Horses Yield To Motors In Milk Delivery Service

The white horse-drawn milk delivery units of the Pure Milk Company which have been a familiar sight in the residential sections of Charlottetown for over thirty years, passed from the scene Friday morning with the inauguration of a motor vehicle delivery service.

Two major factors made the change inevitable, Mr. C. M. Cox, president and general manager of the company said yesterday. "It took a horse six months or more to learn a delivery route, and the milk delivery requirements have extended beyond the confines of the city as we knew it in the early days". Another factor considered is the crowded streets as a result of increased motor vehicle traffic. Five new motor vehicles, painted white, and yellow will replace the four horses and two trucks used by the company.

Mr. Cox recalled Aug. 14, 1924 as their first day in business, with pasteurized milk for all as their objective. There were forty milk vendors' teams on the city streets that day, and with prospective customers skeptical about even opposed to pasteurized milk, sales by the two men on the Pure Milk Co. team totalled thirty quarts. "Only three doctors in the city approved pasteurized milk, and these were identified with the Anti-tuberculosis and Red Cross Societies, Dr. W.J.P. MacMillan is the sole survivor of the trio," Mr. Cox said.

An epidemic of typhoid fever in Montreal brought the situation to a head throughout Canada. An influential paper in that city accused the Health Department of being lax in permitting contaminated milk to be sold in the city. The newspaper won the lawsuit which followed and the proof brought forward in the court case and a situation which rapidly increased the use of pasteurized milk. The brand names "Garden City" are now familiar to those who appreciate the food values of milk, butter, cheddar cheese, ice cream etc.

Farmers within a ten-mile radius of the city deliver milk daily at the plant, with the milk going to Keppoch and Union Road farmers who have been patrons since the opening day. Standard milk is brought in by 26 patrons and 150 deliver cream for churning. Constant inspection by the Department of Health is routine throughout the plant which is kept up to high standards of cleanliness as a matter of course. In looking after the plant, Mr. Walter Cox, plant supervisor traced the course of the milk from the time it enters the receiving door, when it is weighed and poured into the first vat until it is bottled and ready for capping. "It is not hands off it is actually not seen through the entire process," Mr. Cox said.

Several of the employees have been with the Company for many years under the president and general manager, Mr. C.M. Cox, with Mr. Walter J. Cox as vice president and plant supervisor and Lucy B. Cox as secretary-treasurer.

Packing-house Workers Laud Appointment Of Labor Deputy

The United Packing-house Workers, Local 282, held their annual banquet at the Community Center on Saturday evening with a large membership in attendance. The president of the Union, Mr. Clifford Murray, chaired the meeting. Four guest speakers addressed the meeting. Mr. Herbert Hill, general personal manager for Canada Packers, Toronto, who was introduced by local plant superintendent, Joseph Molloy, emphasized the necessity of purchasing a good product on the market as at reasonable a price as possible. He also dealt with the good relationship existing between the company and the union, and the growing strength of both.

Brig. W.W. Reid, whose selection as Deputy Minister of Welfare and Labor was highly praised by both the union president and the Labor Council president, spoke of the relationship between management and labor and the necessity of co-operation from both. Mr. Alex MacLean, president of the Charlottetown and District Labor Council, pointed out the need for the organization of working people on the Island in his address.

The president thanked the ladies of the C.W.L. for the supper which they served, the entertainment committee, and all those who in any way helped in making the banquet a success. While the floor was being cleared, the Gallant Family entertained, after which Don Messer and his Islanders supplied music for a dance.

Hungarian Reds Take Another Step To Stamp Out Stalinism

By ENDRE MARTON
BUDAPEST (AP) — Hungarians Communist party took another big step Sunday toward liquidating the remnants of Stalinism by announcing that former premier Imre Nagy has been restored to party membership.

Nagy was ousted from the membership in April, 1955, and expelled from the Communist party seven months later on motions by Matyas Rakosi, the old Stalinist who himself was deposed from the party leadership last July 18.

Rakosi had accused Nagy of rightist deviationism. At the outset of his term as premier July 4, 1953 Nagy announced a program to increase production of food and other consumer goods to raise the Hungarian standard of living.

This "new look," de-paralysed heavy industry, paralleled a similar movement promoted within the Soviet Union during the premiership of Georgi M. Malenkov. Nagy fell soon after Malenkov resigned with a confession of errors Feb. 8, 1955.

Since the de-Stalinization campaign started from Moscow last February there has been a great revision against Stalinism in Hungary. That was climaxed this week by the honorary reburial of numerous victims of the Stalin-

Rakosi era purges and by the arrest of some leading figures who took part in their prosecution and torture.

Saturday the government announced the arrest of Lt.-Gen. Mihaly Farkas, former defence minister, and his secret policeman son, Vladimir Farkas, who helped in the investigation between 1949 and 1950 of such prominent communists as former foreign secretary Laszlo Rajk and former interior minister Janos Kadar. Both Rajk and Kadar have been "rehabilitated," Rajk posthumously.

The exhumed bodies of five generals, now described as "innocently convicted and executed," were solemnly reburied Saturday in graves of honor at Budapest's Farkasret cemetery.

Nagy, now 59, has become a symbol of everything opposing Stalinism. Some expect him eventually to return to high party councils—perhaps even to the premiership—if the trend toward liberalization continues.

New Discovery In Multiple Sclerosis

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Washington University scientists Saturday reported the discovery of the exact site multiple sclerosis hits in attacking the body.

The scientists termed their pinpointing "the most important advance in the fight against multiple sclerosis in more than 125 years."

Multiple sclerosis afflicts the brain and spinal cord, often leading to paralysis.

Dr. Sarah A. Luse, assistant professor of pathology at Washington University, said she confirmed the disease attacks the glial cells of which myelin, a fatty tissue, is a part.

Dr. Luse said that previously it was thought that the disease caused the myelin to degenerate. She said she established through use of an electron microscope that it was the glial cells which degenerated.
