THE AMERICAN $8.00 Typewriter.

This is a well-made, practical machine, writing capitals, small letters, figures, and punctuation marks (71 in all) on full width paper, just like a $100 instrument. It is the first of its kind ever offered at a popular price for which the above claim can be truthfully made. It is not a toy, but a typewriter built for and capable of REAL WORK. While not as rapid as the large machines sometimes become in expert hands, it is still at least as rapid as the pen, and has the advantage of such simplicity that it can be understood and mastered almost at a glance. We cordially commend it to helpful parents and teachers everywhere.

Writes capitals, small letters, figures and marks—71 in all. Writes just like a $100 machine. No Shift Keys. No Ribbon. Prints from the type direct. Prints on flat surface. Writing always in sight. Corrections and insertions easily made. Takes any width of paper or envelope up to 8 1/2 inches.

Easy to understand—learned in 5 minutes. Weighs only four pounds—most portable. Compact, takes up but little room. Built solid and simple; can't get out of order. Capital and lower case keyboard alike—easily mastered. More "margin play" for the small letters which do most of the work. Takes good letter-press copies.

Packed securely in handsome case and expressed to any address on receipt of price, $8.00, in registered letter, money order or certified check. We guarantee every machine, and are glad to answer all inquiries for further information as to this machine and also the "Yost."

GOD GIVE US MEN! God give us men! A time like this demands great hearts, strong minds, true faith and willing hands. Men who possess opinions and a will; Men who have honor, men who will not lie. For while the rain falls, with their thumb worn creeds. Their large professions and their little deeds. Wrangle in selfish strife—in Freedom weeds. A GOLD REEF.

"You dear old boy," said the girl, "I am sure I wish it could be—with all my heart I have my heart." "I don't believe you have," replied the boy gloomily. "Well, but, Reg, consider. You've got no money." "I've got £5,000. If a man can't make his way upon that he must be a poor stick."

"You can only earn them for me by the time you have one foot in the grave. Hadn't I better tell you in the morning, my dear boy, so as to be ready for me in two or three years after the other foot, I dare say, would slide into the grave as well."

"The soil is fertile." "I've dropped £5,000 in it, and they have not come up again yet." "They will. I have been round the estate, and I see money in it. Well, sir, here's my offer. Five thousand down, the rest cash, as soon as the papers are signed."

"Only that I have taken a fancy—perhaps a foolish fancy—to this place of yours, and I'll give you, if you like, all that you have spent upon it."

Honey Hunting Bears. No bee hunter can find and find a better tree with more precision than the American black bear can do. When he finds the tree, he climbs it, staying every little distance to hammer on the trunk with one of his paws, so that he will know by the sound when he reaches the hollow place where the honey is stored.

Assimilable Phosphorus is the brain and nerve food, par excellence. One bottle of Putner's Emulsion contains more of this invaluable element than a gallon of the much-vaunted stimulants, Liquid Beef, etc., of the day.

nothing. There was the French count, but that was knocked on the head very early in consequence of things discovered. And there was the boom in Lumbus, but he fortunately scented, much to Hood's joy, because she never liked him. The last was Lord Evergreen. He was a nice old chap when you could understand what he said, and Hood would have liked him very much, though his grand children opposed the thing. Well, sir, I suppose you could not understand the trouble which kept that old man alive for his own wedding. Science did all it could, but 'twas of no use. The financier sighed. "The ways of Providence are inscrutable. Hoed, sir, the day before."

"And so it means this. Oh, Rosie, you look lovelier than ever, and I'm as happy as a king. It means this. Your father is the greatest genius in the world. He buys my property for £99,000—£99,000. That's over two hundred times the value of a company out of it with £150,000 capital. He says that, taking £10,000 out of it for expenses, there will be a profit of £89,000. And all that he gives to you—£89,000—that's £89,000 a year for you, and £99,000 that's two more, my dearest Rosie. You remember what you said last when you married you would step out of one room like this into another just as good?"

"You know I never could love any one but you, my dear boy. It was only because he had one foot in the grave, you know, and when the other foot went in, just a day too soon, I actually laugh at it. So the paper is going to make a company of it. Well, I hope he won't put any of his own money into it, I'm sure he turned out of late. "But, my child, the place is full of gold."

"Then why did he turn it into a company, my dear boy. Why didn't he make you his heir? But you know nothing of the city. Now, let us sit down and talk about what we shall do. Don't, you ridiculous boy!"

Another house just like the first. The bride stepped out of one place into another. With their £150,000, £45,000 the young couple could just manage to make both ends meet. The husband was devoted; the wife had everything she could wish. Who could be happier than this pair in a nest so luxurious, their life so padded, their days so full of sunshine? It was a year after marriage. The wife contrary to her usual habits, was the first to break it. A few letters were written for her—chiefly invitations. She opened and read them. Among them lay one addressed to her husband. Not looking at the address, she opened and read that as well.

DEAR REGINALD—I venture to address you as an old friend, and with affectionate remembrance of your mother, I am writing you a letter. My husband was the vicar of your old parish—your mother's son, and I was left with a little income of about £300 a year. Twelve months ago, I was persuaded, in order to double my income—a thing which I consider from the prospect to invest every thing in new and good mining. Everything, and the mine has never paid anything. The company is called the Emerald Gold Reef, and its liquidation has been made, though there is really a good deal of ore, too much to get it. I have no relatives anywhere to help me. Unless I can get some of my children and I must go to some—tomorrow I am to the workhouse. Yes, we are paupers. I am a widow with four children, and the wickedness which deluded me, and I know not how many others, out of my money. I have been foolish and am punished. Those people who will punish their children, if you can, my dear boy, God's sake, help my children and me. Help your mother's friend, your own old friend.

"This," said Rosie, "is a regular letter from the kind of thing to make Reginald uncomfortable. Why, it might make him unhappy all day. Better burn it!" She dropped the letter into the fire. "He is an impulsive, emotional nature, and he does not understand the city. If people are so foolish as to invest their money in a mine, they do tell, to be sure! He is a regular novelist—oh, here you are, my lazy boy!" "Kiss me, Rosie." He looked as hard as some Apollo and as cheerful. "I wish all the world were as happy as you and I. Heigho! Some poor devil, I'm afraid!" "Tea or coffee, Reg?" Walter Besant.
