

Electors, Attention!

The Liberal-Conservative Committee on revision of the Voters' List respectfully notifies voters not already registered, as well as those whose registration requires correction, to apply immediately at the office of John T. Mallish, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, Queen Square, where every facility will be freely afforded to secure proper registration.

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

JULY 20, 1889.

Notes and Clippings.

The arrest of "Jack the Ripper" is a relief to humanity—particularly that part of it which exists within the sphere of his operations. That he remained so long at large is not highly creditable to the police of London.

Now that a fence is at once to be placed around the square, THE EXAMINER will have more time and space to devote to the dust nuisance. It is as hard to move the civic authorities as the Dominion authorities. But they will move by and by.

The action of the authorities in the case of the Kingston post office clerks who opened letters, en passant, is full of warning to officials of the Post Office Department all over the country. The offence of opening a letter passing through the post is regarded as a misdemeanor, and is punishable by fine or imprisonment, or by both.

A "shortage" of the European cattle crop, and low prices in America, have induced cattle dealers in Chicago to secure "all the vacant room on all outgoing steamers from New York for Liverpool, Glasgow and London, for two or three months." It is also stated that "J. L. Hatheway, of Boston, and his syndicate have engaged all the room on the steamers of the Warren Line, from Boston, for July, August and September, and Meyer Goldsmith, of New York, has engaged the same line for October."

Still another telegraphic cable is to be laid across the Atlantic. It is announced that £400,000 sterling has been subscribed in England for the construction of a cable which is to run from the Strait of Belleisle to a point on the west coast of Ireland. The Dominion Government will, it is believed, continue the land line along the north shore of the St. Lawrence to the Straits of Belleisle, where it will connect with the new cable. Independent cable communication with all parts of Canada will thus be secured.

The London Times derisively thanks Sir Charles Russell and the others for their assistance in the Commission court, and says it is heartily glad they did not retire earlier. The wisdom of Mr. Parnell's counsel in retiring from the court seems to be questionable. Granted that they were not getting fair play, the British people would have been quick to note the fact and condemn the Judges. Certainly, the decision of the Judges will not be more favorable because Mr. Parnell's counsel have, in the most impressive way, declared their want of confidence in the court, than it would be if Mr. Parnell's counsel had remained and "fought it out."

The scandalous action of Attorney-General Ashford in a suit threatens to overthrow the Government that came into power in the Sandwich Islands two years ago. His father-in-law recently shot down a man, and when the trial came on the Attorney-General asked for a nolle prosequi, as the chief witness had left the Island. The Court, having been informed that Ashford had paid $600 to the witness to go away, ordered the case for trial. This enraged Ashford, who claimed a Crown Prosecutor's right to say whether a case should be tried or not, and he refused to proceed. The Court accordingly sentenced him to twenty-four hours' imprisonment for contempt, and he was in jail when the last steamer left the island. A Cabinet crisis is expected to follow.

The Londonderry Advertiser says that "Acadia Iron Mines are bound to become an extensive iron manufacturing district. Situated as it is, amid the yet unlimited iron ore deposits of the Cohequida, already equipped with large smelting furnaces and other splendid facilities for the manufacture of iron, it may be said to have the foundation of what in a few years, under favorable circumstances, will be largely remunerative, both to capital and labor. To-day it gives employment to hundreds of workmen, and as a consequence the monthly pay roll of the company foots up to thousands of dollars, which forms the circulating medium of a tidy amount of ready cash throughout the country district immediately adjoining the mine. Among the workmen and their families of this locality the farmers of a large portion of Colchester and Cumberland can find a ready cash market for their surplus farm produce." This is only one of a number of towns in Nova Scotia that are being built by the National Policy.

Auction Sale of Freehold Property.—The special attention of parties wishing to secure Building Lots for private residences, is directed to the Mortgage Sale advertised to take place at the Law Courts Building on Tuesday, the 30th of July, inst., at 12 o'clock, noon. Those two plots of land, containing 2 acres each, are situated at Brighton, in Charlottetown Common, commanding a beautiful view of the Harbor's Mouth, West River and North River, with the Victoria Park close by, and within five minute's walk of Queen Square Gardens and Public Buildings. For terms of sale, etc., apply to E. H. Haviland, Esq., Solicitor.—A. McNeill, Auctioneer. jy 20—31

WELCOME TO CHARLOTTETOWN.—Messrs. J. F. Willis & Co., McEachern's Building, Lower Queen Street, Piano and Organ Merchants, are welcome here. This place, like all other places, wants men of the high, moral, financial and business order, who come to spend money and furnish employment, as well as to make money honestly themselves. The public interest is better served by fair and honorable competition. The standing of Messrs. Willis & Co. is of the very highest order, as is well known all over Canada, the United States, and in musical circles in England. Come and welcome them to our city.—JAMES F. WILLIS & CO.

Varia.

The Shah is in England again (he was there sixteen years ago) and the same commotion which was raised on the occasion of his visit then is repeated now. Every movement is treated as a state event, and he is attended by many soldiers and numerous flunkies. Nasir-ed-din has lately been paying a visit to Russia, and it may be remembered that the Czar reminded him of the many Russian troops upon his frontier, significantly remarking that if undue concessions were made by Persia to England, it might be necessary for him to put the troops in motion. No doubt the English Government desire to impress him with a sense of England's power; but it seems that the Shah cannot be possessed of the keen shrewdness with which he is credited if he does not recognize that Russia, his nearest neighbor, is the power with which it is his policy to keep on good terms. It is to be regretted that he is not to be present during the naval review, for he then would have seen one feature in which England is unapproachable by any other power. I imagine that one difficulty is to know what it is that will impress the Oriental mind most. Like all Asiatic monarchs, he seems to possess a capacity for shuffling, which is the great characteristic of Eastern potentates, and I think it may be doubted whether his present entertainment will do much to change the necessities of his position.

News comes to us of the engagement of Louise, eldest daughter of the Prince of Wales, to the Earl of Fife. The announcement has been received by the English people with pleasure, for they very much prefer that a Royal Princess should marry one of themselves rather than one of the foreigner German princes, to whom the choice of the Royal family seems to have been hitherto restricted. Lord Fife is a Scottish nobleman of ancient descent, for Duff is a name which reaches as far back as Campbell, claiming in its line the Mveduff who figures in Shakespeare as the adversary of Macbeth. It is said that the marriage is one entirely of affection, by which, I imagine, is intended that it was not brought about by considerations of public policy. Of course this is always said, but I see no reason why, in this case, it should not be so. The very fact that the bridegroom is seventeen years older than the Princess naturally leads one to believe that she would not go out of her way to marry him unless she was sincerely attached to him. The Earl is an old friend of the Prince and Princess of Wales; one of his county seats is quite near Balmoral; he has seen their children grow up, and has lived on terms of intimacy with them. By the marriage act of George III., the consent of the Sovereign has first to be given before any marriage of a member of the Royal Family can be solemnized, and in the authentic (almost official) journal which records the acts and doings of the Queen, we are told that she gave her consent to the engagement "with much pleasure and satisfaction." It is not the habit of the Queen to use words without significance. She is a good judge of character, and having had a long acquaintance with Lord Fife, we may be sure she has reason to believe that the marriage will result in the happiness of her grand-child.

M. F. asks me if there is any truth in the statement that Tennyson's Song, "Home they brought her warrior dead," was "taken by him from Sir Walter Scott." No, that certainly is not true, but there is a wonderful similarity between the Poet Laureate's beautiful song and a scene in the "Lay of the Last Minstrel." I give the latter so that my correspondent may compare them:

In sorrow o'er Lord Walter's bier
The warlike foresters had bent,
And many a flower and many a tear
Old Teviot's maids and matrons lent,
But o'er her worriers bloody bier
The lady dropped no flower nor tear.

Until amid his sorrowing clan
Her son lisp'd from his nurse's knee,
"And if I live to be a man
My father's death revenged shall be!"
Than fast the mother's tears did seek
To dew the infant's kindling cheek.

There is a very interesting edition of Gray's Elegy published, I think, in the United States, showing the various corrections and alterations made by the author in that beautiful pastoral before he finally gave it to the public. I am not able to refer to that book to see whether it contains the following stanza, which he rejected:—
Hark! how the sacred calm which breathes around,
Bids every fierce tumultuous passion cease;
In still, small accents whispering from the ground
A grateful earnest of eternal peace.

An author is, of course, the best judge of what to strike out of any of his works, but the stanza is so beautiful that one cannot help wishing that Gray had left it there.

Another year has passed since the "Varia" column has appeared in THE EXAMINER, and I have received many assurances that my budget is valued by those who adopt the practice of transferring to their scrap books information not always accessible. I have endeavored to answer the various questions I have received; some I have passed by because they would inevitably provoke a useless controversy. Of course it is not possible to please everybody; but I endeavor to avoid giving offence, although I fear I do not always manage to succeed.

Eternal vigilance enables a man to carry the same umbrella for years.

Here We Are Again!

McLEOD & McKENZIE, STAR MERCHANT TAILORS, The Original and Peerless Artists of Our Day.

THE ABOVE HAS BEEN A SETTLED FACT FOR YEARS, and to keep before the public what is so well known to every good dresser in this Province, may seem superfluous. But as a good dinner tends to give a quietus to the disturbing influences within the inner man, so a thorough knowledge of our capabilities will give a quietus to anyone who may have had the good fortune of being dressed by us. The sun rises and sets, and it appears to the ordinary judgment that the sun revolves around the earth instead of the earth revolving around the sun; so we, through the immense strides we have taken in our art, would appear to the uneducated to be moving around our many friends, instead of they moving around us; like the sun imparts its warm rays to revive drooping nature, so we are the benefactors of our people, by aiming high and attaining to a STYLE and FINISH in our Garments, which cannot but commend us as the MERCHANT TAILORING PHILANTHROPISTS of our day.

Are you anxious to test the foregoing? Come in, then, and see our line of Goods, which are superior, in every sense of the word, and we will fit you out with a Suit which will doubtless draw the loving remark from your best girl that she has "the best dressed young man in town." Call early, if you must have it before 1st July.
