Ordination Service at St. Dunstan's Cathedral

Impressive Sermon Preached by His Grace Archbishop O'Leary of Edmonton.

At St. Dunstan's Cathedral yesterday Pontifical High Mass was celebrated by His Lordship Bishop O'Leary. The ordination of Rev. J. J. Butler and Rev. H. A. Duffy into the holy priesthood also took place at the morning service, which was a very impressive one. The sermon was preached by His Grace Archbishop O'Leary, of Edmonton. At the Mass Father Polier acted as Deacon, Father Smith as sub-deacon, Fathers Hughes and Kiggins as Deacons of Honor, Father Maurice McDonald as High Priest, Father Rooney as Master of Ceremonies. The two newly ordained priests were assisted by Father St. John and Mullally. In the afternoon about 150 children were confirmed by His Grace Archbishop O'Leary, the sermon for the occasion being preached by Rev. R. St. John and after the Confirmation services the children and their parents were addressed by His Lordship the Bishop, at the conclusion of which His Lordship gave the children a total abstinence pledge until they are twenty-one years of age.

In the evening at 7 o'clock one of the newly ordained priests, Rev. John Butler, officiated at Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament. Preaching from Psalm 109 yesterday morning His Grace Archbishop O'Leary of Edmonton, in the course of an eloquent sermon spoke of the descent of the Holy Ghost upon the apostles on the day of Pentecost as described in Acts 2: 1-11 and went on to refer to the impressive ordination service which had just taken place. The Spirit of the Holy Ghost has fallen this day upon two young men who have been raised to the holy priesthood filling their hearts and souls with the Spirit of God in order that they too, like the apostles of old, might perform the sacred mission of their office.

God who created mankind, created it for His own honor and glory. Inanimate creatures too, he created that they might glorify Him in ways proportionate to their natures. The sun was created to give light, waters to cool and refresh; the earth to bring forth her fruits, dumb animals glorify God by showing the infallibility of those instincts of their nature, wherewith they have been endowed. But man was created far above all animal creatures; he has been given a soul that he might live forever—that he might be immortal. He has been endowed with an intellect that he might have ideals and thoughts, and that he might be free to choose the right from the wrong. Man too must serve God, not after the manner of dumb ani-

Diamond Jubilee Service Of Rev. W. H. Hartz, D.D.

The Grand Old Man of Methodism Speaks to a Large Audience on "The Messages of The Days."

There was a large attendance at the Methodist Church last evening at the Diamond Jubilee service of Rev. W. H. Hartz, D. D. "Messages From The Days" was the subject of Dr. Hartz's eloquent address. Notwithstanding his advanced years he spoke with great power and vigor and held his hearers enraptured.

Rev. Mr. Glendenning in introducing the speaker said this was indeed a notable event in Church history. Rev. Dr. Hartz has returned after sixty years of active ministry to preach in the church from which he was sent out, a young man full of promise. He has been honored again and again by his brethren and in return he has served with untiring loyalty and love. The pastor and congregation of the Methodist Church welcome him most heartily to the pulpit.

Following is Rev. Dr. Hartz's sermon:—

Days Should Speak—Job 32, 7.

There are no poverty stricken texts in the Bible, but they differ in beauty, strength and value. This attractiveness and usefulness, as holding a premier position, you go out in a starry night and not that some of the stars emit but a faint light, others are brilliant. Our text is a star in the galaxy of truth, of magnitude. Permit me to state that my theme tonight is "The Messages of The Days" and in the elucidation, our first thought is about Time.

Time, which is the constituent element of Days has general and special messages. Carlyle says: "Time is a great mystery—illusory, silent, never resting, rushing thing, and like apparitions which are and then are not."

Time seems to be the only gift in which God appears to have stinted us, for he never gives the second moment until he has taken away the first and never leaves us certain of a third. Broadly, Time represents in the economy of God all the ages from Creation's dawn until the consummation when the angel shall stand and with one foot upon the sea and the other upon the land, swear by Him Who liveth forever and ever that Time shall be no longer.

Practically, Time is the necessary material of life. Time is the iron in the mine from which the shape is given to a thousand implements from the nail to the steam engine. All the good or bad, great or ignoble, grand or useless, is fashioned by it. Time is money says the business man. He is only partially correct. It is more than money, it has to do with character, duty, destiny. God. Tom Hood's confession should not be the confession of men generally, and yet alas it is. "My forty years have been my forty thieves, for they have stolen strength, hope and many joys."

It is a mercy that Time is allotted to us, not in decades and centuries but in days and moments. And, yet, we notice how insensible nature is to our divisions of time. No great bell of the universe tolls away the passing spirit of the day and no chimes sing out their greeting to newborn mornings. The Royal Psalmist devoutly offered the prayer, "So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts to wisdom," and he also says, "Day unto day uttereth speech and night unto night soweth knowledge." Jacob standing before Pharaoh, when asked the question: "How old art Thou?" did not respond 134 years, but "The days of the years of my pilgrimage are 134 years." Gen. 47, 8.

How beautiful is that act of Dr. Matheson's:—

"O Love that will not let me go I rest my weary soul in Thee I give thee back the life I owe That in Thy ocean depths its flow May richer, fuller be."

How different Byron—

"My days are in the yellow leaf The fruit and flower of life are gone The worm, the canker and the grief are mine alone."

DAYS SHOULD SPEAK. Yesterday speaks. It says, learn of me. Today is a scholar of yesterday. Tomorrow will be advantaged by yesterday and today. Experience, wrote Carlyle, charges dreadful wages, but it is an excellent schoolmaster. That which is learned by experience is best understood, best remembered and most practical in its effect. Yesterdays, today and tomorrows are a marvelous combination—a combination that represents hoary age, enthusiastic youth and bright skies, speculations, lim-

International Ideas

DAYS SPEAK RE PASSING EVENTS. Viscount Grey recently told Dr. Mott that the great need of the world is moral dominance in international affairs. Depend upon it, the world is not dying but it is in a diseased and moribund state and these days are asking: What mould shall appear, the old materialistic and militaristic moulds or the moulds of idealism, brotherliness and instructive service. Tremendous responsibility comes to nations, churches and Christian people everywhere to live and labor for the conservation of the best things and thus hasten the coming of the Lord.

I have no interest in discussing the issue as to whether the recent Genoa Conference was a success or a failure, but it seems to me that the days speak to us to place our dependence, not so much upon the skill of politicians or the plans of diplomats, as upon the wisdom and superintendence of that God who reigns and rules for his glory and the betterment of humanity.

Fundamental Laws

DAYS SHOULD SPEAK. They emphasize the great law of continuity. Time is broken up into days but days mark the continuance of time.

The grounds of Harewood House, soon to be one of the homes of Princess Mary has a Tokki Grape Vine, planted in 1783, nearly 140 years since. It is described as 70 feet long and 24 feet wide. From this vine the men and women of olden times partook of luscious grapes. It flourishes today and belongs to generations yet unborn.
