The first was first noticed by Mr. Madsen's son, John, who saw smoke rising from a pile of hay directly behind the pump house. Fanned by a high wind, flames soon enveloped the pump house and quickly spread to two adjacent barns. Lost also was a loft full of hay, and another of straw, together with ten pigs. Neighbors quickly gathered but were unable to do anything as the pump house was a mass of flames. However, they were able to save the farm machinery and other livestock. Hard Work Pays Off For Maritime Potato Champion

AMHERST, N. S., Nov. 3.—(Special)—For the fourth consecutive year an Island farmer has been named Maritime potato king. The Maritime Winter Fair announced today that Ira J. C. MacMillan, farmer and potato grower of Cardigan, P.E.I., is the 1951 winner of the potato grand championship and the special cash prize of $125 donated by Canadian Industries Ltd. This 31-year-old farmer who operates a 210-acre farm with 60 acres under cultivation, grew 12 acres of potatoes this year compared with the usual seven acres in past years. While he and his late father, John MacMillan, who passed away eight years ago, have grown Green Mountains for the past 20 years, his crop this year was half-and-half Green Mountains and Sebago. This year's championship Green Mountains were grown on sod plowed last fall in the course of the five-year rotation which has been followed for many years on this farm. Potatoes, oats, hay, and pasture. He applies 5-10-13 fertilizer to his potatoes at the rate of 2,200 lbs. per acre. All manure used in the potato crop is applied to the oat crop at the rate of 1 1/2 tons per acre. Sprayed Industriously Mr. MacMillan raised eleven hogs this year but his cattle herd has been temporarily reduced to a few head. He does most of his farm work with three horses, hiring a tractor to assist with plowing and discing. He made a thorough job of spraying this year, putting on seven sprays including a double application during the most severe blight season. The year of 1951 has been a memorable one for Mr. and Mrs. MacMillan, the former Miss Teresa McInnis of Armadale, for they not only won the Maritime potato crown, but when Mr. MacMillan came to Amherst today to receive his special prize it was his first trip to the mainland. The first time he had ever left his native Province.

"Tempest - Tost" Is Acid Satire Of Drama Group

(By the Canadian Press) As a playwright, director and actor, Robertson Davies is on familiar ground when he chooses a Canadian Little Theatre group as the subject of his first novel. The story of "Tempest-Tost" (Clarke Irwin), tells of the professional tribulations and romantic entanglements of a small-town group as it rehearses and performs "The Tempest." Mindful of his acid appraisal of some of the characters involved, Mr. Davies hastens to assure the reader that the Salterton Little Theatre of the book is a purely imaginary group. Mr. Davies, editor of the Peterborough Examiner and creator of Samuel Marchbanks, whose crochety observations on human affairs are the subject of two of his earlier books, has allowed much of the Marchbanks personality to permeate "Tempest-Tost." The men in the case receive much more favorable treatment from Mr. Davies than the women. Apart from a precocious 13-year-old who manufactures champagne cider and a theatrical director who "thinks like a man," the author's cross-section of small-town womanhood tends to confirm Mr. Marchbanks in his bachelor state. In particular, the snobbish, petty head of the theatrical group and a domineering invalid mother might lead a man of the Marchbanks turn of mind to wonder why the sex was ever invented. Between contending with the wiles of the sex and wrestling painfully with the finer points of Shakespeare, most of the male characters have a rather unhappy time of it. They seek refuge, according to their varying temperaments, in gardening, alcohol or attempted suicide. None of their methods meets with much success. Devotees of the amateur theatre will enjoy the deadly seriousness with which the group dedicates itself to the Bard of Avon, and the outrageous acrobatic stunts some of them seek to bring into the production. Most of the humor is at the expense of the theatrical innovators and Mr. Davies may find it difficult to convince some sections of his public that he is not paying off a few old scores, despite his assurance that no resemblance to living persons is intended.

The minutes of the special meeting held in September were read by Miss Jean MacKenzie. Florence Murray called the roll, which was responded to by a verse of Scripture. Sinclair MacKenzie, who is home on a visit from Ontario, was a welcome visitor. The treasurer, Mack MacLeod, received the offering. Others taking part were Mrs. Rev. A. C. Fraser, Elaine and Mary MacPherson, Dot MacKenzie, Lawrence VanBuskirk, Alley Murray, Wilfred MacDonald, Clifford, Regie, John, Donald, and Lincoln MacPherson, Billy and Jack MacKenzie. At the close of the meeting a short period was spent in games.
