Horse Breeding.

SOME days ago, we took occasion to remind the farmers and breeders of this Province what their duty was in order to keep abreast of the times in breeding trotting and carriage stock.

We have in this Province, now, in this class, quite a collection of suitable matrons, and as to sires, we think we can challenge any part of the Dominion.

A few years ago, $100 was considered a good price for a fully developed general purpose horse. To attain full development and a marketable age, (say 6 or 7 years old) a large sum of money and much valuable time was consumed in producing the general purpose horse.

The first consideration for the breeder is to secure a good dam. In this, he will have no difficulty, as the get of Barrister, Brown Stout and other good sires are abundant, and at fairly moderate prices.

It is a great temptation to a farmer of limited means to accept a liberal price for his best brood mares. If he, for a moment, only considers the projective profits of such an animal, no consideration would induce him to part with her.

It requires some means to carry on successfully the breeding of trotters, as a good dam is high priced, and the service of a good sire is expensive, while breeding draft stock in a small way does not cost as much as raising scrubs, does not in any way interfere with mixed farming, and adds yearly to the coffers of the breeder.

Let our farmers pay more attention to this matter, use their intelligence in horse breeding, and we venture to say that mongrel-bred sires will become things of the past.

In the selection of a draft sire the farmer has great variety from which to make his choice. Let him select the best, the purest breed in his class, and the one, for his advantages, that has produced the best results.

There is one thing the farmer should avoid. Never breed to a mongrel-bred sire—no matter how promising he may be individually.

Varia.

On the 23rd of June, 1887—exactly a year ago to-day—I furnished a series of short articles, and because they treated of various subjects I headed the column "Varia."

General Boulanger has made a speech before the Chamber. The speech announced no definite policy beyond a dissolution and the convocation of a constituent assembly, and the result was just what had been anticipated.

The gloss of the Irish Roman Catholic Bishops on the decree of the Holy Office is pretty much what might have been expected. They are really attached to the Pope, so they submit.

Mr. Lewis Carroll, the author of "Alice in Wonderland," has made a courageous protest. "I have never seen Mr. Gilbert's clever play 'Pinafore' performed by grown-up actors; as played by children one passage was to me sad beyond words."

On the 29th of October I gave a short list of the last words of some great men. I have increased my collection of dying words since then, and these I now give in the hope that your readers may find them interesting:—

"See how a Christian dies! or, see in what peace a Christian can die."—Addison. "Give the boys a holiday."—Anaxagoras. "I pray you all pray for me."—Beaufort.

"I have led a happy life."—Hazlitt. "Now I am about to take my last voyage, a great leap in the dark."—Hobbes.

"I resign my spirit to God, my daughter to my country."—Jefferson. "God bless you, my dear."—Dr. Johnson.

"O Allah, be it so! Henceforth amongst the glorious host of Paradise."—Mahomet. "Farewell my children for ever. I go to your father."—Marie Antoinette.

"I have loved God, my father and liberty."—Madame Stael. "I'll be shot if I don't believe I'm dying."—Lord Thurlow.

"O God, have mercy upon me and upon this poor nation."—William of Nassau. "What! do they run already? Then I die happy."—Wolfe.

Bishop Courtney.

THE BISHOP'S LAST DAY UPON THE ISLAND. To-morrow, His Lordship will ordain Mr. W. A. Frost, of Toronto, to the Diaconate, in St. Paul's Church; the Rev. Dr. Hole, Rector of St. Paul's, Halifax, will be the preacher; others of the clergy will also be present.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Letter From Mr. Earle.

SIR,—A large music class, which takes up nearly all my time, St. James Choir, and the very little time I have over, which I devote to taxidermy, does not look as "Beaver" says, that I have more leisure time than I desire. However, I can find time to attend to him.

There are people in this world who sow the good seed, and others that reap. I appear to be one of the victims in this respect. When we take into consideration that the new Church Hymnal has been learned in its entirety by the congregation and choir; the boys excepted; also that the Book of Psalms I had been working hard upon the past winter, through my work, you must see that I have not been idle.

An Explanation.

SIR,—I might explain that the largemouth mentioned in Tuesday's paper was caught with ordinary fishing gear, and a small fresh bait of about 10, dressed in homespun. For bait, an oblong piece of dry parchment, or heavy pliable paper, on which was dimly visible "Farmer's Bank of Rustico," while in each corner was a large figure 1, seeming in a poor state of health. I have tried all kinds of bait, and can say "without fear of successful contradiction," that this is the best kind for very large fish, though I got several basketfuls in the orthodox manner.

Yours, etc., W. A. HAWLEY.

The Intercolonial Express Co.

SIR,—Your editorial remarks yesterday, in answer to the Journal's criticism on the circumlocution of the Intercolonial Express Co. were evidently based upon information furnished you. Permit me to say that your remarks do not constitute either a full or satisfactory reply to the Journal.
