conditions

In some conditions the gain from the use of Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil is rapid. For this reason we put up a 50c. size, which is enough for an ordinary cough or cold or useful as a trial for babies and children.

In other conditions gain must be slow, sometimes almost imperceptible, health can't be built up in a day. For this Scott's Emulsion must be taken as nourishment, food rather than medicine, food prepared for tired and weak digestions.

CATS AS BAROMETERS

SHE HAS MANY INFALLIBLE WAYS OF FORECASTING THE WEATHER.

Watch Her Yourself and See—Out-of-the-Way Superstitions About Her In all Countries—The Cat on Noah's Ark.

Pussy has always had the reputation of being weatherwise. There have been those who assert that she is not only a weather prophet, but that she has a paw in the making of the winds that blow and the rain that falls on the just and unjust with strict impartiality. Should the family cat be with her back to the fire, look out for squalls, especially if you step on her tail. Should she wash herself calmly and smoothly, you may venture out without your umbrella, but should tabby lick herself against the grain or wash her face over her left ear, your goloshes, mackintosh and umbrella will be necessary. As a household barometer the cat is worth her meat and milk, not to mention her usefulness as a rat and mouse hunter. Sailor folks not only believe in pussy's well-known abilities to foretell the weather, but they are persuaded she has something to do with the making of it. As a rule they very much prefer rats on board ship, but having for any reason a feline passenger, they are very careful to give her the best of treatment. If somebody is foolish enough to wish to raise a blow, all that is necessary is to throw a cat overboard. There is a sailor's proverb to the effect that a cat will not die in water, and, while swimming around, her paws disturb the surface, hence the name cat's paws for little ripples. In the same way a large flurry is called "cat's skin," while a popular name for a stormy northwest wind in some parts of the world is a "cat's nose." Belief in pussy's control of the weather secures her extra consideration on wash days in Germany. Should it rain when the house-mother has a large washing on the line it is an infallible sign that she has illtreated or neglected the cat, and the animal has a spite against her. The Dutch girls have a harmless superstition that a rainy wedding day is the result of the bride's having been so absorbed in the wedding preparations that she has forgotten to feed the cat. In the Tyrol they say that girls who are fond of cats marry early. Perhaps all the girls there are devoted to cats; they all seem to be wives and mothers at Juliet's age. Some people cannot abide cats. Such a one, it is said, particularly if he has allowed his dislike to take the practical form of the midnight flying bootjack, will surely be carried to his grave in a howling storm. Such is pussy's revenge. Perhaps this instinctive hatred which often follows pussy even in these regenerate days, when cats' rights are protected by the majesty of the law in collars and the S. P. C. A., may be a heritage of the mediæval times when the devil was said to prowl about at night in the guise of a black cat. To this day a superstitious horror attaches to a black cat, and many people believe that bad luck will follow if a harmless black pussy happens to cross their path In Germany if you dream of a black cat at Christmas it is an omen of some alarming illness. There are all sorts of superstitions about the medical value of cats. Three drops of a black cat's blood was believed to be a cure for croup. It is quite possible that a lingering faith in this cure may be found in the remoter districts of Pennsylvania, settled by the Dutch. Black cats are there said to cure epilepsy, but it is not specified how the cats shall be applied—whether raw, boiled, sliced or whole. There is a comparatively unexplored mine of folk-lore about cats in Scotland. There they used to cure erysipelas by cutting off half a cat's ear and allowing the blood from the wound to drop on the diseased part. When a cow or other animal was taken ill one effective cure was to make a double yoke of straw and put the head of the cat through one side and that of the diseased animal through the other. What the immediate result was may easily be imagined by anyone who has seen the average frightened pussy struggling and scratching to free herself from the unwelcome bonds. When a Scottish family moves the house cat must be taken along and thrown into the new abode before any member of the family will enter. It is believed that if any disease or curse has been left in the house it will fall on the cat and thus save the family. In Ireland, on the contrary, the cat must on no account be taken to the new house. It will be most unlucky for the family to take her along, especially if they have to cross water. This may have something to do with the fact that immigrants never bring cats with them, though they may sometimes bring dogs. May has always been considered an unlucky month for cats. A cat born in May will be inclined to melancholy and much addicted to catching snakes and bringing them into the house, says an old book on the subject. If the cat sneezes put her out. Should she sneeze thrice in the house the whole family will be taken down with the influenza. Speaking about sneezes, there's a legend to the effect that we owe pussy to a sneeze. It seems that cats were not among the animals taken on board the ark. Noah having got well out to sea discovered that mice were playing the dickens with things, especially in the grain bin. A little more and there would be no Johnny cake for breakfast. In this extremity Noah prayed for relief, and behold, the lion sneezed and forth from his nostrils was discharged a cat, who set to work at once and drove every mouse into a hole. The hole habit they contracted on the ark has remained with the mouse family ever since. If this legend seems a bit too tough for digestion, just take a look at pussy's whiskers. They will show you her relation to the king of the beasts.

SKIN DISEASES!

One Remedy Which has Never Failed—Tried and Tested Ointment.

Because other alleged remedies for piles, scrofula, eczematic eruptions, scald head, chafing, black heads, salt rheum and skin diseases generally have proved useless, don't condemn Dr. Chase's Ointment. It has never been known to fail. For instance, Nelson Simmons, Meyersburg, Ont., writes:

"I used Dr. Chase's Ointment for Itching Piles, and can recommend it highly. Since using it I have had perfect freedom from the disease."

Peter Vanallen, L'Amable, Que., had the eczema for three years. He tried three doctors, but received no benefit. One box of Dr. Chase's Ointment and three boxes of Dr. Chase's Pills cured him completely. Large scales covered his legs and body, but the Ointment soon removed them. He will swear to these facts.

Chase's Ointment may be had from any dealer or from the manufacturers Edmanson, Bates & Co., 45 Lombard street, Toronto. Price 60 cents.

Mother's greatest remedy for coughs, colds, bronchicial and lung affections is Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. The medicinal taste is wholly disguised making it pleasant to take. Large bottle 25 cents.

CARE OF THE HAIR.

A Course of Treatment That May Give Beneficial Results.

It is not necessarily a sign of incipient baldness or premature age when a woman's hair, in the spring of the year, begins to fall out with amazing rapidity. This is an alarming manifestation, but one is moulting, changing the heavy winter suit for a lighter spring covering, and the quantity and quality of the new growth depend very much on the discreet and careful treatment given one's head at this critical juncture. Deluging with more or less trustworthy tonics and panicky trips to the hair specialist are not of so much avail as simple home remedies, and all along in these days, when the sap is rising in the trees, sensible women clip their tresses once in every fifteen days. They merely trim the edges, with a pair of very sharp scissors, and then singe the raw ends over a candle flame. This has exactly the same effect as pruning a hedge. It forces a fuller growth on the scalp.

Another word to the wise. In spring wash your hair at least once every fortnight and don't wash it before going to bed, for hair must dry rapidly and in the light. It is not only healthy to shampoo the head frequently, but at this time of the year nothing so stimulates the sprouting strands.

Wash your head in a warm bath and use either castile or sulphur soap. If you don't care to use a soap, the next most cleansing process—and invigorating, too—is to beat the yoke of an egg and pour it over the dry scalp. With your finger tips rub this in, and then plunge your head and tresses into the basin of tepid fluid, dashed with one teaspoonful of cloudy ammonia or borax. Directly the water grows discolored, a fresh bath must be drawn and a basin of the clean fluid used, until the last one is quite cold and the scalp is quite free of sticky egg or soap suds. After wringing out the bulk of hair a couple of big Turkish towels, if used hot from hanging before a fire, will all but completely dry the head.

Hair washed in ammonia, borax, or even with soap, though left light and shiny from the effect of the egg, is apt to fluff and fuzz as though every strand had been separately through hot tongs. To allay this a little cocoa oil or any pure grease ought to be rubbed into the scalp and a vigorous brushing put in train. Excessive dryness is indeed a peculiarity of many American women's hair, the result of our climate and rather second class digestions, and to correct this a steady cocoa oil or grease treatment ought to be kept up for two or three months at a time, applying a very little of the emollient once in six or seven days and brushing it out in the length of hair.

It is absolutely only by regular matutinal grooming that dandruff can be kept down and that the gloss and color of hair is retained after the vital juices of early youth are ceasing to flow. It requires two brushes to do this business well; one meant only for the scalp, and this one must be a rubber affair. It is a new invention, the rubber brush. Back, handle and bristles are all of rubber, pliable indeed but sternly aggressive, for the bristles get right down to first principles and stir the dandruff from its hitherto inaccessible strongholds. Moreover, the rubber brush is delightfully clean, for after use every morning it can be washed under the faucet and laid white and dry back on the dressing table. The second brush ought to be a conventional, long handled, stout bristled affair, to use for stroking the length of the hair, where the rubber one will not go and where the daily accumulation of dust, lint, straws and threads is a matter shocking and astonishing to a dainty woman.

What with this careful brushing and washing anyone's spring crop of hair can be induced to come forth in unusual luxuriance and beauty of quality, but for the women who have long ignored the simple cleanly precautions for preserving their hair and are in danger of having soon to thatch their crowns with borrowed tresses, a more rigid course of treatment must be followed. Clip skimpy, fading, splitting hair once a week and every morning fill a basin with clear cold water and treat the head to a plunge bath. Dry out quickly and brush in a little oil, ever so little, not more than a couple of drops per morning. Provided the oil is pure any sort will do, and for as many hours as possible wear the hair hanging loose or very lightly done up with tucking combs,

How Cheese Straws are Made.

To make cheese straws, put half a pound of sifted flour in a mixing bowl. Make a hollow in the center and in it put four ounces of butter, two ounces of cheese, an egg, a pinch of red pepper, and one gill of milk, added slowly. Mix all well together. Roll out the paste till it is about one-eighth of an inch thick; cut it into strips one-quarter of an inch wide and six inches long, and place in a moderate oven until colored a light brown. Serve very hot.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Prudent.

"I hope, Jennie, that you have given the matter serious consideration," said the lady to a servant girl who had "given notice" because she was to be married "that day two weeks." "Oh, I have, ma'am," was the earnest reply. "I've been to two fortune-tellers and a clairvoyant, and looked in a sign-book, and dreamed on a lock of his hair, and been to one of those asterrologers, and to a meedjum, and they all tell me to go ahead, ma'am. I ain't one to marry reckless-like, ma'am."—Tid-Bits.

Hardly.

"I guess I know what I saw with my own eyes," said the cross-eyed man. "You wouldn't call that unbiased testimony, would you?" asked the other man.

WHY CONTEMPLATE SUICIDE.

It is like tempting Providence for consumptives to ignore the remarkable remedy known as Miller's Emulsion of Norwegian Cod Liver Oil. For any person to die of consumption without trying this remarkable flesh and blood maker, after knowing of its existence, is suicide pure and simple. All that the consumptive patient needs is new blood with which to battle against the destructive forces of the disease. Miller's Emulsion provides new blood in abundance. It is a combination of Norwegian oil and hypophosphites of lime and soda—a triumph of science. Miller's Emulsion is the great nerve strengthener and blood maker, and cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Scrofula and all Lung affections. In big bottles, 50c and $1, at all drug stores.

"As tight as Dick's hatband" originated in the days of Richard Cromwell, son of the great Oliver, who, in the humorous parlance of the time, found the crown so tight that he could not put it on his head.

"Tell that to the marines" indicates the contempt which, even to the present day, professional sailors feel and express for the soldiers who form a portion of the complement on board of a man-of-war.

ODDS AND ENDS.

"To knock the spots out of anything" is an allusion to the traditional skill of western cowboys and famous rifle shots who would shoot the spots out of a card held between the fingers of a friend.

FORCE OF HABITS.

London People have Become used to the Great Specific Remedy.

LONDON, May 11.—The despatch from Detroit with reference to the cure from Bright's disease and blood poison of Mr. Langley, of this city, by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills has recalled the wonderful facts of the case to the citizens, among whom Mr. Langley is well known. It has reminded them that Mrs. Langley among others also made an equally wonderful recovery. The use of the pills, however, has become so universal here and there has been so many instances in which they have been used with beneficial results that a similar case would hardly excite as much interest now as it did then, when the medicine was less known.

"To throw up the sponge" is borrowed from the prize ring, it formerly being the custom, when a prize fighter had been worsted, for the seconds to throw up the sponge used for wiping him off.

As Old As Antiquity.

Either by acquired taint or heredity those old foes Scrofula and Consumption, must be faced generation after generation but you may meet them with the odds in your favor by the help of Scott's Emulsion.

Stop not unthinking, every friend you meet, to spin your wordy fabric in the street, while you are emptying your colloquial pack, the fiend Lumbago jumps upon your back.

Completely Knocked Out.

"I was so much run down I had to give up work, and I felt as if life was not worth living," writes Wm. W. Thompson, Zephyr Ont. "I took Scott's Sarsaparilla and am now feeling as I did years ago." Scott's Sarsaprilla tones up the entire system, purifies the blood, and eradicates rheumatic and scrofulous poison. Ask for Scott's and get it.

"Do at Rome as Romans do" is credited to no less an authority than St. Augustine, who advised a convert doubtful about the propriety of some customs observed at Rome, to do as other people did.

Kind Words from the Fred Victor Mission Bible Class.

On behalf of the Fred Victor Mission Bible Class I wish to express our gratitude to you for the box of Chase's Ointment which you supplied in aid of our charitable work to the infant child of Mrs. Brownrig, 162 River street. Ten days ago the child was awfully afflicted with scald head, the face being literally one scab from forehead to chin, and in that brief time a complete cure has been effected. Surely your gift was worth more than its weight in gold.

According to late advices from Constantinople, serious disturbances have taken place at Aksheh between the Kurds and the Armenians who are connected with the work of constructing the railway between Aksheh and Konishf in Asia Minor but no details of the rioting have yet been received. The number of arrests of Armenians in Constantinople has recently been largely increased.

"To My Life's End."

Old age brings many aches and pains which must be looked after if health is to be maintained. This depends more than anything else on the kidneys. "I am 85 years old," writes A. Duffin, farmer, Aultsville, Ont., "and have had kidney trouble five years. My son advised Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I obtained immediate relief. I shall use them to my life's end." You will find Chase's Pills equally effective for that lame back,

The term "blue stocking" is as old as the year 1400, at which date in Venice a society of literary ladies and gentlemen was organized, the members of which as a distinguishing badge wore blue stockings.

The Weather for Colds.

This is the time when colds are in the fashion—everybody who is anybody, has one, if not himself there's one in the family. For no complaint under the sun are there more remedies than for a cold in the head, but of the thousands Chase's Catarrh Cure is the best. "In twelve hours I was cured of a bad cold in the head by Chase's Cure," writes Miss Dwyer, Alliston, Ont. 25c. of all druggists, with blower free.

DINNER WAS GOOD, BUT COSTLY.

An Urchin Who Thought His Benefactor Was Cheated.

The people in the lunchroom of the Astor House were treated to an amusing scene yesterday by a ragged urchin and a whole-hearted citizen from the west, who was looking after him. The diners learned from the westerner's conversation that he had arrived in Jersey City and the little fellow had carried his gripsack. The man had been drinking, and the little fellow was so badly scared that he hardly knew what to do. He had confided to the westerner that he was hungry, and the man had told him to come in and get something to eat. He followed his benefactor inside and timidly crawled up on one of the high stools. The man from the west stood up at the bar and drank frequent potations, making comments upon the boy's appetite as he ate his meal.

The little fellow looked at the well-dressed man and then glanced at his own ragged jacket. He jerked his hat off awkwardly and tried to put it in his pocket. Failing in this, he finally compromised, after much fumbling, by tucking it away somewhere within the mysterious confines of his ragged shirt. Then he looked at his grimy hands and shoved them deep into his pockets. He watched with owl-like gravity the white-aproned attendant place the glistening plates and shining knife and fork in front of him. Finally a bowl of steaming soup was placed in front of him, and the sight of it thawed his reserve. He made an onslaught that made it disappear rapidly. All the time the big man chuckled in high glee, and kept saying:

"Go on, little chap; you eat all yer want. I like to see a youngster like ye eat all he wants."

The urchin grinned. Then a plate of chops was placed in front of him. He grabbed one by the bone and in the twinkling of an eye had gulped down all the meat on it. The other went the same way. When he had finished he wiped his hand across his mouth and fished the butt of a cigar from the pocket of his coat. He gravely watched his benefactor take the check and pay it. When he saw the amount he said disgustedly:—

"Say, youse," pointing to the cashier, "any mug kin get a feed like dat down on West street fer fifteen cents."

Then he fished a match out of another pocket, and taking a proffered dime from the western man, said, nonchalantly:

"Tank ye, boss. Dat was a bang-up feed—even if it did cost a plunk."—New York Tribune.

With their usual lack of a good subject for conversation, a group of women were discussing lately what death they would prefer to die One preferred drowning, another heart disease, a third strangling One who poses as very clinging and soulful said, with a Beardsleyesque languish that she thought she'd "like to be kissed to death"

The remark was repeated to Mrs Craigie, who was immediately extremely curious to see the woman who said it One night at the theater Mrs Craigie's hostess said, "There, in the second box, is the woman who wanted to be kissed to death What do you think of her?"

"That woman!" exclaimed John Oliver "I should think she'd have trouble to find an executioner"

Altogether Different.

"I don't know how I'm going to make out," said the agricultural statesman who had been retired; "I'll have to depend on the old farm for a living now, and I'm blest if I feel any certainty about making it day"

"But you used to make your constituents very proud of you by showing off what you knew about farming," said his wife encouragingly
