

Troubles of Women.

Upon the whole, it is a dreadful bother to be a woman, and do the thing up in good shape.

In the first place, you've got to look well, or else you're nobody. A man may be homely, and still be popular. Whiskers cover up most of the face, and, if he has wrinkles on his forehead, they may speak of his cares and thoughtful disposition, and tell each other that his wrinkles are lines of thought.

Lines of thought, indeed, when, in all probability, his forehead is wrinkled by the habit he has got of scowling at his wife when the coffee is not strong enough.

A woman must always be in good order. Her hair must be frizzed and banged as fashion demands, and she must powder if she has a shining skin; and she must manage to look sweet, no matter how sour she feels; and she must hang just so, and her laces must always be spotted and her boot buttons all in place, and finger nails clean; and she must not whistle, nor climb fences, nor stone cats, nor swear when she's mad.

She can't go out alone, because ladies must be protected. She can't go anywhere when it rains, because her hair won't stay crimped and she'll get mud on her petticoats and things. She can't be a Freemason, because she would tell their secrets and everybody would know all about the goat and griddon. She can't smoke, because it wouldn't be feminine. She can't go courting, because it is unwomanly.

But she must get married before she is twenty-five, or everybody will feel wronged. People will sigh over her, and wonder why it is that men "don't seem to take," and all the old maids and widows will smile significantly.

It is a terrible thing to be an old maid—terrible! Everybody knows it is, and the women who are married to drunken husbands, and who quarrel six days out of seven, will grow in agony over the single woman, and call her "that poor old maid."

A woman must marry rich, or she doesn't marry "well." To marry well is the end and aim of a woman's existence, judging from the view which people in general take of the matter.

It is everybody's business whom a woman marries. The whole neighborhood put their heads together and talk over the pros and cons, and decide whether she is good enough for him. And they criticize the shade of her hair, and relate anecdotes of how lazy her grandfather was, and how her Aunt Sally used to sell beans and butter milk.

A woman must wear No 2 boots on No. 3 feet, and she must manage to dress well on seventy-five cents a week; and she must be vain, and she must be kind to the poor, and go regularly to the sewing society, and slave in church fairs.

She must be a good cook, and she must be able to "do up" her husband's shirts so that the heathen Chinese washerman would groan with envy, and gnash his teeth with unly passion, at sight of him.

She must always have the masculine buttons in the family sewed on so that they never will come off while in use, and she must keep the family hosiery so that nobody would mistrust that there were toes inside the stockings when they are on.

She must hold herself in continual readiness to find everything her husband has lost—a man never knows where anything is. He will put his boots carefully away on the parlor sofa, and when he has hunted for them half an hour, he will appear to his wife with a countenance like that of an avenging angel, and demand to know "What in thunder she has done with his boots?"

She must shut all the doors after her lord and master, and likewise the bureau drawers, for a married man never was known to shut a drawer. It would be as unnatural as for a hen to go in swimming for recreation.

She must go to bed first in cold weather, so as to get the bed warmed. Her husband, if he be a wise man, never asks her to do this, but he sits up to finish a piece in the paper, and waits while she gets the sheets to a comfortable temperature.

Ah, there are a great many tricks in the trade of what is called "living together."

The Great French Remedy, Dr. LeDuc's Periodical Pills.

SPECIAL DIRECTIONS.—To remove obstructions and restore the Menstrual Functions in sudden suppression from cold or mental shock, the patient should take a warm bath or foot bath once daily, and take for the next three or four days, three pills morning and evening. In severe cases where there is much headache, disturbance of the stomach, pain in the back, &c., the dose may be increased to three or four pills three times daily. Except in cases of acute suppression where the symptoms are urgent and severe, the remedy should not be taken until one week of the time the natural flow should come on, and should, if necessary, be continued for at least two weeks. Should occasion require, the same treatment should be pursued before and at the time that the next monthly flow should appear. By carefully removing these directions the most obstinate cases invariably yield.
