATHER FOR 34th TIME AT 84 YEARS OF AGE HARLAN, K.V., June 7—Robert Baker, eighty-four years old, has become the father of his thirty-third child. Mrs. Baker, the mother, is just passed her thirty-fifth year, and she, too, is rejoicing, for though he married her only four years ago, she is now his eighth child. When she and Baker married she was twenty-one and he was seventy. She is Baker's seventh wife, his sixth wife having died many years ago while they were on a ranch Baker owned near Seattle, and where he married the seventh mate.
