Notes and Comments.

—A few weeks ago the Opposition papers industriously reported that Hon. Mr. Chapleau was out in support of Unrestricted Reciprocity! Now these same papers are industriously propagating the news that "there are dissensions in the Cabinet," the "two Sir Johns" struggling to commit the Government to Reciprocity, while Sir Hector and Chapleau are opposed to a change of policy! Liars need to have good memories.

—The Chicago Tribune, October, 1889, referring to Mr. Wiman's anticipation of his indirect scheme to bring about Annexation, said: "Such is the hopeful outlook as stated by Mr. Wiman. The obstacle which stands in its way is the Tory Government of Canada. It may be relied upon to make a bitter fight against commercial union, basing its contest upon the grounds that commercial union will inevitably be followed by political union, in which contention it is unquestionably correct."

—The Toronto Week thinks the operations of Unrestricted Reciprocity would so improve the position of the Canadian people that they would be easily able to pay the fourteen million direct tax the operation of the policy would necessitate. But, asks the Montreal Gazette, wherein would the improvements consist? It is in the United States and not in Canada we hear of conventions to consider what shall be done with deserted farms. Would not the tendency be to bring the conditions in the two countries to a level?

The following from the New York Herald of late date is very significant: "If the Canadian Dominion were an independent Government, as is Mexico, the United States would, long ago, have brought Canada to see that her doings must come to an end if she wished to be considered a respectable member of the family of nations. As it is, Canada goes on like a spoiled cub of a school-boy, relying on the protection of the big brother across the sea and the prevailing wish in the United States to get along in peace and harmony with the people of the United Kingdom."

—The Presbyterian Witness of Halifax is advocating the Northumberland Straits Tunnel. It says: "Senator Howland and others have been urging a subway, a railway under the Straits at its narrowest part—possibly a tunnel, but at any rate a subway which will be independent of frost, ice, hurricanes, and all changes of the seasons. The subway would be of more value to the Dominion than the ship railway—than indeed several enterprises we might name; and we hope Senator Howland, and the public men of the Island will continue to press the claims of their people on the Dominion. We are glad to see Principal Grant advocating the subway in a spirited and generous paper in the Week."

The tunnel project is steadily gaining influential friends. —The Empire remarks that the surplus of nearly four million dollars in the current finances of Canada for the past year seems still to distress the opposition, which believes in Sir Richard Cartwright and his chronic deficits. The people are asked not to consider it as really a surplus, because, instead of being locked up in a bank, it has been expended on permanent improvements to develop the country. An individual or firm would think a surplus of current income over current expenditure very satisfactory, and no less reason for congratulation because finding means for improvement of the property and development of the business. It is preferred by the people of Canada to Sir Richard Cartwright's plan of cutting off expenditure on public improvements, running the country into a deficit in current finances, and then borrowing money in London to meet his ordinary yearly expenses.

—With its customary courtesy and regard for the truth, the Globe says that "the Empire continues to scream against reciprocity." The Empire replies: "We cannot continue to scream or write against reciprocity, because we have never done either. We have opposed that unconditional surrender of our commercial independence to the United States, involving an attack upon Canadian industries, hostility to the mother country and the adoption of direct taxation, which the Grits are pleased to call reciprocity. And, among other reasons, we have opposed this scheme adopted by Mr. Wiman because it seemed calculated to make the Washington authorities unwilling to consider the reasonable reciprocity offered by our Conservative administration. However, they seemed to have learned the truth at Washington that the Grits do not speak for Canada, and could not carry out their scheme."

—Though the letter of Mr. Thompson advocating the education of the people of Canada to adopt direct taxation was refused admission to its columns by the Globe, the Grit organ has evidently taken his hint. It is now constantly recurring to the subject. In a labored attack upon our present commercial policy it utters the lament: "It so happens, too, that direct taxation has always been a formidable bogey." If by being a "bogey" it means that the very idea of direct taxation is cordially detested by the people of Canada, it is undoubtedly correct. The people, as the Empire well remarks, will not have it, however sedulously they may be educated, and they will reject the Grit policy of continental free trade, which, among many other evils, involves this hated direct taxation. In fact, the organ does not seem hopeful, wailing that the people "cannot be made to see" that "indirect taxation is by far the most wasteful way of collecting public money." It is all in vain to puff direct taxation as excellent in theory. The people know and feel that in practice—which is the point to be considered—it is most objectionable, incapable of fair adjustment, and most oppressive to those who can least bear the burden. Direct taxation is one of the most unpopular features in the wholly objectionable grit policy. None of these attempts at education by the opposition organs can save it from rejection by the electors.

Death of an Islander.

[British-American Citizen, Boston, 24th.]

Donald McKinnon was born in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, Nov. 3, 1816. He died in Boston Nov. 10, 1890. He received his education at the academy in his native town, and during twelve years of his early life he was an instructor of the young. At the age of twenty-eight he married Elizabeth Jardine, who still survives him. The latter part of his life was devoted to agricultural pursuits, which he followed till his removal to Boston two years ago. He was a man of scholarly tastes, a ready writer and a brilliant conversationalist. He wrote much for the public press, mainly upon politics and social topics. Genial, courteous and unselfish, he made many warm friends, who found in his sterling honesty and a finching morality a constant inspiration to that which is best in manhood. He possessed shining ability without conceit. Indeed, his modesty bordered upon self-distrust. He was both strong and gentle,—strong in the rugged virtues of an honest manhood, and yet in the ideal sense of the word a gentleman; quiet, unobtrusive, yet delicately solicitous for the welfare of others. He was not heard so much as felt. While never demonstrative his thoughtfulness and gentleness descended upon the hearts of his friends as the dew falls upon the grass, refreshing it and silently beading each leaf with a gem. He was a close student of the Bible, and though not a member of any church, he was in purpose and spirit a true follower of Jesus Christ. He retained his faculties to the end, and died in hope of a bright future. A wife mourns the loss of a devoted husband. Six sons and three daughters rise up and call him blessed, and a host of friends and relatives will say, A good man has gone to his reward.

Branch Railway to Belfast.

A meeting of the inhabitants of Caledonia, Rona, Murray Harbor Road, and vicinities, was held at the Caledonia Schoolhouse, on Monday, the 26th day of January, inst., for the purpose of calling a meeting to discuss the necessity of the immediate construction of a branch railway through Belfast and Murray Harbor districts.

It was unanimously agreed that a meeting for the above purpose should be held at the Caledonia Schoolhouse, on Thursday, the 5th day of February next, at 3 o'clock, p. m.

Representatives from both the Local and Dominion Governments are respectfully solicited to attend and express their views on the matter.

Piusville Notes.

Our school is improving rapidly under the able management of Stephen A. Brennan.

Quite an enjoyable evening was spent at the residence of Mr. Joseph F. Gallant, on the 13th inst., the occasion of which was a Basket Social by the ladies of Piusville. The dancing was in every respect creditable, especially one, whose smartness on the floor attracted the attention of all present. The dancing was kept up till about 12 o'clock, after which the crowd dispersed, well pleased with the evening's enjoyment.

A debating society has been organized by the young men of Piusville. We congratulate Mr. John J. Gallant for being the leader of the Club.

Mr. S. T. Gallant, our merchant, is doing a fair business at Piusville Station. We wish him success in his undertaking.

REMNANTS! REMNANTS!—Cheap sale of dress remnants from two yards to a full dress length selling out at bargains. Prints and gingham 6 cents a yard; ends winter cloths at nearly half price. A few ladies' felt hats selling off at half price. Great bargains in ladies' jackets and dolmans. Don't forget the great bargain store—J. B. Macdonald.

WHO ARE SERVANTS?—Not long ago, says the New York Tribune, a Rhode Island gentleman died, directing in his will that the sum of $12,000 be equally divided among his servants. And when the division was made the woman who washed the windows of the house was left out, on the ground that she did not technically come under the designation of a servant. Of course she has brought suit to find out why this is thus, and the lawyers may be expected to make a pretty fight over the point whether the washing of a window is a menial act de jure or only a menial act de facto.

An exchange prints the statement that near Buena Vista, Col., there is a cave literally swarming with spiders of a curious species of great size, some of them having legs four inches long, and a body as large as a canary bird. It is said to have been discovered in 1879. It takes a credulous person to believe the story.
