Festival of the Beer

This is being written partially before the fact, but if Thursday night is any indication of what is in store for the weekend, it should be quite a wild time. Ryan's Fancy got it off to a beautiful beginning in the good old Pig & Wistle tradition. The walls of the gym were plastered with posters of how to say "cheers" in five different languages and Ryan's Fancy came on like commercials with "Drink up, the more you drink the more you'll like the music". And of course, the Irish in the student body began to come out.

I remember asking about Winter Carnival last year and always getting the response, "It's great." On probing deeper into the subject of what went on during Winter Carnival, I would always hear, "Everybody gets drunk."

This year instead of restricting such a weekend of festivities to once during the winter, we are also having one in the fall. If Fall Festival turns out anything like Winter Carnival, you should have more students participating in the escapade than you would for any other event that goes on at the University. This has been proved this year with plays, lectures etc., having almost no attendance what so ever.

If this is the case, the University should attempt to get a liquor licence for every weekend of the year. We could have a festival or carnival for the first day of fall and one for the first day of spring. We could have one on weekends that have full moons. We could have one for Halloween and another for Trudeau's birthday. If the student body really put their minds to it, they could think of a reason for every weekend there is.

These festivities have always fallen on a weekend with a football or hockey game. I can see no reason for restricting it only to these two sports. They could also be held in conjunction with basketball games, or tiddly-winks tournaments.

A little bit of creativity would have to be used to change the precedings around so that it wouldn't get boring from one week to the next. Some other beer drinking cultures would have to be used instead of the Irish and the Germans all the time. Instead of highlights of the Canada-Russia hockey series, we could show films of the Albania - Bolivia soccer game of '46 or other sports events of equal mention. We wouldn't have any problem though getting a different Abbott & Costello movie for every week.

If this is what the student body of the University wants, all should be done to accomodate their wishes.
