FALL PLOWING.

Without elaborating the many strong points in favor of fall plowing, a few of the more prominent benefits may be briefly stated as follows:

1. August and September is a good time to turn over bound out sod land and manure and re-seed it at once to grass, obtaining a crop of hay the following year.

2. October and November is an excellent time to break up sod land for planting the following spring.

3. The weather is then cool and bracing and the team strong and hearty for work; while the weather in spring is more relaxing and the team less able; and spring being always hurring, it saves time to despatch as much of the plowing as possible during the previous autumn.

4. Sod land broken up late in autumn will be quite free from growing grass the following spring, the roots of the late overturned sward being so generally killed by the immediately succeeding winter that not much grass will readily start in spring.

5. The frosts of winter disintegrate the plowed land, so that it readily crumbles in fine particles in spring, and a deep, mellow seed-bed is easily made. The chemical changes and modifications resulting from atmospheric action during the winter, develops latent fertility in the upturned furrows, which, with the mellowing influences, materially increases the crops.

6. Most kinds of insects are either wholly destroyed or their depredations materially checked by late fall plowing.

7. Corn stubble land may be plowed late in fall, and thus be all ready for very early sowing in spring, thereby going far to insure a good catch of grass; the roots of the new seeding hold well, on being well established before the droughts of summer come on.

8. Most land in this country needs deeper plowing than has generally been practised. When the sub-soil is fine grained, unctuous and close, or where there is a hard pan of good quality, deep plowing may at once be resorted to, with decided advantage. Where the sub-soil is poorer, the plowing may still be advantageously deepened by degrees, say an inch at each new breaking up. But in by far a majority of cases, deep plowing may be practised at once—in-deep, it may be the rule, with safety, while shallow plowing may be the exception.

Flow say 9, 10, 11, or 12 inches in November. The sub-soil turned up will grow several shades darker by spring. The frosts and atmospheric influences of winter will mellow the soil, the inorganic elements and all latent fertility will be made more active for benefitting the crops. In sowing, spread the manure and plow it in, or otherwise work it in or mingle it with the soil, to the depth of four inches, or a little more or less, and you have the very best attainable condition for realizing good crops. Deeper plowing may thus be practiced than would at all times be safe, or expedient if the plowing is delayed till spring.

IMPROVEMENTS.—Under this head we would refer to wall laying, digging and blasting rocks, digging wells, grubbing up the bushes about walls and fences, laying drains, repairing buildings, &c. Now the farmer ought to improve every opportunity to do such things on his farm if they need to be done, and in a few years the farm will come to be a model one. Such improvements pay not only in the satisfaction of having things look well, but in money. How often is it the remark made, and how true it is, that time is money, and yet we fear the farmer does not always realize it. The family may for years go twenty or thirty rods or more to a spring or well, when for a small outlay of labor, with some cash, the water could be brought into the house, where it would be so handy and save so steps and so much valuable time and strength. One quarter part of the time spent in going after water during the past years, would more than pay for the improvement. So of drains in the meadow; for years the hay has been poked off at considerable cost for labor, the land being so wet that a horse would not go on to it, when a few days' labor spent in draining and improving the land would put it in such condition as to save the labor of piling the hay. How many times have the cows got through the fence, when a few days' labor would so improve it that all such vexation would be saved. On many farms were stones are plenty we see wooden fences put where a little more labor would have put up a fence that would last a life-time. Many a field that is now too rough for the mowing machine could by digging and blasting out the rocks be permanently improved and made smooth, so that the great labor-saving machine could be freely used. Bushes and weeds infest the corners of fences and get in about the rocks and become a nuisance when by a few days' labor they could be entirely eradicated. These and many other things will suggest themselves to the observing farmer, and he will if he is interested in his work take hold and make these improvements just as fast and as far as his time will permit.

The public debt—the debt of nature. The place to board—lumber yards. Favorite box with ladies—band-box. The crowning point of man—bis hat. Men of weight—Scale manufacturers. What side does a toper take to?—Cider. Men who get up strikes—Match makers. Ruling power of the schoolroom—ferule. People who just rub and go—Rheumatics. Genuine bargains—Receipts of a gin shop. How to get under the earth—Go round it. The stone to do a good turn—the grindstone.
