Many Applicants For Employment

It is estimated that about three hundred men have applied for work through the Charlottetown National Employment Office for work at Bruce Stewart & Company Ltd., which has the contract for reconditioning two war-time frigates.

It was learned today that the Employment Office has not received an order from the company to supply men, despite rumors to this effect.

It is probable that the number of men eventually employed will be less than a hundred, and most of these will be skilled men such as electricians, cabinet makers, machinists and fitters of the old hand.

Mr. J. Rodd stated that $7000.00 had been appropriated for the re-planting and erection of dams, and developing of fish ponds and streams. He also said that the whole situation had not yet been fully determined, but that after complete survey was finished, each county would receive its distribution.

Scouts At The Provincial Camp

Scouts at Camp Borden this morning were treated to their first taste of rainy weather under canvas. The senior and more experienced boys quickly showed the less experienced lads how to be comfortable and enjoy camping even under adverse conditions.

Blankets and kits were neatly stowed in the tents for inspection which was won for the second time by the Lone Scout Patrol under P. E. Arthur Cauty of the Seventh Ch'own Troop.

After inspection, three Patrols received instruction in Lashing and splicing by Assistant Provincial Commissioner, Mr. A. P. C. Perceval. The remaining three Patrols were instructed in Lashing by their Patrol Leaders under the supervision of Camp Chief Mr. F. A. Driscoll.

After dinner and rest period, all Patrols went in search of timber for Friday's bridge building and pioneering. The rain ceased and timber was easily procured. A swim period followed.

The evening's programme included canteen, a soft ball game and one of the best Council fires to date with all Patrols presenting short skits.

Hot chocolate, and an evening devotional period wound up the activities at Camp Buchan for the day. Friday began with wet weather inspection but, the rain soon cleared and a programme of pioneering, starting a monkey bridge and safety boom over the swimming hole was got well under way.

Also in the afternoon there was a general test-passing period and soccer and softball filled in the early evening. The day closed with the customary Council Fire and devotional period.

Both Hon. Mr. Cullen and Hon. Mr. Clark stated that should the general approval of apartment and farmers in the province, it was subject to change in the next session of the Legislature.

Several farmers expressed indignation that "private fishing property" had police protection, whereas their property with respect to shooting lacked protection. However, it was pointed out by Mr. Jenkins and Hon. Mr. Cullen that it was their privilege to enforce the Trespass Act for prosecution through the placing of "no trespass" signs. At this point almost all were able to see that the new act had much to recommend it and was expressly an improvement over the old one.

The meeting concluded with the showing of several films presented by the Queen's County Fish and Game Association.

Fish and Game Meeting Held At Pownal

A special meeting of the Queen's County Fish and Game Protection Association was held last night at Pownal. The president, Mr. Harold Shaw, presided.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read by the secretary, Mr. Frank MacKenzie, and approved as read. It was moved that the closing date of the crowd shoot sponsored by the Queen's County Fish and Game should be made to coincide with the final date, August 15th, for the paying of the crowd bounty.

Mr. J. Rodd stated that $7000.00 had been appropriated for the re-planting and erection of dams, and developing of fish ponds and streams. He also said that the whole situation had not yet been fully determined, but that after complete survey was finished, each county would receive its distribution.

Hon. Eugene Cullen pointed out that the placing of dams called for considerable survey as a good rock bed and rock strata were necessary to hold the dam so that the water could not erode the clay at the sides. He felt that at such locations dams were practical, and of considerable aid in developing fish ponds and streams. He further pointed out that any pond or stream which had been developed by the governmental department was open to public fishing.

The question of "enclosed property" took up the remainder of the evening with a very heated discussion.

Several present objected to the present act and Mr. Rodd and Mr. Spurgeon Jenkins explained the meaning of "enclosed property."

Hon. Keir Clark pointed out that the old act was encumbered with too many amendments, so that a new act was necessary. He stated that under "enclosed property" the location was considered a sanctuary on which no one could fish or hunt, not even the owner.

A "private fishing property" was one which the owner had developed, built a dam, and stocked, all at his own expense. Under this condition such property had the protection of the police. The owner could fish on the property himself, lease it to a group, or permit his friends to fish there. This type of property was promoted because it takes off the pressure from the public angling ponds, thus giving the general public more opportunity to fish in the public angling places and also to catch more fish.

He went on to point out that any farmer could set up a "no trespass" sign, and through laying a complaint and information before a magistrate, prosecute any trespasser.

Both Hon. Mr. Cullen and Hon. Mr. Clark stated that should the general approval of apartment and farmers in the province, it was subject to change in the next session of the Legislature.

Several farmers expressed indignation that "private fishing property" had police protection, whereas their property with respect to shooting lacked protection. Fine Variety Entertainment At P. W. C. Hall

Fifteen college students of the St. Thomas Aquinas Society presented a two and a half hour variety entertainment at the Prince of Wales College Auditorium last evening in aid of their summer camp.

The students all attend different colleges on bursaries, and as they are all from this Province, hold an annual Summer camp in order that they might get to know each other. The camp is financed by the concert tour which they arrange throughout the Island each year.

Last evening's performance was the sixth appearance in seven days for this enterprising group, most of their performances being in smaller country halls.

Each of the performers is bilingual, and the major part of their programme last evening was given in French. The group were at their best in their choral numbers, given by ten male and two female students, and showed exceptional blending in their simple French melodies.

A one act play, "The Bishop's Candlesticks," was given in English, and met with a very hearty response from the enthusiastic audience.

Adrian Arsenault acted as the very competent Master of Ceremonies, and the production moved along at an excellent pace. Arsenault keeping the audience interested from in front of the curtain at any time when changes on the stage were necessary.

The evening was under the patronage of His Excellency Bishop James Boyle and Mayor B. Earle and Mrs. MacDonald.

The programme will be repeated this evening in North Rustico and tomorrow evening in South Rustico.

Arguments By Counsel In Tweedy Case Concluded

Summing up of arguments by counsel yesterday afternoon ended the trial of Justice George J. Tweedy on a charge of driving to the common danger. County Court Judge C. St. Clair Trainor adjourned the Court till Thursday, July 26, for judgment.

The defence attorneys occupied most of the time yesterday as they presented an array of arguments, backed by citations from many leading cases. Attorney General Walter E. Darby, appearing for the Crown, devoted only a little of his time to the legal aspects and concentrated mostly on the evidence as given by the various witnesses of the previous three days.

Yesterday morning the defence attorneys, Messrs. H. F. McPhee, K. C. and D. L. Mathieson, K. C., opened their final argument with the statement that in reference to the offence which has been charged in this case the burden rests upon the Crown to show: (a) That the accused was guilty of negligence while driving his motor vehicle on the highway at the time when this regrettable accident occurred, and (b) that such negligence was not merely negligence which could be a ground for civil damages but was negligence of that much higher degree, known as criminal negligence.

In considering the evidence adduced by the Crown and by the accused as to whether or not there was any negligence on the part of the accused in the first place, and secondly as to whether such negligence, if it could be found to exist, was criminal negligence, it is necessary to keep in mind that the accused is charged with the commission of a crime as defined by the criminal code, and that the following rules and principles are here applicable:

(a) That notwithstanding the fact that there was an accident and an unfortunate fatality, the accused is presumed to be innocent;

(b) That in relation to the evidence as a whole and in relation to every item and incident of it, the accused is entitled to the benefit of every reasonable doubt;

(c) That "res ipsa loquitur" does not apply in criminal law, and that the burden rests upon the Crown throughout the case to adduce positive evidence in support of every fact or incident upon which it relies to establish negligence in the first instance, and criminal negligence in the second instance.

(d) There must be Mens Rea. "It is submitted on behalf of the accused," said Mr. MacPhee, "that the unfortunate fatality which resulted in this case and which in reality is the only reason why the accused is before the Court, although he is not charged with it, was not due to any negligence on the part of the accused, and a fortiori that he was not guilty of any criminal negligence. Before proceeding to an analysis and examination of the evidence which has been adduced, it may be useful at this stage to consider the authorities dealing generally with the question of criminal negligence and with others dealing specifically with the offence of dangerous driving under section 285 (6) here

He stated that Mr. Landry was going into the pig business on a large scale later on and wanted the same type of swine that had been developed here. Later he will distribute the stock among New Brunswick farmers.

Mr. Farmer stated that Mr. Landry was very pleased with what he selected. Mr. Farmer said that he himself was very much satisfied with what he saw and stated that Island swine are an entirely different type from what commercial breeders sell in the Northern area of New Brunswick.
