

Driver Had No Licence

LONDON (AP) — William Cooper, who was in a car collision with Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip, admitted today that he doesn't have a driver's licence and has failed the driving test five times.

"Of all the bad luck," Cooper said, "I got into my car on the pub without a supervising driver, and what happens? I get involved in a crash with my Queen."

A police official said court action is possible, and in that event it was also possible that Prince Philip may be surmised as a witness.

"The question of proceedings is being considered," said police Supt. John Snowley, "but I don't expect any action for a few days."

Cooper, 32, admitted that he was fined £3 (£24) last year for driving alone in his car and without displaying a learner's tag. In British persons learning to drive must hang learner's tags on the front and back bumpers and be accompanied by a person with a licence.

"I know I was a silly man going out in my car before I'd passed my driving test," he said. "This is the end for me. Now I'll probably never pass my test."

Minimum Wage Here Now At $1

The province's minimum wage for men — $1 per hour — has been in effect since May 1 and is functioning well," Labor and Welfare Minister Henry Wedge said yesterday.

The government approved a minimum wage of 90 cents per hour about a year ago. The wage order made provision for the minimum to rise to 95 cents an hour last November and to $1 an hour the first of May.

The wage order, however, does not apply to persons employed in the farming and fishing industries; persons employed in grading, bagging or packing potatoes on farm premises;

students employed during the school term; and outside regular hours, any person under the age of 21; persons whose wages are fixed by a labor-management contract; persons eligible for membership in the provincial civil servants' association; and registered apprentices.

FOLLOWED ORDERS

IBADA, Nigeria (AP) — A man charged with stealing pleaded innocent here and told the court he was merely an apprentice thief following his master's directions and therefore not responsible for a bungled burglary. The court, however, found Andrew Akogi guilty and jailed him for a year on a charge of stealing goods worth $374. His alleged mentor was acquitted for lack of evidence.

Pat On The Back Is Given To Old-Fashioned Father

OTTAWA (CP) — The old-fashioned father of yesterday ruled the family roost received a tentative pat on the back Monday at the Canadian Conference on the Family.

Dr. Nathan B. Epstein, pay chairman-chief at the Jewish General Hospital in Montreal, told conference delegates that democracy in families is a modern myth.

"Somebody has to make the decisions, preferably the father."

He said his recent studies of family problems indicate that families which are more democratic produced more disturbed children than families who have one strong decision-maker.

"You can't just take the opinion of an inexperienced child as being 'equal' to the opinions of his parents in family decisions."

Although he refused to make a general statement about whether women should pursue careers outside their homes while raising children, Mr. Epstein warned the delegates that they should not ignore "the biological realities" of women's nature.

Drawing laughter from the 350 sociologists, psychiatrists and welfare workers attending the conference, he said: "No way has yet been found for men to become pregnant and to have children—this means that we do have to accept a certain fundamental difference in the roles of the sexes."

Actor Tells How He 'Died' Eight Times During Attack

In his first press interview since his April 8 heart attack, British actor Peter Sellers tells Rob Thomas of the Associated Press how he felt during the ordeal and how he hopes to avoid another attack.

I became caught up in the complications to work and couldn't get out of it. I'm still a bit shaky about it. I'll do a film now and then—never more than two a year, perhaps I'll produce some, perhaps direct.

The main thing in avoiding another heart attack is to use your gut. Get some exercise, don't over-eat, have a drink before dinner, perhaps, don't smoke in other words, do everything in moderation."

RESERVE THAW

The Monday work session of the conference saw a rapid thawing of the delegates' reserve. They peppered Dr. Epstein with a number of provocative questions on family problems.

Was the mental health of the mother more important to children's mental stability and to the family's general health than the father's mental health?

To this the Montreal psychiatrist replied that research had not yet proved whether there was a family hierarchy—in which the mother or the father was more important. He did say that in families where several members were emotionally disturbed, psychiatrists now would prefer to treat the whole family rather than just one or more of its members.

What was meant by an "emotionally healthy person?"

The psychiatrist's definition was that emotional health is the full utilization of the capacities latent in each human organism. "One could think of this in terms of intelligence potential, whether realized or unrealized."

Dr. Epstein's observations came after he presented a 30-page research paper on "The Inner Life of the Family to the meeting. In it he stressed that the father bears a big responsibility for the emotional health of his children.

The recent tendency had been to relegate the father to the periphery of the family life or merely to consider his role to be that of a substitute mother or as a grown-up companion to be "children," Mr. Epstein said.

FOR THOMAS HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "I felt as if I were dying off and then waking up. But each time I thought I had slept, I had in fact died. My heart had stopped. I didn't feel as if I were dying. If that's what dying is like, then I shan't worry about it again."

Movie actor Peter Sellers was talking about the heart seizure he suffered two months ago. Sitting in the den of the massive, marble home he rented from theatre magnate George Skouras, he spoke with characteristic humor, but also an underlying wonderment at what had happened to him.

"I had eight cardiac arrests," he commented. "I of course didn't know it at the time, but they had just about given up on me. By my appearances, I was a comatose. I was in a coma, except for the fantastic care I received."

Sellers, 38, looked wan—he had lost 10 pounds during his illness—as he prepared for his return to his native England Monday. Otherwise he seemed little different from when I last saw him, three days after the attack. He had just come from the filming in England of A Shot in the Dark and was in the midst of shooting Kiss Me, Stupid.

FELT PAINS Late on a Sunday night, the actor began to feel pains. "I knew I was having a heart attack. In these times, thank God, everyone has read enough articles to recognize the symptoms. I asked my wife if she would call Dr. (Rex) Kennamer and ask him to come over. I remember thinking I hope he doesn't expire before he gets here."
