Directorate Disappoints CAC In Packaging Of Bacon

The Canadian consumer will have to wait for some time before seeing a whole slice of bacon in a package. The national executive of the Consumers' Association of Canada meeting in Ottawa, expressed its disappointment with the recent administrative decision of the Food and Drug Directorate regarding bacon packaging. In February 1965 the Food and Drug Directorate issued a Trade Information Letter stating that a package of bacon which reveals a portion of lean bacon but does not show the actual proportion of lean to fat in the whole slice is in violation of the Food and Drug Act. The packers of bacon were given until January 1st, 1966 to remove any element of deception that may exist in their bacon packages. Later this deadline was extended to May 1st, 1966. From a report in a trade magazine, CAC now learns that the Directorate will consider acceptable a package which shows the full width of a slice of bacon but only two-thirds of its length. Consumers want to see and have always asked to see the whole slice of bacon in the package. They do not want the fatty ends of the slices to be hidden by cardboard. "From this ruling of the Directorate," stated the national president of CAC, "we can only conclude that the meat packers are afraid to reveal the quality of their bacon to consumers at the time of purchase."

MARY HAWORTH

Husband Objects To Wife Taking Second Trip Alone

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Some months ago my wife asked if I would agree to her going to San Francisco with a recruiting team for one week, expenses paid. She extolled the opportunity for a wonderful experience, cost free; the prestige of the mission; the thrill of flying by jet etc. We have school age children, and the children and I missed her very much while she was away. Another recruiting program is scheduled for next summer in Hawaii and she wants to go. But inasmuch as she has had her jet ride and the experience of working away from home base, my answer this time is negative. I feel that a trip is inclined to be more for pleasure, a camouflaged vacation. My wife has always preached that man and wife should take their vacation together. Now she accuses me of being narrow minded and says that she wouldn't stand in my way should I ever have a like opportunity. Do you think I am being narrow-minded about the situation? E. C. DEAR E. C.: I think your stand makes sense. Your wife seems to be operating on the principle that, given an inch, in the matter of the San Francisco trip, she now wants a mile, in the trip to Hawaii. It is probably just as well that you are putting a foot down. After all, she is not a career woman primarily. I take it that, she is not economically obliged to be a wage earner, to support the household. Yet even if she were, these far-ranging recruiting missions aren't an obligatory part of her job, whatever it is, as I gather from her previous reference to the practice aspects, for being invited along. Primarily, she is a wife and mother. I would suppose, in the sense that the roots of her social and emotional security are here, as well as her principal opportunities for most significant success on failure in her life history. Thus, as she shows signs of losing perspective on her commitments overall, in her greed to embrace as much theoretically "cost-free" adventure as possible, she actually you're financially conjugal responsibility to intervene strongly, to counterbalance her misjudgment and, hopefully, to restore order to her outlook. In charging you with being narrow-minded she is indulging simply in name-calling—a child's ill-tempered expression of her displeasure at being denied your blessing on her desire to do something her conscience probably tells her she shouldn't do. Namely, take a transoceanic joy ride for which there is no real justification, all things considered. M.H. DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Will you please recommend a book which discusses the attitudes healthiest for a girl about to be married. My sweet stepdaughter, 19, living on the West Coast, has just become engaged and I would like to send her something that delineates the spiritual, mental which she should approach her new life. R.S. DEAR R. S.: In general, the mind of youth is stoutly resistant to would-be helpful advice from elders whose opinions have not been courted. However, here are the titles of five books I've come across, in years of off-hand non-specialist reading, that strike to the heart of happiness in marriage. "Love and Marriage" (Harpers) by Alexander Magoun; "Being Married" (Association Press) by Evelyn Duvall; Reuben Hill; "The Art of Loving" (Harpers) by Erich Fromm; "Life Together" (Sheed and Ward) by Wingfield Hope; and "The Enemies of Love" (Kenedy) by Dom Aelared Watkin. M.H. BRACKLEY WI The Brackley WI met at the home of Mrs. Earl Clark for their February meeting. The president, Mrs. Walter MacQuarie, presided, and 10 members answered roll call with a house-hint or "a household chore I enjoy". One visitor was present. Reports of the committees were given and new committees appointed. The correspondence was then read and copies of the Institute News given out. Members renewed their subscriptions at this meeting. Mrs. Roland Horne reported that she had purchased 12 chairs and two card tables. She also gave a financial report of the card parties held in the school during the past month. It was decided to start a new tournament on Saturday night, February 19th. There was some discussion as to what kind of demonstration to have for the district convention but nothing definite was decided. It was decided to start a travelling apron. Mrs. Jackson offered to supply the apron and start it at the North end of the district.

WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS Highfield UCW Appoint Two New Committees

Mrs. Jack Thomson, president, chaired the meeting of Highfield UCW held recently at the home of Mrs. Clayton Stevenson. Mrs. Ray Weeks conducted the devotional period and roll call was answered by 15 members with a verse from the Bible containing the word "for-sake". The group was pleased to welcome two new members. A most interesting letter was read by the supply and social assistance secretary, Mrs. Harry Newman, from the Brunswick Street Mission expressing their gratitude for the supplies sent at Christmas. The new officers for the 1966 year were installed in a service by Rev. T. R. Goudge. After some discussion, it was decided that the UCW would pay the oil bill for the church for the coming year. Mrs. R. Weeks was appointed as a representative from the UCW for the local girl guide company. The afghan which was knitted by members of the group under the supervision of Mrs. Harry Newman, has been completed for the Brunswick St. Mission. Members were advised by the president that the World's Day of Prayer Service will be held in the Winslow South Church on February 25. Mrs. Stillman Frizzell, M. R. S. Frank Thomson and the president, Mrs. Thomson, who attended the UCW Presbyterian meeting at Kensington on Feb 5, discussed some of the information received at the meeting and two new committees were formed: Christian citizenship and social action. Mrs. Stillman Frizzell and literature and communication, Mrs. Frank Thomson. Rev. Goudge brought the meeting to a close with prayer and refreshments were then served by the hostess and committee. B. RAE UCW The February meeting of the Brae UCW was held at the home of Mrs. Eddie MacNevin. The president called the meeting to order and Mrs. Preston MacKinnon conducted the opening devotional period. Business session opened in usual manner. A number of premium coupons from Canada-Packets products were turned in and it was decided that they be exchanged for another table cloth when sufficient coupons are on hand. In the absence of the treasurer the report was read by Mrs. S. David MacDonald. Report from program committee was read by Mrs. Alice MacFadyen. From this report the following recommendation was made: "The committee for Program strongly recommend that each member have her own study book 'Jesus Christ and the Christian Life' in order that all may engage fruitfully in personal reading and group discussion during study periods." It was decided that ten study books would be ordered. Correspondence consisted of a letter from Canada Packers Ltd., an invitation from O'Leary UCW to attend their United Church Centre on an evening of March 15, and a letter from Mrs. Keith Ramsay of Kensington in answer to our request for sponsoring Kensington UCW's Variety Concert. A request for used nylons for use in Korea was read and some nylons were donated. An announcement concerning the World Day of Prayer on Feb. 25 was made. Next meeting will be held at home of Mrs. Alice MacFadyen. Mrs. MacFadyen will conduct the study at this meeting and Mrs. Fred MacLeod will be

Sweet-Sour Dutch Beets On International Menu

Surveys show that many homemakers—even the most meticulous—continue to allow a common drinking cup to be used in the kitchen and bathroom. Yet it is often proved to be contaminated; a major germ-spreader. Gradual Replacement More than 50 years ago, when paper cups first went on the market, they were adopted as a means of promoting public health. Tin cups and dippers used in trains, schools and other public places were gradually banned and replaced by paper cups. The home has lagged in adopting this safety measure. Yet a dispenser, especially for kitchen and bathroom use, provides a clean single-use paper cup, and should make the old-fashioned tin dipper. Let's all join in with the modern campaign to promote family health through the use of disposable paper cups. It is estimated that common colds cost the average American family $35 to $40 each year. Health authorities maintain that the spread of colds within the family can be checked by use of a new paper cup each time for each drinker of water, and eliminating the one-for-all drinking cup shared by every member of the family. ELLEN'S DIARY

A Runt Piglet Was Now The Pet Of The Piggery

"It's on the home stretch now" James observed of the runt piglet at dinner today. And the sun was patterning its blue shadows on the white of the lawn. A blue light was over all this evening, replacing the purpling shadows of summer, which come down over the grasses and leaves. It came on the heels of the sunset, weaving far and wide a winsome charm on the winter-world about. "It's not" Peter explained, as we watched it deepen, "that I don't like the winter, it's only that I like the summer best of all!" "And when the winter is over, The boughs will get new leaves. The quail will come back to the clover, And the swallow back to the eaves." We repeated to him these lines come to us out of some cranny of mind, as we sat in the old armchair, waiting for James to come in to supper. Chicken was to be our faring, Peter's choice would be that which comes with the wish bone, Bared, it would be later dried in the warming oven. And then some time when there was no magic at all to a day, it would be taken down and broken apart by a pair of lads, one length to be put above a listel with sly smiles to see who would be the first lass to pass beneath, to restore lost chucks to the hour. James had carried out with him, the warmed milk to be mixed with meal for the runt piglet, a pet now of the piggery, who looks up expectantly with a happy grin and grunts a welcome at his coming. A gilt was added to the herd there today, to replace a sow marketed and to join those that will summer in the orchard close by. He would note her potential as to motherhood, and wonder whether or not her dam had been one who had-graciously accepted the same. How blue was the twilight! Remindful of that shade caught

In those cakes of ice, brought up from the millpond below the front meadow in winters of an age of farm-living now gone, and stored in sawdust in the ice-house; to refrigerate summer floods; to cool drinks in the little freezer, cranked so happily by hand. Meanwhile we chatted with Peter in the quiet of the kitchen, discussing such problems as: "Would a potato basket hold a million dollars exactly - with not too little to fill it, or not too much?" And "What makes a cat purr?" And "Why do they like mice best of all?"

"Now" James smiled presently from the doorway, where he was shedding his boots, "you can set down the tapot, Ellen. Do we have a visitor?" he queried pleased to have the young company remain. "Today's weather - well it was like a March day. It reminded me of the mud-digging days down the River", he commented coming indoors. There is no mud-digging now down the River. But February is on the home stretch, and Spring is just over the way. Until tomorrow... -Diary- Good-night.
