ELLEN'S DIARY

James Says: Think I Smell Snow In The Rain

"It's good" one from a distance commented with a chuckle this evening settling down on invitation in the old armchair "to get away from TV, for a spell. Now mind," he said, "I'm not belittling it—it has its place nowadays, but when I have to take an entire night of its entertainment when I'm wishing to chat, well, it's just too much to take!" "I couldn't agree more about anything," James observed with a smile.

"It's the usual evening fare at home" the visitor continued. "And the other night I thought to slip away from it for a 'katey and a bit of a talk. So I went back along the fields to the X's."

I owed him a little for some work he had done for me, and I sort of like to get things like that off my mind in the old year, so to start the new one on a clean sheet as it were. It's a home I always liked to visit. They're both good talkers and it's easy to while an evening away."

"I know" James nodded. "That is the way I like to spend an evening—in good conversation. And yes, take a trip to the stable" he grinned boyishly "to look at the stock."

"Just so," our visitor agreed. "And enjoy a pleasant evening. But what did she do? I wasn't in a half-hour before she turned on their machine to hear a favorite program of theirs, and it was a good thing we had settled the matter of business at the outset, because afterwards there wasn't what I'd consider a sensible word exchanged! As a matter of fact they were so interested in it, I thought they seemed actually relieved when I got up to go."

"Yes," James offered "there's little conversation in the evenings any more. And it's too bad, isn't it? I reckon we older ones were born to the wrong age!... I wonder how his beef-cattle are doing? He always grows some good ones, doesn't he?"

"I can't say" the other farmer replied "we didn't get to the stables! They looked well through the summer."

"It will soon be time to get everything rounded up to the barns" James commented. "It's just cool enough for them out tonight if they have no shelter. We do keep the cows and younger ones in overnight."

"I was considering taking ours in this evening, but they have an open shed where they can shelter... Got many pigs this fall?"

"Oh a few" James said. He Marian Academy Girls' Choir as they sang appropriate hymns.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a street-length dress of brocaded white satin, fashioned on princess lines with long sleeves tapering to points over the hands. Her shoulder length veil was held in place by a headdress in pillbox style, and she carried a white prayer book with satin streamers adorned with rosebuds. Her only ornaments were a pearl necklace and earrings, gifts of the groom.

Miss Delima Poirier, niece of the bride, as maid of honor, was gowned in yellow taffeta with matching headdress and she carried a nosegay of mauve mums.

Following the ceremony, breakfast was served to the bridal party at Summerlea Restaurant. In the afternoon they motored to Charlottetown to visit with relatives and friends. A reception for sixty-five guests was held at 6 o'clock at Mulberry Lodge.

The bride's table, with its attractive arrangement of autumn flowers and lighted tapers, was centered with a three tier wedding cake, topped with miniature bride and groom. Mrs. Ernest Arsenault, twin sister of the bride, was in charge of the guest book.

A happy coincidence was that this day marked the birthday of the twin sisters.
