MR. AND MRS. IVAN HUNTER - DUVAR

Young Couple Pledge Vows In Ceremony At Saint Paul's

The wedding took place at St. Paul's Anglican Church in Charlottetown on Saturday, May 19, of Ivan Ernest Hunter-Duvar, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hunter-Duvar and Margaret Joanne Rodd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace E. Rodd.

The church was decorated for the occasion with baskets of white gladioli and on the altar were bouquets of white and yellow mums.

The ceremony was performed by the rector, Archdeacon J. T. Ibbott and the organist was George S. Thompson, FRCO, ARCM. The church choir sang for the processional "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden" and for the recessional "O Perfect Love." During the signing of the register, Miss Carol MacLean sang "Love" by Van Dyke.

The bride given in marriage by her father wore an original gown in pure silk french bouquet taffeta, styled with a curved neckline appliqued with re-embroidered chantilly lace. The slightly dropped waistline was accented by a very full skirt with unpressed pleats fanning into a chapel train in back. The gown had long lily-point sleeves. Her bouffant veil of hand-rolled french silk illusion was held in place by a rose of french bouquet taffeta outlined with seed pearls. She wore a single strand of cultured pearls, a gift from the groom. Her all-white bouquet was of sweetheart roses and stephanotis entwined with ivy.

Miss Sandra Jane Rodd, as maid of honor, and Miss Andrea Hunter-Duvar, bridesmaid were identical dresses of aquamarine silk organza over taffeta. The dresses were fashioned with a curved neckline and short sleeves and featured a plain bodice and rippled skirts. They wore matching headdresses and shoes and white kid gloves. Their bouquets were of soft yellow shasta daisies.

Mr. Peter Millish of Fredericton, N.B. was the best man and the ushers were Mr. David Rodd, Mr. Douglas Spencer of Sydney, and Mr. William Nelson of Halifax.

Mrs. Rodd chose for her daughter's wedding a costume of light navy crepe. The sheath dress was lace trimmed and the matching coat had elbow length sleeves. Her hat was a bevy of wild roses in silk organza and her corsage was of sweetheart roses in a wild rose shade. Mrs. Rodd's other accessories were chosen to compliment her ensemble.

Mrs. Hunter-Duvar wore a sheath dress of nylon sheer over floral print in shades of blue and green. Her dress had a matching jacket and she wore a petal hat in the same shades. Her corsage was of deep pink carnations.

The reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents at Highfield. The floral arrangements were white and pink gladioli and white and yellow mums. The table was centered with a three-tier wedding cake encircled with ivy and white gladioli blooms. Garlands of ivy and white florets decorated the table and entwined the silver candelabra.

Miss Norma Hunter-Duvar was in charge of the guest book and Mr. Jack Anderson proposed the toast to the bride.

Serving at the reception were cousins and friends of the bride: Miss Elizabeth Anderson, Miss Carol MacLean, Miss Judy MacLean, Miss Joan MacCallum, Miss Catherine Callbeck, Miss Margaret MacNeill, Miss Eileen Stavert, Miss Barbara Clark, Miss Maureen Forbes and Miss Betsy Houston.

For a wedding trip to the New England States the bride wore a navy suit in french wool with matching accessories. Her hat was of white stitched silk with navy coin dots and her corsage was of pink feathered carnations.

The bride attended Prince of Wales College, Edzehill School for Girls and Mount Allison University. The groom attended Prince of Wales College, Mount Allison University and recently graduated from the Nova Scotia Technical School with his bachelor of electrical engineering degree.

Mr. Hunter-Duvar will be employed with the Bell Telephone Company in Montreal, where the young couple will reside.

MARY HAWORTH

New Bride Is Jealous Of Hubby's Old Flame

Dear Mary Haworth: My husband and I were married two months ago, after three years of going together.

My problem is his sister-in-law. Before we met he had an affair with her; they were really in love. This all took place on the west coast. Now she has returned to her husband (his brother) and they have moved back here.

My husband says he has no feeling for her any more, but some times I wonder if he compares me to her, unfavorably. Around him she flirts outrageously. She is real cute, and has a perfect figure, with which I cannot compete. I am anemic and so shriveled up that I look terrible in everything.

We live on a farm and haven't a car; so it is necessary for somebody to drive out and get us on weekends and she always does. She always wears the same tight clothes and begins every sentence with my husband's name; it's "Johnny" this and "Johnny" that.

The other weekend her little boy walked up to my husband and said, "You don't stay with my mommy any more." Has her husband been rehashing the past with her, and the boy overheard it? Or has something been going on recently?

I love my husband very much and know for sure that he loves me, but I wonder if he wishes I were more like her? Don't hold back what you really think. And will you please list some fattening foods?—E.D.

Dear E.D.: Evidently you are full of jealous misgivings about your sister-in-law's influence on your husband. You are greatly in need of first - hand counselling help from a wise confidante — someone with whom you might trustfully discuss your worries in detail, to determine whether they are justified, and how to ease them in any case.

You paint a very unattractive image of yourself as compared to the other woman, but I doubt that you see yourself as others do. If you were as poisonous to look at as you seem to think, your husband probably would not have loved and married you. If he preferred her style to yours, he would have shopped around until he found a new love who resembled her.

Very possibly you are a gentle, fragile, appealing looking girl with a flowerlike delicacy of figure, complexion and manner that contrasts favorably with her kewpie-curves.

Your mention of the fact that she always wears tight clothes around your husband reminds me of famous dress designer Valentina's quip, when proclaiming the elegance of easy fitting garb. Said she: "After all, do you want to look like a lady or a sausage?" Your sister-in-law is somewhat the sausage type, I gather.

As for what to do about your perturbation, in my judgment you must have professional psychological instruction, to straighten out your sick thinking about the family skeleton in the closet.

Presumably you married your husband while knowing about his disorderly past relationship with his brother's wife. Which means that you led him to suppose that all was forgiven forgotten and put behind. Hence it is unfair to him, as well as harmful to your health, to be brooding about their suspected hungover sentiments. This is a neurotic drift that should be treated and brought under control.

I won't say that you don't have a problem. In truth I think you've married into a problem situation. The question is: are you going to make the best, or the worst, of it? With expert counselling help, you can learn to appreciate present opportunities and build for the future in a spirit of hope, which is the way to live victoriously.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Darkness Gathers And Night Spreads Shadows

The darkness gathers now. Night is spreading it shadows over all: gentling the hilltops, filling the valley with a moonless dark. Indeed there is at present no sign of a star, but, instead, that dim cloudiness of sky which would indicate rain. Now and then, flashes of lightning brighten the darkness and we note the rumbles of thunder which follow... And households gather in. Farmers will come, as have ours, from the cropping fields, resting now the machines that all week have been on the land. Children too will have gathered in from work and play, happy, we think, to come to that dear haven that is Home.

What a sanctuary it is, be it humble or imposing, for as we see it, a home needs neither great lines nor furnishings to make it complete. Where affection and respect keep, where a roof shelters and a hearthfire glows, where a table can be spread, and loved steps young and older come in over the threshold, that is a Home.

And "Home" the philosophers agree is the foundation of the world. "If there were fifty space platforms revolving around this planet" the recent Royal Bank of Canada monthly letter reminds us "the human story would still be told in terms of a man, and a woman, and children, in the home. Family life underlies everything else about man. The family is still, in its essence, what it was in the Golden Age: a little state of its own, governed by the mild laws of reason, benevolence and love."

"The family gives its members their earliest and completest experience of social security. It is bound up with all the great crises of life, emotional and economic. It is the only possible basis, upon which a society, of responsible human beings has ever found it practicable to prosper in the present, and build for the future."

Alex, our visitor in this evening's dusk, yawned and rubbed his eyes, and turned away from his play.

"I think I'll go home now" he offered.

"Why?" we queried, curious to know what had prompted the thought.

"I can't say why" he replied gravely. "I just want to go home."

"It is because Mother and Dad are there?"

He nodded. "And everybody" he smiled.

Home! How much of its happiness depends on the housewife and mother.

"All day I did the little things, The little things that do not show:
I brought the kindling for the fire
I set the candles in a row,
I filled a bowl with marigolds.
The shallow bowl you love the
