The "Jet-Set" Is Keynote Of Fall Fashions

MONTREAL (CP) — Individually was the keynote of a silver jubilee fashion show here in which no single style, color or fur dominated the collection. Furs by Richer and fashions from Fraid's collection illustrated the various aspects of fur fashion in 1962. The show marked the 25th anniversary of both houses.

Color ran rampant, although black and muted greys and browns were especially popular. Five versions of the "little overcoat" suit in Jewel-tone of red, red, blue, green and purple were shown.

The overcoat suit features a straight three-quarter "crotch-ed" jacket. Most were shown with high boots and in Russian broadtail or Alaska seal, were individual and different in silhouette. They included a cropped greatcoat, a high waisted coat with a very full skirt, a slim, straight coat, and a little boy coat in seal.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Students Must Not Be Discouraged By Failure

"Find us a wail" we said wistfully this morning, noting that a strange epidemic and stillness had now come to the yards. No birds dipped, on a swift wing, to tease Tabby, as she came along the path from the barnyard to breakfast. The quiet company of young and older, perched not so long ago, had now disappeared.

"The beaches are lonely places," one reported recently, having returned from a drive which had been by some of those which summer-through, had been busy areas, full of color and life. "The winds keen, and the waves break on the shore with a hollow sound" she said.

And hearing, we recalled that the shore at home, that during young vacations had been a warm, desired spot, where someone speculated in the family mer-tune, on the golden sands, would suddenly, on the eve of the autumn's "For" with evident concern, "what will they do when the frosts come, a d snow?"

So the emptiness of a season was at our door this morning, that which denotes the heart and warmth of the summer is gone. Gone with the blithe, busy dwellers from along eave and rafter that so often had encouraged us to imitate their industry, news deserted-left now cold, a d bare.

"How long do you suppose it will be before they get here? Do you think she intended them to come in the autumn's "For" with evident concern, "what will they do when the frosts come, a d snow?"
