showed out of trumps some of the radiance vanished with the speed of a sputnik. After winning the diamond, West shifted to a club. South won and led the ace of spades. A heart lead brought the ace from West and another club. South won, cashed the queen of spades, and ruffed a diamond. When East's queen fell, South realized he could not ruff two more diamonds in dummy, since East would overruff one for the setting trick.

So the king of hearts was cashed and a heart ruffed to bring about this position:

Opening lead — king of diamonds. There is a play described by Paul Hummel recently in the Bridge World magazine which he aptly calls the double-whammy trump squeeze.

Since the double-whammy is a subject that has always been dear to my heart anyhow, and my interest was doubly aroused by the hand he used to illustrate the double-whammy trump squeeze, I pass it along to any brethren and sisters of the bridge fraternity who might be interested.

It seems South found himself engaged in an effort to make eleven tricks with spades as trump. When dummy made its bow, prospects appeared decidedly bright, but when West early

The jack of spades was led and West couldn't budge. If he discarded a diamond, South would hold the lead and ruff a diamond.

If West discarded a club, dummy would win, and a club would be ruffed. Either discard spelled death for the defenders. Wham!

Double Car-Axle Forging Capacity At Trenton Mill

TORONTO (CP)—Investment of $500,000 to double the railway car-axle forging capacity at Trenton, N.S., of the steel division of Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation Ltd., was announced Friday by Crawford Gordon, Dosco president.

A new manipulator, forging hammer and billet-heating furnace will be added to present axle-production facilities to enable them "to meet the increasing demands of Canada's expanding economy," Mr. Gordon said.

"It was in 1947," he added, "that Dosco installed its first mechanical forging manipulator to mass produce railway axles. This modernized a process that began more than 80 years ago at Trenton when they forged this country's first railway axle from bundled iron under a board hammer."

"The new equipment will continue Trenton's tradition of leadership in this field. It will enable Dosco to meet all requirements for railway car axles in the foreseeable future."

Mr. Gordon is also president of A. V. Roe Canada Ltd., which acquired control of Dosco last October.

Wartime Rumor Pylon Destroyed

DOVER, England (Reuters)—A wooden pylon 250 feet high which caused wartime rumors of a "secret death ray" was destroyed Friday by government order.

The pylon was one of four erected in great secrecy early in the war as part of Britain's radar screen.

Rumors spread that Britain had discovered a "secret ray" to beat the German bombers. The rumors were strengthened by motorists driving along the lonely coastal road who found their car engines stalled when they passed the pylons.

The air ministry pronounced this epithet for the pylons Friday: "Radar never stopped a motor car engine. It was just one of those things."
