

THE DAILY EXAMINER. DECEMBER 5, 1887.

New York's Opinion. At the meeting of the chamber of commerce of New York on the first inst., the special committee appointed to consider the subject of commercial union with Canada...

A Wrong Repaired. With reference to the correspondence, published on the 23rd November, over the signature of W. N. Riggs and Charles Hyndman, concerning "four active members of the Orient Division," we learn that investigation has established the fact that the alleged liquor drinking occurred six months before the Orient Division was organized...

The Home Market. The Halifax Herald quotes a large part of the Hon. D. Ferguson's last letter to THE EXAMINER, and adds: "Mr. Ferguson also brings out another important point, that the exports of P. E. Island to the other provinces now embraced in the Dominion of Canada were, during the last six years of Reciprocity, only $66,787 less than the exports to the United States; while during the six following the abrogation of the treaty they were more than double as much as those to the States. This shows (1) that even before the Island entered the Dominion, the Dominion was by all odds her best customer; and (2) that she got better prices for her products in the sister provinces during 1887-72 than she got from the Yankees in the halcyon days of Reciprocity. These facts are worth acres of "hapdoodle" from the pens of Goldwin Smith and other Wiman bombsters."

The Montreal Star reports that boys from English charitable institutions are doing well in Canada. There are many of these boys in Quebec, scattered among the farmers; there are also a great number in Ontario; and now we see that the boys from the London Home, who were some time ago sent to Manitoba, are also giving satisfaction to their employers. This is pleasing news, and it proves that boys, trained to habits of obedience in charitable homes in England, can be sent to Canada with good prospects for their advancement. Under proper safeguards for the boys and some assurance for their employers, there should be room for many of these boys in the rural districts of Canada. We have room for a good many in this Province.

The ordinary postal revenue of the United States Post Office Department for the last fiscal year amounted to $48,118,273.94. The revenue from money order business was $819,335.45, making a total revenue of $48,838,609.39. The total expenditures for the year, including actual and estimated liabilities, amounted to $53,183,252, showing a deficit in the revenue of $4,265,642.61.

The eastern end of the Cape Breton Railway has been taken possession of by the Dominion Government, and the work of construction will now be vigorously prosecuted.

Parnell and "The Times." A London correspondent of the Montreal Star writes: "I had a talk with a leading member of the Nationalist party on the subject of the Times setting spies on Mr. Parnell, and finding him living incognito in the village of Brockley, in Kent, under the name of Preston. He told me that Mr. Parnell is in a delicate state of health, extremely thin and pale. He had a perfect right to seek repose while Parliament was not sitting. He was not surprised at the conduct of the Times, but said that the Parnellites were determined to retaliate, and a watch will be set on the private movements of the Times writers. He fancied that this will prove rather awkward. He thought there must be a good number of journalists who would shrink from such an ordeal. The Times, he says, has only discovered a mare's nest. Mr. Parnell is leading a quiet, respectable life. The spying is condemned with remarkable unanimity. Even the Observer and the World are indignant. The latter says that Mr. Parnell is a gentleman, and is entitled to be treated as such."

The Times in England. POLITICAL, AGRICULTURAL AND COMMERCIAL.—A SHORT, BREEZY LETTER.

(Special Correspondence of The Examiner.) Yes, I reached this centre of English Imperialism with expected punctuality, and after a good look around, got to work with my quill. You shall have your share, too. In politics there is a kind of lull, as the House is not sitting, but the sad Irish question is the subject of all public meetings. The Tory Government does not yet seem convinced of its inability to rule by coercion; with free speech and free press it is impossible to treat the country like a Poland or a Lombardy, and if these safety valves are closed on the green island, an outcry will be made in Great Britain. A solid majority of one hundred votes in the Lower House, and the active sympathy of publicans and parsons throughout England form a strong bulwark. The necessity for the Liberals out of office securing the hearty support of Dissenters to restore them to office again has compelled the adoption of Disestablishment of the Church, at least in Wales, as part of the recognized platform. Agricultural distress has weakened the power of the landlords, which for the most part has been used in combination with the clergy to hinder every advance, social or political. Popular education is supplying the people with a weapon they never had before. One striking evidence of the advance made in public sentiment is the visit of a body representing 233 members of the House of Commons, to President Cleveland, to suggest the adoption of arbitration between the United States and Great Britain.

The transition state of commerce, owing, I believe, mainly to the development of railways, rapid steamship communication, telegraph and telephone, together with that wonderful institution the Parcel Post, has so interfered with the ordinary course of business that retail traders have a difficulty in making both ends meet, and even large concerns feel perplexed. As for the farmers, want of capital, and worse still want of all scientific knowledge of their occupation has brought them to the verge of bankruptcy. The wage earning class, if in work, are better off than ever, every article of food and dress are one third to one half the price, at which they stood twenty-five or thirty years ago; but if the bread winner is out of employment, the pressure is severe.

CAVERSHAM. Hartington in Dublin. THE STORY OF HIS RECEPTION FROM A NATIONALIST POINT OF VIEW.

(By cable to the New York Tribune.) DUBLIN, November 29.—With the aid of the most formidable muster of police ever witnessed in Dublin the unionists have managed to hold their meeting to-night in Leinster Hall. Lord Hartington was received on his arrival at Kingstown early this morning with hoots, hisses and groans, and this evening when he arrived at the Leinster hall in company with Goschen he found it surrounded by an immense crowd singing "God Save Ireland" in chorus. Even inside the hall, notwithstanding all the precautions, the nationalists had gained a footing and pointed the addresses of the speakers with cries of "Mitchellstown" and cheers for Parnell, Gladstone, Home Rule and William O'Brien. If the police in plain clothes who bristled in every corner had been withdrawn there would have been a considerable gap left in the hall. Backstagers, Crown lawyers, castle officials, expectant office seekers, and boys from Trinity College made up the bulk of the gathering. The Unionists have been trying to make great capital out of the Catholic element in the display and to emphasize it they got two Catholics to act as the hosts of Lord Hartington and Mr. Goschen. One of these gentlemen, James Talbot Power, was so unwilling to occupy this invidious position that the Castle went the length of bringing direct influence to bear to induce him to invite the distinguished Marquis. Mr. Power, is a whiskey distiller, and between his customers (the trade) on one hand, and his social patrons (the Unionists) on the other, he was anxious not to come to the ground so that his frame of mind in dispensing hospitality to Lord Hartington and thereby offending the Nationalist publicans who kept his distillery going, can hardly be one of the happiest. The fact about the Catholic Unionists is this, that there were fifty altogether of them on the reception committee, and the quality of the Catholicity of this may be judged from the fact the day they select to feast their visitors is one of the fast days of the Catholic church. Of the fifty twenty were lawyers, all briefless and esurient, or else of the third rank, with the exception of Solicitor General Peter O'Brien, familiarly known as "Pether the Packer." Amongst the remainder is the landlord, David Sherlock, who became notorious last winter in connection with an old widow and her daughter, whose turkeys he seized in satisfaction for an arrear of rent. Both widow and daughter died a fortnight afterward, and the coroner's jury returned a verdict of death from starvation owing to their being deprived of their sole means of subsistence—a flock of turkey seized by their landlord, David Sherlock. During the meeting the multitude outside kept singing "God Save Ireland" until the army of policemen at length found it necessary to press them back from the building and draw a cordon around it, occupying every lane and avenue in the neighborhood. The meeting was finally held within the triple line of armed men, and was about as representative of Dublin sentiment as a conclave of the privy council in a back room of the castle.
