TESTIFIES TO THE WONDERFUL EFFECTS OF MALTO PEPTONIZED PORTER In Cases of Dyspepsia and Nervous Depression.

GENTLEMEN.—I have purposely delayed writing you, as I wished to give a thoroughly complete trial to the M. P. P. It affords me much pleasure now to give it my unqualified approval in the class of cases in which I have used it: In Atonic Dyspepsia, in convalescence from Nervous Depression, and in cases where the stomach is irritable and rejects stronger forms of stimulants. I have found most marked results from its use, and I strongly recommend its employment. Although this note is unsolicited by you, it is at your disposal for any use you wish to make of it.

For sale by all Druggists.

THE DAILY EXAMINER

FEBRUARY 9 1892

Literary Notes

THE CENTURY comes to us this month full of articles of great interest. There is a continuation of "The Jews in New York," a description that will give the reader a good deal of curious information regarding the customs and habits of the children of Israel in a foreign land. Another article on "Pioneer Days in San Francisco," is fully as exciting as those which have previously appeared. "Recent Discoveries in the Gulf Stream," furnishes the facts for an article which will be read with eagerness by those who wish to prove that the Gulf stream is at the bottom of the mild weather which ushered in the beginning of our present winter. Some charming short stories and poems, and another instalment of "The Nulshka," a novel by Rudyard Kipling and Walcott Balestier, complete the number.

"Roy the Royalist" is the name of the complete story which appears in LEPPIN COOT'S MAGAZINE. It is a story of the adventures of a naval officer in the days of Napoleon I., and is full of exciting incidents. As usual the miscellaneous articles which appear are of a high order.

Of late what seems to us to be a great attraction in HARPER'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE are the tales told in a Frenchman's broken English. "That which is given this month entitled "Mario" is very good, but it is hard to pick out for particular praise, more than another, any contribution to this magazine; the contents of which comprise a wide variety of literary pleasures which will gratify all who look into them.

"SELECTED AND ELEGANT, and Jerusalem Crickets: a Warning to the People," is the fantastic and truly original title of a pamphlet which a certain T. J. Williamson has had the hardihood to launch into the world. The exuberant verbosity of this gentleman has resolved itself into 66 pages of printed rubbish, consisting mainly of texts of Scripture thrown together anyhow, with here and there a proverbial expression that makes bathos. One paragraph takes twenty-five pages to itself, and it is too tiresome to read through. If anyone wants to buy this book, send 25 cents to the author, whose address is 77 Bible House Square, New York.

"THE HISTORY OF DAVID GRIEVE," by Mrs. Humphrey Ward, the Copp Clark Co., Ltd., Toronto. This new book will, we expect, cause as much sensation, if not more, than that curiously over-rated story of "Robert Elsmere." "The History of David Grieve" has been looked forward to with eagerness by the author's admirers. It cannot be denied that the views of the writer are peculiar, and her peculiarities have found full scope in this volume. It would be simply untrue to say that Mrs. Ward is not a woman of great genius, and it is the mastery of language which she possesses; the powerful way in which she places the striking incidents of her story before our eyes; the sweet womanly sympathy which almost makes us weep in reading the pathetic portions of the tale; the love of nature, so beautifully and truly expressed; her almost incomparable analysis of human nature; and her broad charity; it is all these things which make her book powerful and teach us that fiction may boldly deal with far greater problems than are usually taken hold of. But—the fruit is bad at the core, and the ultimate reason which the average reader will probably learn from this story will be far from elevating. At one time we are misled by descriptions of the beauties of Christian teaching, and all the world comes sidled from this point of view, with the magnetic, thrilling words of the writer ringing in our ears, seems not to had a place after all; and then, when the heart and mind are, so to speak, impressed by this high moral teaching, one is disgusted to find a chapter describing the hero—whose creed is the unaccountable and glib philosophy of Voltare—living in sin with a young girl. But it is shameful to think of an author not only prostituting her genius to the work of undermining in us a faith in God and religion, but sapping the foundations of purity and innocence, and disguising her teaching by a false sympathy that betrays us in the end.

"THE LITTLE MINISTER"—By J. M. Barrie; author of "A Window in Thrums."—Montreal, J. Lovell & Son, No. 130 Star Series.

This is a delightful book which we can heartily recommend to the pursuit of young or old. It contains the story of the troubles of a young Presbyterian minister in an old-fashioned parish and among some old-fashioned people. It is by no means comes within that class of fiction known as "clerical novels," which for the most part is stupid and heavy. There is here to be found lots of fun and amusement, without a word to jar upon the feelings of the most sensitive. And amid the minister's trials not the least is the troubled story of his love. We forbear giving an outline of the story, for to be fully appreciated it should be read in full. One scene we transcribe from our author's pages, for we believe it fully represents the horror with which the poorhouse is regarded by the poor, a remark which holds good as to England, equally as well as Scotland. Nanny Sanders is a poor woman, but has become desolate by reason of her husband being confined in jail for having participated in a riot. The old village doctor and "The Little Minister" (the Rev. Gavin Dharst) have called for her to express their sympathy and to drive her over to the dreadful institution:—

The door stood open, and Nanny was crouching against the opposite wall of the room, such a poor, dull kitchen, that you would have thought the furniture had still to be brought in. The banker and the piece of old carpet that was Nanny's coverlet were the only things in the room. The plate rack was empty. Only the round table and the two chairs, and the stools and a few pans were left behind.

"Well, Nanny," the doctor said, trying to butter, "I have come, and you see Mr. Dharst is with me."

Nanny rose up bravely. She knew the doctor was good to her, and she wanted to thank him. I have not seen a great deal of the world myself, but often the sweet politeness of the aged poor has struck me as beautiful. Nanny dropped a curtsey, an ungainly one maybe, but it was an old woman giving her best she had.

"Thank you kindly, sir," she said; and then two pairs of eyes dropped before hers. "Please to take a chair," she added timidly. It is strange to know that at that awful moment—for let some tell me it was less than awful—the old woman was the one who could speak.

Both men sat down, for they would have hurt Nanny by remaining standing. Some ministers would have known the right thing to say to her, but Gavin dared not let himself speak. I have again to remind you that he was only one and twenty.

"I'm drouthy, Nanny," the doctor said, to give her something to do, "and I would be obliged if you'd bring me a drink of water."

Nanny hastened to the pan that stood behind her door, but stopped before she reached it.

"It's toom," she said. "I—I dinna think I need to fill it this morning." She caught the doctor's eye, and could only half restrain a sob. "I couldna help that," she said apologetically. "I'm richt angry at myself for being so ungrateful like."

The doctor thought it best they should depart at once. He rose.

"Oh, no, doctor," cried Nanny in alarm. "A," she said, "I have been ready this two hours, but you might wait a minute. Henry Mun and Andrew Allardyce is coming your way, and they would see me."

"Thank you kindly, sir," answered Nanny. "But, Nanny," the doctor said, "you must remember what I told you about the poorhouse. It is a fine place, and you will be very happy in it."

"I'll be happy in it," Nanny faltered, "but, doctor, if I could just see hidden on here though I wassa happy!"

"Think of the food you will get; broth nearly every day."

"It'll be terrible enjoyable," Nanny said.

"And there will be pleasant company for you always," continued the doctor, "and a nice room to sit in. Why, after you have been there a week, you won't be the same woman."

"That's it," cried Nanny with sudden passion. "Na, na, I'll be a woman on the poorhouse. O, mither, mither, you'll think when you bore me that I would come to this."

"Nanny," the doctor said, rising again, "I am humbly your forgiveness, sir," she said, "and you might bid me just a wee yet, I've been ready to gang this two hours, but now that the machine is at the gate, I dinna ken how it is, but I'm terrible sweet to come here." Oh, Mr. Dharst, it's richt true what the doctor says about the place, but I can't just take it in. I'm—I'm gey sad."

"You will often get out to see your friends," was all Gavin could say.

"Na, na, na," she cried, "dinna say that, I gang, but you mussa bid me ever come out, except in a hearse, Diana, let onybody in Thrums look on my face again."

"We must go," said the doctor firmly. "Put on your mitch Nanny."

"I dinna need to put on a mitch," she answered, with a faint flash of pride. "I have a bonnet."

WHAT a cleaner that Lassoive Phenix is. Try it upon anything. It is the ideal clothes washer, for it takes the places of the old harsh chemical washing powders, and makes every article sweet and clean, being innocuous with cottons and flannels alike. Even after using it in the wash, just try what it will do with silver, brass or metalware, in removing stains from wood; or in cleaning glass. You really can't believe it until you try it.

A RICH MAN'S CHARITIES.—The fourth annual statement of the Sir Wm Young charitable and benevolent fund (Halifax) published under directions in the editor's will, shows investments amounting to $100,000. After deducting $82 expenses, a net income of $4,751 has been paid to the beneficiaries.

EVERY housewife has an interest in keeping her hands soft and white, women who did their domestic washing found this impossible with the old wretched chemicals which burned and puckered the hands, and worked havoc with the clothes. That was until they heard of L-assoive Phenix. And then a new era dawned of comfort and happiness. Lassoive Phenix is a name to conjure with. Use it for washing anything. It is not a chemical powder. It makes white clothes whiter, and colored clothes brighter; and it will cleanse and polish and brighten everything in parlor or kitchen. Ask your grocer.
